British Receive Soviet Reply To Peace Plan

Call U.S. Ambassador To Discuss Situation

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today handed Britain its reply to a peace plan for Laos and an hour and a half U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn E. Thompson was called in to discuss the situation in the strategic Asian jungle kingdom.

There was no immediate indication of the Russian response to the British proposal, which reportedly urged a halt and an immediate cease - fire in Laos.

Khrushchev personally called in Thompson barely an hour after British Ambassador Sir Frank Roberts was handed the Soviet reply by a deputy foreign minister.

The Soviet premier and the American ambassador talked for an hour and a half.

ALL KEEP SILENT

Neither Thompson nor the British ambassador would give any indication of the details of their visits with the Russian premier except to say that Laos was the subject.

When asked for information, an American spokesman said only "for any information you should see the British."

The comment indicated that Khrushchev had given Thompson a reply to the note given earlier to Roberts.

It was Thompson's third long conversation with Khrushchev since President Kennedy took office in Washington and Khrushchev in the Kremlin and the other in an isolated dacha in Siberia outside Novosibirsk.

Roberts was called first to the Soviet foreign office at 10 a.m. Moscow time and handed the British reply to a peace proposal presented March 23 with the backing of the United Nations.

It called for an immediate cease-fire in Laos, revival of the three-power control commission (India, Canada, Poland) and a 14-nation Geneva conference in 1954 to supervise the Indochina truce, and convening of a 14-country conference—including Red China—to turn Laos into a neutral country.

The feverish political activity in the Moscow capital followed by one day the publication of a communique on this week's conference in the Warsaw pact powers led by Russia.

The eight-power Communist alliance in Europe was also attacked in the communique and the conference among those suffering from it. But the communique stopped over the bubbling crisis in the Indo - China kingdom and called West Germany the "chief source" of world tension.

The declaration was mild and prompted observers here to believe the Soviet Union had taken some steps toward meeting the British proposal for peace in Laos.

Snow and Rain Again Expected In Maritimes

HALIFAX (CP)—A mixture of snow and rain is expected to fall in the Maritimes late today, bringing more difficulty to areas still struggling to clear the wind-swirled drifts of an earlier storm.

Cape Breton Island, northern Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and the Magdalen Islands still are digging out from this week's two-day wind and snow assault.

The Magdalens—16 islands 100 miles south of P.E.I. in the Gulf of St. Lawrence—had the hardest hit. Winds up to 70 miles an hour lashed the islands Monday and Tuesday, churning up 30 - foot drifts. These made the islands' tiny airstrip unusable preventing planes from landing and 12,000 islanders are low on some types of food, particularly fresh meat and vegetables. But the food shortage is not of serious proportions.

On Prince Edward Island, declared in a state of emergency by the government Wednesday, a snowplows continued their fight against drifts as high as telephone poles. Many main highways were cleared, but most secondary roads probably will be blocked for another two days.

The CNR Ferry William Carson, which gives between them Sydney, N.S., and Port aux Basques, Nfld., broke free of its dock at Cape Breton Friday after being stuck for a week. The ferry made its way to Halifax, N.S., where it disembarked its 39 passengers.

Three Toronto Men Given 10-Year Terms

TORONTO (CP)—Three Toronto men who conspired to rob a Queen's Park bank were sentenced Thursday to a total of 30 years on various charges—but each will serve only 10 years because the sentences run concurrently.

David Vallant, 22, Anthony Hulett, 25, and Ronald Wade, 18, were each sentenced to 10 years on charges on conspiring to rob the Dufferin Park branch of the Toronto-Dominion Bank on an attempted robbery charge.

Hunter and Vallant received similar sentences for stealing an abortive hold-up at Wong's grocery Wednesday night and Hunter and Taylor were sentenced to 10 years each for the $35 robbery of Bernard Leak last Saturday.

THE WEATHER

TORONTO (CP) — Synopsis: A light fall of wet snow mixed with sleet is expected over Southern Ontario during the night as a storm centre moved up the Mississippi Valley. Farther north, skies were mainly cloudy with a few flurries. The storm centre is still intensifying and is expected to continue northeastward from south of Lake Erie.

Wet snow and drizzle will gradually end in southern areas during the day as the storm moves out. Easter Sunday should be partly cloudy, windy and cool as arctic air west of the storm slides southward into the province.

RED REBEL GROUPS CAPTURE LAOTIAN TOWN

Shatter Week-Old Near Cease-Fire

VIENTIANE (AP) — Communist rebel groups have taken the important Laotian government stronghold of Tha Thom, 85 miles northeast of the capital, in a major assault that shattered a week - old near cease-fire, Western sources said today.

These sources which were close to the fighting area, said large units of Vietminh troops from Communist North Vietnam were reported to have taken part in the siege which included heavy artillery shelling.

The Thom is just south of the Plain of Jars area where major Vietminh units are believed located and only 25 air miles from the Thailand border and the key government city of Thakhek.

Premier Boun Oum and his right - wing strongman, Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, flew south to investigate reports of serious fighting and intervention by Communist troops to say that military sources say these reports are highly exaggerated.

MAY CONSCRIPT

One government minister said a cabinet meeting will be held to discuss mobilization conscription.

The Communist assault on Tha Thom was the first big break in the general battle-front quiet since the SEATO meeting was opened in Bangkok Monday.

The major rebel assault at this time may be only a show of strength. But it could also be a kickoff to a major drive that would be aimed at reaching the Thailand border with Thailand to th. south.

This would have the effect of cutting Laos laterally in two —a move with more psychological and strategic significance because the nation is long largely cut by guerrilla units. Communist.

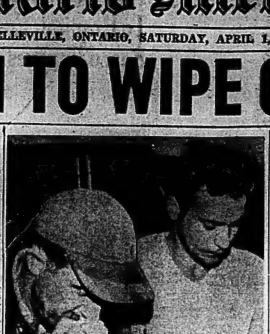
Meanwhile, the royal Laotian government indicated it would be willing to talk with Soviet arms shipments to the rebels for the time being to get a peace conference.

Informants said officials learned linking Laos with that the Russians stop immediately flying supplies to the pro-Communist Pathet Lao and lead to Moscow to insists on a halt to American aid to the Vientiane regime.

Prince Souvanna Phouma, Laos' neutralist premier minister, said Friday in London both Britain and the United States must stop sending military aid into Laos if peace is to be restored. Prince Souvanna is on a world tour, trying to drum up British and West Capitals alike his views on how Laos can be stabilized under a truce and neutralization.

Sources here said the problem of Laotian and Vietminh activities is considered too difficult to be effective. But the British Government of Prince Boun Oum is determined to carry on an effective inspection by Canadian, Polish and India observers on the International Control Commission.

Underdog Cantabs Defeat Oxford In Historic Thames Boat Race



LONDON (Reuters) — Underdog Cambridge beat Oxford today in the universities' 107th annual eight-oar shell race on a 4¼ -mile course on the Thames.

Cambridge won by 4¼ lengths in 19 minutes, 22 seconds with Harvard graduate Tony Rail at stroke leading the way to the victory.

Rowing behind the 22-year-old Cambridge stroke, who comes from Greenwich, Conn., was another Harvard man, Martin Cauldlin, 21, of Framingham, Mass.

Former West Point coxed John Sewall, 25, of Menlo, Calif., was at the No. 5 oar for Oxford.

In the previous 106 races, Cambridge won 56 times, and in 1946 set the 17-minute, 50-second record for the course from Putney to Mortlake. Oxford had won 47 times previously. A dead heat was run in 1877.

Christendom Awaits Dawn Of Glorious Easter Morn

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Christendom the world over waits in mounting reverence today for the dawn of its most joyous of days.

For Sunday is Easter Sunday, the day on which the crucified Christ arose from the tomb many centuries ago.

Appropriately, the dominant theme of the age-old church rites and colorful ceremonies set by His modern-day flock is the message He spread ages ago—peace.

In New York's Times Square, a group of 200 Quakers waits in vigil for peace, to be climaxed Sunday with an Easter sunrise service.

Similar sunrise services are to be held throughout the world Sunday as faithful volcano in Hawaii at St. Paul's Basilica in Rome, and at Jerusalem, where the ending of Christ's physical life gave Easter its beginning.

Across North America, millions are laying out their finery for the traditional Easter fashion parades. Millions, too, are preparing colorful eggs for the big Easter egg hunts.

The mood of worshippers was one of humble sorrow Friday, Good Friday.

In Jerusalem, throngs of pilgrims formed a solemn procession along the twisted cobblestone streets, as they retod the Way of the Cross, pausing at the 14 stations along it sanctified by their Lord.

They moved from the place of judgment where Christ was condemned by Pilate, across the city to the site of Calvary, and the tomb—at the Old Church of the Holy Sepulchre.

In Rome, also crowded with visitors from near and far, Pope John approached the Attacks on J. Birch Society Called Pro-communist Smear

WASHINGTON (AP)—A congressional attacks on the fervent rightist John Birch Society as part of a "pro - Communist smear." The congressman, representative Edgar W. Hiestand (Rep. Calif.) is a member of the society.

Despite Hiestand's description of the critics, criticism continued to mount against the society whose founder once said former president Eisenhower was "a dedicated, conscious agent of Communist conspiracy."

And a spokesman for the justice department said the Society's activities have become "a matter of concern to the justice department." He did not elaborate.

The society was founded in 1958 by Robert H. W. Welch Jr., a retired candy manufacturer in Massachusetts.

Welch proclaims the destruction of communism as one of his aims. The society takes its name from a Baptist missionary killed by Communists in China 10 days after the close of the Second World War.

1,000 GURKHA TROOPS FLYING INTO KATANGA

Tight Security Screen at Airport

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—One thousand Gurkha troops from India were taking off today in full battle dress for Katanga, where new military activity between Congolese armies is again pushing The Congo toward civil war.

A Vanguard of two planes, carrying about 150 soldiers with machine-guns, rifles and mortars, left Leopoldville's Ndjili airport with orders to land at Kamina, the large UN base in northwest Katanga.

The troop movements were carried on behind a tight security screen. The whole airport was sealed off to all except UN movement control staff, the gates were barred and soldiers patrolled the road leading to the terminal building.

WEAR HELMETS

Fifteen planes were lined up to transport the Gurkhas, wearing for the first time their UN blue helmets instead of their usual slouch hats. On board their uniforms was the famous Gurkha curved knife, symbolizing two famous battles fought by the regiment, one in France in the First World War, the other in Burma in the Second World War.

In both battles, the Gurkha historians relate, 1,000 Gurkhas held their position against bitter attack until only 10 were left alive.

UN officials at the airport and headquarters mail a tained silence about the plans for dilling the Gurkhas. But they arrive in Kamina, President Moise Tshombe of Katanga has declared publicly he will regard it as an act of war if the UN flies any Indian troops to Katanga.

UN commander Gen. Sean McKeown is temporarily detained to laugh a UN show of force with the 1,000 Gurkhas and Canadian troops of Manono in North Katanga.

CRUSH HOPES

By once again resorting to force, Tshombe's regime has modestly crushed hopes of a spirit of conciliation between the rival factions in The Congo.

The Indians have been gathering in Leopoldville for two weeks. A similar force flew from India to join the UN force. No reasons for their disposition have been announced.

Their numbers—4,700 in all—had snowed under a force brought forth strong protests from the Congolese government, which has accused UN troops of dumps over UN troops of other nationalities.

"We will never lay down our arms," said one Gurkha officer today. "We will die first."

MUST RECOGNIZE

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Pacific Railway Company must recognize a federal conciliation board set up in 1959 to settle a dispute between the company and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, Mr. Justice Parker of the Supreme Court of Ontario ruled Thursday. The dispute centres around the company's 1958 proposal to abolish 1,200 jobs by means of miles over which operating crews of ages must travel to complete a day's work.

Floods Subside in Iowa New Ones Start in South

NEW YORK (AP)—The ramparing Cedar River in Waterloo east Iowa receded today, but ing Friday raising fears in the South pushed rivers over their banks in that area for the second time in five weeks.

The Cedar, already responsible for millions of dollars in damage in Waterloo, crested more than six feet over flood stage in Cedar Rapids Friday and inched slowly back toward normal.

An estimated 5,000 persons had evacuated their homes in Cedar Rapids, mostly as a precautionary measure, but the levees and dikes held and water reached only about 30 homes in lowland areas.

Many of the thousands of volunteers who labored frantically since Monday to contain the river, early sandbags returned

Officials said the river should drop rapidly during the day.

Castro Cubans Closely Watched By U.S. Agents

Caroline, 3, Under Double-Alert Guard

120 bylaw LEAD carolina aprie

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Fidel Castro Cubans under surveillance in a reported plot to kidnap President Kennedy's daughter Caroline also are suspected of planning to wipe out the president's entire family, an informed source said today.

This source, who asked not to be named, said U.S. secret service agents have loaded the Cubans in the Palm Beach area and are keeping a close watch on them.

Meanwhile, three - year - old Caroline Kennedy is under what was called double-alert secret service security guard at the Atlantic shore home of her grandparents. The blonde youngster is vacationing here with the president and Mrs. Kennedy.

TIPPED ON PLOT

The secret service, it was learned, has been tipped that four Cuban plotters—described as "pro-Castro and anti-Kennedy"—recently returned to still the president, his wife and two children. A plan to kidnap Caroline as an alternative was also reported.

The source, who is an excellent authority said:

"We think we know who they are and how we are keeping them under surveillance.

"They have made no overt move and you can expect them to be pretty cagey under the circumstances. All of this public knowledge has complicated the possibility of an arrest."

UNDERWAY A WEEK

It was learned Friday afternoon that the secret service started an investigation of the reported kidnap plot about a week ago.

Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, acknowledged that a secret service, inquiry is underway but would not say whether it concerned Caroline. Salinger said the president was "very concerned" and "seriously—had no knowledge of any investigation until he learned about it late Friday as a result of news dispatches.

All a press secretary, Salinger minimized the inquiry. "This is routine," he said, "gets information from time to time on the president and his family and this is simply a routine investigation. There is not an investigation under way."

IT'S ROUTINE

The press secretary also told reporters:

"I am trying to caution you that there is no specific information about a big investigation. This is routine case being handled routinely."

Secret service chief U. E. Baughman declined to discuss presidential party, said "I will not deny or confirm" the reports of such investigation.

But it was learned on excellent authority that Baughman had ordered the investigation about a week ago and regards it as a routine precaution.

Laboratory Technicians Training Course Will Be Established at Hospital

Establishment of a laboratory technicians' training program to help alleviate the serious shortage of such technicians both locally and throughout Ontario, has been approved for Belleville General Hospital.

Setting up of the training program was approved at the March meeting of the hospital board of governors held this week. Authorization was given for a recruitment program to be initiated.

Currently the hospital is providing technician training on an apprenticeship basis, but the demand for technicians has prompted the hospital board to initiate a training program independent of the apprenticeship system.

Approval to set the training course up would be a full time instructor and possibly an assistant, a teaching laboratory and classroom.

ONE-YEAR COURSE

The board was informed by Superintendent Werner Daschael said the proposed training program would be a one-year course with up to ten students being accommodated.

Approval was given for an expenditure of $350 for minor structual changes necessary in the cardiology department to accommodate the new photography department.

The board also awarded a contract for the installation of a sprinkler system in non-fireproofed sections of the hospital. Cost of the work will be in the neighborhood of $33,000.

Decision to install the sprinkler system was made at a previous board meeting with contract approval being made this week.

Capacity-Filled Church Hears British Evangelist

Bridge Street United Church was aflost filled to capacity Thursday night when the visiting evangelist, Dr. Lambert, Tom Rees, stepped over here for one night to call all Christians to the foot of Christ's Cross "the only place salvation is to be found."

Estimates of the crowd ran between 800 and 1,100 and only a few pews in the main aisle gallery were vacant. Not one seat was available in the lower auditorium.

Mr. Rees, once an agnostic who through the influence of his brother became a lay evangelist, is leading 10 clergymen throughout the world in his four-month-long mission across Canada. Today he is in Peterborough.

Earlier Thursday, other members of the party addressed women in St. Thomas' Anglican Church and clergymen in the Parish House.

The Mission to Canada party was commissioned by the United, Anglican and Presbyterian churches and will visit across Canada the good news of a new life in Christ.

The effectiveness of Mr. Rees' message was assisted by the small but very stirring bass voice of Frank Boggs of Atlanta, Ga., and Tom Bribnig, member of the party and one of "North America's most famous religious vocalists."

Mr. Rees spoke for about an hour and never once lost the attention of his audience. The audience looked black when he lashed out with a reminder that man was sinful by nature. He was born with sin and he will die with sin. There is no escape. No one is sinless — except Christ Jesus. And in Him lies salvation.

If man is sinful by nature, does this mean that he is necessarily condemned. No, because 1961 years ago the Son of God died upon a cross at Calvary, one man paying the supreme price for all men's sins. But when God then looked His victory for evil three days later became a victory for God Himself, when He arose from the grave. He rose from the dead and today still lives, a constant reminder to all men to hear the Word of God as found in the Bible and find their salvation. But those who refuse to listen to the Word of God are condemned.

Mr. Rees called on every professed Christian within the sound of his voice to fling himself down at the foot of the cross, beg forgiveness and pray to God for the strength and guidance to follow along His way.

Proposed 60-Bed Addition To Hospital, Cost $900,000, Board Engages Architect

Engagement of an architect to draw plans for the proposed 60-bed addition to Belleville General Hospital, has been authorized by the hospital board of governors. Cost of the structure has been estimated at approximately $900,000.

Harold Ketcheson, chairman J. N. Yanover said yesterday the proposed addition would have three floors, two storeys for patients, and a basement for storage.

No services would be included in the new structure with plans being to extend services from the present hospital.

In this way, he said, costs would be kept to an absolute minimum but at the same time present service capacity would limit the extension to 60 beds.

ADD STOREYS

Provision would be made for adding extra storeys at a later date when and if the need for extra services will have to be provided.

Plans call for construction of the addition at the southwest corner of the present dietary department.

Fred A. Ketcheson, Moira Celebrates 90th Birthday

MOIRA (Staff)—This Hunterdon Township community honored one of its native sons here last night.

At a reception and social evening it paid natal tribute to Fred Allan Ketcheson who yesterday celebrated his 90th birthday.

Calls and hearty and smiling his appreciation, the guest of honor received a profusion of lovely pot of flowers and a handsome electric appliance. Upwards of 200 friends and relatives greeted Mr. Ketcheson at the function sponsored by the Women's Institute of the village.

Many evidences of good wishes and happy returns were received during the day and evening, with telegrams from parts of the district sent their greetings.

Mr. Ketcheson is a member of one of Hastings County's oldest families. He was born on a son of the late Samuel and Phoebe Ketcheson, early pioneers in the agricultural history of this district and township.

He was born on a fifty-acre farm in the native Moira. True to the traditions of the Ketcheson pioneers, he remained on the farm all his life. He was a farmer all his life.

Even now in the sunset years he takes a keen interest in the earth he loves. He operates a large garden, raising potatoes and other vegetables. This spring he expects to plant 'potatoes as usual.

Mr. Ketcheson never ventured into politics, preferring to give him birth. He was a very successful farmer, living first on the 50-acre side property he acquired when he married.

His roots were deep in agriculture. The milestone of life mentioned as "three-score and age" went by unnoticed by Mr. Ketcheson. He went to his daily task on his farm until he was 88 years of age. Then he was persuaded to "retired" to live in his present home in Moira village.

Mr. Ketcheson lives alone. He has lived by himself for the past ten years when Mrs. Ketcheson, the former Helen Peever, passed away.

The only child of the union, a daughter Lily, now Mrs. James Vanderwater, and her husband reside on a farm on the second concession of Huntingdon township.

Mentally alert, Mr. Ketcheson goes about his daily household duties as cheerfully as a young housewife. He does his own cooking and prepares his own meals. He is looking forward to spring when he can get out to work in his garden.

The Moira community is living argument for those who say abstinence produces longevity. Fred has never smoked nor drank intoxicating beverages.

He is a member of Moira United Church and was active in the work when a younger man. For a number of years he was a steward, then became a trustee. A short time ago he was honored by the church with an honorary membership.

Content with his life as a farmer, Mr. Ketcheson never aspired to municipal or political honors. His interests were centred in his work, his family and his farm.

Arrangements for last night's community tribute to Mr. Ketcheson were made by Messrs. Elmer Thompson and David Ainsley, Mrs. Wesley Farrell and Mrs. James Vanderwater.

Coroner's Jury Recommends Speed Limit Enforcement

A coroner's jury has called for rigid enforcement of a 20-m.p.h. speed limit on West College Street.

The recommendation was one of five added to its verdict of accidental drowning in the death of 5-year-old Terry McDonald.

The King George public school student was drowned February 23rd in a flood-swollen open city ditch at College and Lemoine Streets during torrential rains.

The inquest Thursday night was told Terry slipped from a board crosswalk into the flood and was trapped in a culvert beneath the intersection.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH

The jury's other recommendations called for regular inspection and maintenance of the crosswalk; installation of guardrails on all such crossings; protective coverings be installed at both ends of culverts at Lemoine and College and open ditch areas in the city be covered as soon as possible.

"I can't figure it out why the city should leave these open ditches like that," the boy's father, James McDonald, told the inquest.

He said he was enroute to pick up his son at the school lunch-break when the accident occurred. The class, he said, had been let out early that day. He arrived at the Lemoine-College intersection about three minutes after the accident.

Asked by crown attorney John Pringle if he was satisfied with the response by city authorities to the emergency, Mr. McDonald replied:

"I think they did their part as well as anybody could. There are no complaints on my part whatever."

Among other witnesses called were two of the young victim's classmates, Gordon, Wilkinson and Johnny St. Pierre. Neither of the six-year-olds were sworn.

Questioned briefly by Mr. Pringle, both boys said they saw Terry testing the depth of the flood-waters beneath the crosswalk with his foot.

City fireman Ralph Thompson, the first rescue worker at the scene with the city's emergency unit told of searching frantically at the culvert's opening for the boy.

He dashed to the opposite side of the intersection and found the boy's body trapped in a catch basin at the end of the culvert. The boy was placed in the mobile unit and rushed to hospital. Enroute, the unit stalled "only a matter of seconds" as it raced through street floods.

WEATHER CONDITIONS

City engineer Malcolm Turnbull described the weather conditions as abnormal the day of the accident. A combination of heavy rains and frost-hardened earth had caused flooding at various points in the city.

The ditch at Lemoine and College would be adequate under normal conditions, he said.

"Is it foreseeable risk to the pedestrian?" asked Mr. Pringle.

"I do not think so—under normal conditions," replied Mr. Turnbull.

Charging his jury Coroner Dr. John Stock suggested they make any recommendations they saw fit.

"In my opinion the coroner, coroner's juries can develop into a waste of time if they state perfunctory findings."

The jury took over 30 minutes to arrive at its formal verdict with the appended suggestions.

The coroner complimented the jurors after he had read the verdict.

"I think those are very good recommendations," said Dr. Stock, "and they will be passed on to the proper authorities for what action they see fit."

"GULLIVER TRAVELS TO TRENTON"

The genial manager of the Park Theatre, Tommy Mascaro (left), is seen handing three reels of "3 Worlds of Gulliver" to George Gulliver to start the shuttle service between The Park Theatre, Belleville, and the Century Theatre in Trenton.

A Bike-Riding Gulliver Travelled With Film Pal

The Gullivers broke a long standing world record for travel the other day.

Gulliver, the fabled giant who mosied all over the place had a lot of extra mileage added to his record by a live Gulliver riding the hurricane deck of a bicycle.

It all happened when an express company failed to deliver three reels of the film "The Three Worlds of Gulliver" current attraction at the Park Theatre.

By a stroke of luck the same film was being shown at the Century Theatre in Trenton. Manager Jerry St. Gelais of Trenton and Manager Tommy Mascaro got their heads together and through the kind co-operation of Mr. Gelais the missing reels of the film were loaned to the Belleville Theatre.

Enter the "live" Mr. Gulliver, George Henry by name, address this city, 106 Cannifton Road to be exact and his trusty two-wheel steed.

Then started a shuttle service between Trenton and Belleville that almost equalled the globe-trotting exercises of the film hero.

As the live Mr. Gulliver said "he didn't want the little people to get hurt" on the theatre pinning him to the sand and tying his hair down if they couldn't see the conclusion of this absorbing movie."

This may sound somewhat melodramatic in retrospect but no one was aware of the split second timing that was involved to keep both theatres on schedule.

George Gulliver played the fatest hero's role he had to for his namesake. It can be thought that he was aware of the fate that would befall him had not produced at the hands of Belleville Lilliputs. To put it in George's words, "this was the most exciting thing since he was born during an air-raid in Canterbury during the First World War".

The crisis is now over as the missing film has arrived so the many admirers of Swift's classic satire can now see the movie version without worrying if he will be around at the finish.

Tommy Mascaro of the Park may have a few less hairs, (which he can ill afford to lose) but he proved once again the old slogan "The Show Must Go On." It did in spades.

Tenders Will Be Called April 26 To Rebuild Section Madoc Road

Tenders for the reconstruction of 4.5 miles of the Hastings county road from Ivanhoe northerly will be called this April, it was announced today by Clarke T. Rollins, M.P.P. for Hastings East.

CLARKE ROLLINS M.P.P.

Mr. Rollins said he had received word from Highways Minister Fred Cass that the tenders for grading, drainage and granular base for the four and a half mile section of road would be called on April 26th with the contract award scheduled for May 31st.

The award date should permit the grader part of the contract to be completed within the 1961 construction season, Mr. Rollins noted.

First section of the Madoc-Foxboro county road to be rebuilt under the development road program was done several years ago. The section to be built this year is the first phase of a three-stage program which would see the road completely rebuilt from Madoc to Foxboro.

Under the provincial road development program, the province pays the cost of rebuilding with the county being responsible for the purchase of fencing on any new right of way required.

Today County Warden Harleigh A. Hamilton said that all properties required for the right of way widening would be in county hands prior to the date set for calling tenders.

He said all but 10 or 11 of the over 40 properties along the 4.5 mile stretch of road had now been purchased and that appropriation proceedings were being taken in the remainder.

The Saturday night-of-may will take in four houses, three of which are to be purchased outright and will be moved. At least one town is also scheduled for removal.

"It is sorry to tell families who have lived in a house for 30 years that they will have to move, but I think it will be all worked out in time," Mr. Hamilton said.

Grass, Brush Fires Keep Firemen Busy

Belleville's firefighters were kept busy throughout Good Friday fighting grass and brush fires in the district and city.

At 8:36 a.m. there was a grass fire at 161 University Street, followed by a similar fire at the property of C. Hall, R. R. 2, Belleville.

At 1:09 p.m. an alarm was answered at 170 Dufferin Ave., where a television set caught fire. At 2:22 a.m. a fire occurred at 411 West Dundas St., and five minutes later an alarm was received to put out a marsh fire behind Carmel School on the Fifth of Thurlow.

The balance of the afternoon saw two brush fires put out, one at the property of E. Frost on R. R. 1 Carrying Place at 2:51 p.m. and the other on the River Road east of Foxboro at 5:00 o'clock.

This morning at 10.20 o'clock a chimney fire was put out at 5 Centre Street. No damage occurred.

Fire Chief Gerald Vance advised this morning that local residents should realize that anyone burning rubbish or setting grass fires which get out of control and cause damage are to be held responsible for such damages under the Ontario Fire Marshal's Act.

Cancer Society Will Launch $20,000 Campaign Monday

The Belleville unit of the Canadian Cancer Society will open its month-long 1961 campaign Monday to raise $20,000 in the part in the world struggle against cancer, campaign chairman Clarence D. Fuzzen announced today.

The provincial objective is $1,550,000 and the national target is $3,207,000 — more is more than ever before sought in this area.

Mr. Fuzzen said that the reason the Society this year is seeking more money than ever before is because of the increasing tempo of research, public education and welfare services sponsored by the Society.

"A good deal of the money we collect in Belleville comes back to us in the form of help and comfort to our afflicted and assistance in educating the public", he said.

"But it is hard to be self-centered in such a humanitarian project as a world-wide effort to break the back of one of the most stubborn of human diseases. We all possess that fear someone who now has cancer or who had it, whether or not they were cured".

1960 Admissions To Hospital Said 9,672

Including live births, there was a total of 9,672 admissions at the Belleville General Hospital last year, according to the annual hospital report.

The months average for admissions was 806 with patients staying for an average of 10.4 days. The average rate of occupancy for the hospital last year was 107 per cent.

During the year doctors performed a total of 2,962 operations on in-patients.

There were 1,535 deliveries and 1,238 live births recorded. There were 64 deliveries by Caesarean section and no maternal deaths. Of the total births recorded 118 were pre-mature.

July was the most popular month for patients entering the hospital with a total of 804 admissions being recorded. The shorter month possibly had something to do with this but only 734 admissions were recorded in February of last year. Total patient days for the year numbers 95,613.

Business Slow On Market

Activity was slow on the market square today, although seven or eight district growers came to town hoping for some pre-Easter business. A chilly breeze teamed up with damp snow to prevent any folks from tarrying long on the market.

Prices and offerings remained unchanged. Maple syrup was still available at between $6 and $6.50 a gallon, while cakes of maple sugar were offered at between 25 cents and $1.

A few of the staple vegetables—onions and potatoes—were available among a handful of other vegetable varieties. Fruit was limited to only apples being in fair supply.

District farmers now are looking forward to planning this year's garden vegetables. They promised a wider selection of vegetables and fruits as the year progresses.

Professor Says Great Need For Change in Municipal Political Institution

TRENTON — Professor K. Grant Crawford of Queen's University, speaking at the Kiwanis Club's Civic Night here Thursday, said that there was a great need for some changes in the political institutions of the province, with particular reference to changes in municipal political institutions.

He said that people of today had adjusted themselves to rapid and increasing changes in travel, communications and in the manner of day-to-day living. In spite of this ability to conform and adjust to such changes, the average citizen is content to live under a system of government which has seen very little change in the past century. He said that the municipal educational and religious aspects of Canadian life were under the control of an earlier age, and that there was a great reluctance to change in the form and administration of these institutions.

Professor Crawford said that Ontario was rapidly changing from a rural institution to urban. Citizens in urban areas are making increased demands for more and better services. The municipalities, in turn, are making larger demands on the provincial government for assistance in providing these services. He said that the demands of the residents could only lead to higher taxation in the municipalities concerned and that the system whereby the municipality makes continuous demands upon the provincial government for assistance in the form of grants, led to a sort of "built-in irresponsibility" on the part of municipal councils. In the municipality itself, there is a tendency to penalize the resident who asks for improve his property by means of higher taxation, while those who do not make conditions are receiving benefits.

NEED TOWNSHIPS?

He raised the question of whether certain government forms are obsolete. He said he wondered if the Province any longer a justification for townships. Some townships, he said, have no resources and must call on the government for grants to carry out the administration of their affairs. On the other hand, he said, counties are "on their way up" and were becoming increasingly significant.

He said that the average citizen becomes confused with the number and complexity of municipal governing bodies, committees and so on. He said that a municipal council was often apt to sidetrack issues by passing them on to various committees. Since the municipal council is restricted in its powers, persons of capacity often feel that they would be frustrated if they were to serve on council and therefore do not seek office. He said that municipalities needed to modernize their form of administration, but, in the final analysis, the ultimate responsibility for any change rested on the citizen. He said that the citizen must decide if he really wanted self-government and autonomy and decide if he was willing to pay for it. Instead of looking at the provincial government every time he needed a dollar.

In concluding his remarks, Professor Crawford said that Canadians couldn't expect to have autonomy at someone else's expense and that they were "building themselves up" if they thought they were ahead to accept government assistance for their municipality if the money raised by the municipality came out of their own pockets in the long run.

Professor Crawford was introduced by Frank C. W. Carry, who said that Professor Crawford was one of the two best-known authorities on municipal affairs in Canada.

Lt.-Gov. Al Weaver thanked Professor Crawford for his "interesting and provocative address."

The special civic night was under the sponsorship of Harry Foster, Kiwanis president. Norman Lewis explained the aims and ideals of the club and outlined the various service

THE GOLDEN YEARS

Here Are Pointers For People With an Eye Toward Retirement

By THOMAS COLLINS

For reasons I don't quite comprehend, more and more couples in their 40's and 50's are contacting me to ask how they can start preparing for retirement.

For such "youngsters" who read what I write, here is a seven-point questionnaire. It's not all-inclusive for all people, but touches the important bases.

1. You can't save enough money to retire on. Really — unless you're a genius or a taxchester. Say you can save $25 a week, or $1,300 a year. If you are now age 30 this frugality will give you $18,000 at 65. On a safe 4 per cent investment, this sum would bring you $720 a year or $60 a month. You could use about four times that much, which means saving $100 a week. How're you fixed?

2. Life insurance comes in many forms, and for many purposes. If you are shy of age 55 you probably bought your life insurance to protect your wife and children in case you should die. Since your children are now flying from the nest, have you thought of talking to your insurance company about converting it to something that's better serve your wife, and your retirement?

CHECK COMPANY POLICIES

3. The welfare age being what it is the best possible preparation the normal working person can make for retirement is to be on the payroll of a good company. The employee who can expect a pension income of $250 a month his his hands on the equivalent of $75,000. Have you checked into the retirement policies of your company?

4. Where you're living now, no matter where it is, may not be the best place yet invented for good and satisfying living. So if you are between the ages of 45 and 55, perhaps it would be a good idea for you to start investigating the magic of somewhere-else.

I told my bride these many moons ago that one day I would retire her in the pink grapefruit-country of the Rio Grande Valley. It seemed romantic then. But the years have granted me — and her — the wherewithall to go have a look. And we can take the grapefruit country, or leave it. Have you cracked a geography book since you left high school?

5. Your health, my young friends, is absolutely vital. Only this week I had lunch with a man of 61. He had worked like you-know-what for 30 years. And he had slain the dragon. His kids have cleared the Ivy League schools, his wife is wearing designer clothes, his accumulated money is paying enough in dividends for him to drink champagne in the sunshine for the rest of his days.

But his stomach is missing. Tubes and wires and bobby pins are holding him together, and no matter how sweet the nectar, he's drinking it in pain, and looking over his shoulder at the Reaper. Have you started six-month checkups with your doctor yet?

DEVELOP NEW INTERESTS

6. People who retire in 1961 are finding that a new interest in life, which can replace the interest of the job, is a more acute need than money. Stamps and gardening won't do it. A mission, a new job that pays money, an active role in politics — both things as this will. Are you developing any major interest outside your job? And in conjunction with the spouse you're going to have to spend your eight-hour day with?

7. Friends. People preparing for retirement lay great stones on what they call "friends." They sell their homes or don't because of them. They move halfway across the continent because of them. But once we pass the age where a pal will go into an alley to help us out in a fist fight, friends are usually an illusion. An evening of sitting, Christmas cards, visits when you're sick, and exchange of party invitations — these can be had from ordinary people almost anywhere, and a month after you meet them. Before you bank too much on the role your "friends" will play in your retirement, ask yourself just what you think they will do for you that any other gracious people won't. And do you really think anybody is going to loan you money after you retire?

There are responsible people who disagree with me on this, but I take a dim view of people in their 60s storing away nuts for a winter that is 20 years in the future. I didn't invent inflation or the welfare age, I don't necessarily approve of them. But I recognize that they are here.

FIGURET

"How old are my cousins?" asked Andy, handing back the Little photo. "It'll be fun to meet them."

His father smiled. "Figure it out yourself," he replied. "There are 4 multiplied together make a dozen dozen, but they add up to the number of our house."

The boy grabbed a piece of paper and jotted down some figures. "Are two of them twins?" he asked. "I'll have to know."

"That's a reasonable question," his father commented. "They're not, however."

So what were those ages?

Arts and Crafts Club Stages Art Exhibit at Corby Library

The Belleville Arts and Crafts Club, children's group, in co-operation with the Belleville committee opened an art exhibition in the auditorium of the Corby Public Library on Friday.

The exhibition elements of design from the Art institute of Ontario and arranged by Robert J. Wolfe, and the museum of Modern Art, of New York City, is a new experiment in the field of visual education.

On 24 panels drawings and color reproductions tell the story of design, texture and color. Explanations from the field of painting, sculpture, architecture and photography and children's group that working in these fields one must be aware of these fundamental details.

Along with this exhibition is a display of children's work; the picture of which was chosen from ten submitted by each child, by Paavo Airola, prominent Canadian artist and teacher, who teaches the adult class at the Belleville Arts and Crafts Club.

Scenes from the Belleville area, as well as still life subjects, and portraits are among the work displayed by 50 children in the district.

Mrs. Dolly Caine is the instructor of the children's class.

Children in Rural Schools Have Advantage Is Claim

TORONTO (CP)—Children in rural schools "have an advantage over city school children," says Mrs. Laurence Fraser, who presides over the one - room Clover's School near Barrie, Ont.

"Country children are wonderful. They learn to go ahead with their school work on their own while their teacher is instructing another group in the same room."

They learn over-hear their teacher instructing more - advanced pupils and benefit from this.

"And in the schoolyard children of all ages play together. You can see a big boy turning a skipping rope for a little girl, and a little first grader playing ball with an eighth grader."

Mrs. Fraser, who drives the school bus and at one time was teaching all three of her own children, was in Toronto for a teachers' convention.

She went to rural school herself, in Cando, Sask., and after graduating from normal school in Saskatoon, taught in a log cabin school 30 miles north of Melville, Sask.

She was 22, earned $300 a year and paid $5 a month board. Then she taught for 35 students in 11 grades and she had no money to buy books for them.

"I don't know how we did it but they all got through."

NOSE/IN NOSEGAY — Prince Philip enjoyed the scent of the bouquet he carried in a Maundy Thursday procession at Rochester Cathedral in Kent, England. He escorted Queen Elizabeth who distributed traditional Maundy money gifts to elderly couples. Song of Switzerland Will Be Shown

Next Thursday evening at the Collegiate auditorium the last travel-colorgose of this season's "Adventure Series" sponsored by the Kiwanis Club under the direction of Curtis Nagel, as narrator, will feature the "Song of Switzerland."

This travelogue is "a magnificent screen masterpiece, produced by the team of camera artists, Curtis Nagel and William Moore, contains all the scenic grandeur and color of this Alpine wonderland — brought to the screen for the first time with new-dimension lenses and embellished with the actual folk songs, music and dances of this charming country."

"It is like three films in one: Germany France and Italy, art and folklike are reflected in this new 'film-format' of an age-old country, which unfolds its history in authentic costumed pageantry, from the snow and ice of Alpine glaciers to the warmth of the sunny Italian Lakes'."

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

The traditions and customs of Easter do not seem to be as clearly defined or as closely adhered to as they were in the Christian era yet a festival at this time of year was celebrated in pagan times. It seems that the symbols we associate with Easter have come down to us from beliefs both pagan and Christian.

Eggs, chicks and rabbits figure prominently in our celebration at this time. The egg was regarded as the symbol of creation by both Egyptians and Romans, while chicks and ducklings symbolized the return of life with the springtime. The egg-laying Easter bunny comes from German mythology, one story holds that the Goddess Eostra changed her bird into a rabbit in order that he might let children everywhere know that spring was on its way.

Another old legend says that one day, as a rabbit went for a quiet walk in the forest, he came upon a nest filled with eggs. But there was no hen in sight. After a futile search for her, he concluded that a very old hen must have made a flea of her. So he decided that his mother must have worried about her eggs, so he decided to keep them warm and huddled close on the hen's nest all night. When he awoke next morning, which, of course, was Easter, the nest was full of little yellow chicks. They knew no better than to suppose the rabbit was their mother and, in consequence, they turned to him to be sheltered and fed.

Northern Germany is the source of the snow bunny legend. Here the inhabitants used to have an Easter feast similar to the Christmas tree, except that it was trimmed with, tinted eggs. A rabbit's guard over a huge nest of eggs held a very prominent place.

The hot cross buns we still enjoy at this season date back to old - Anglo-Saxon religious times. The people used to bake and eat special scone-like cakes in honor of their god-dess Ostara. When the Christian clergy came to the land they found it almost impossible to stamp out this custom, so they compromised by insisting that these buns be stamped with a cross, before being baked and eaten.

We may think that having new hats and clothes at Easter is a modern innovation but it such is not the case. It has long been the superstition that to wear a new bonnet for the first time on Easter Sunday was to be sure of happiness and love during the year.

However, the Easter parade originated in ancient Rome and not on Fifth Avenue as New Yorkers believe. The Romans made this a time of gay new clothes and elaborate ceremonies. They felt that new clothes worn on this day were now observe as Easter brought the newest good luck all the following year. The custom spread to other parts of Europe and later to the New World.

Many old Easter customs have faded away. In England between the 13th and 19th centuries, women were given the right to strike their husbands on Easter Monday and on Tuesday the men could strike back. In the year 1400, a free shave for the church-goers in the parish was provided at the hitt and the custom continued well into the 19th century.

It is probably a good thing that these less significant customs that died out. Coming in the spring, Easter is a happy time; winter is gone and life is ready to spring forth new again. This year let's start and made it into April which brings to mind a verse from a poem by Katharine Tinan Hinson which has been set to music for a beautiful Easter song:

"All in the April evening. April airs were abroad.
I saw the sheep with their lambs
And thought on the Lamb of God."

Woman at 93 Keeps up Attendance

MONTREAL (CP) — Mrs. Christine L. Henderson is a club woman of difference.

Like many women members of clubs, she is active, enthusiastic and devoted. The difference? She's 93 years old.

"I like to keep up with the principal clubs I've worked with for many years," she says, explaining activities which often take her to three or more club meetings a week.

Although a wife and mother always was a big interest of mine. They kept me very busy and sometimes when I tried to do too much, I was frantically busy," Mrs. Henderson says she would rather talk about her books—and has had three published, mostly of poetry—than her age. "I like to think of myself as a retired author rather than a retired wife," she says smilingly.

Her interests in literature stood her in good stead as an active member and former president of the Women's Art Society. She used to lecture before the club frequently.

She believes married women should take more interest in clubs.

"They can make friends and have a social purpose, they are bound to feel they are contributing something to a good cause."

Going Places

Curacao Is One of World's Greatest Shopping Centres

By Shirley and Bob Elsasa

Willemstad, Curacao, Netherlands Antilles — In 1648 the governor of this colony, a pegleged old seadog named Peter Stuyvesant, was given the additional duties of governor of another island recently acquired by the Dutch West India Company for $24 in beads and no tax.

Stuyvesant moved up to New Netherlands, possibly anticipating that it would be a nice place to visit, what with a 12 hour daily cocktail and all, but he wouldn't want to live there. He reputedly left behind his good leg, and judging from the number of stories about where it is supposed to be buried, Stuyvesant must have been a one-legged centipede.

Well, sir, the natives of New Netherlands have a strong conscience. For the past 307 years they have been trying to make up for having overcharged the Dutch for that underworked island by making wampum-wielding Dutchmen rich.

With the possible exceptions of the Nina, Pinta and Santa Maria, the Caribbean island Columbus didn't discover or settle is the best place in the business stop here. Among them lately was a latter day Dutch boy who landed a passenger named Galvao (the later became captain).

Inside the cruise ship dock, the pilgrims, their pockets bulging with loot, spend hundreds of dollars to go where they can make it up in bargains, and as they prowl the streets of Willemstad with their loaded paper shopping bags they have much out of their sockets, you'd think they were getting the stuff for free.

At Spritzer and Fuhrmann, variously known as the Tiffany's of the Antilles and the Cartier of the Caribbean, that's Henderson's store in the cocoro because the place can a million dollar a year business despite the fact there are three storeys and 350 employees. Spritzer and Fuhrmann's professional men's wives and a considerable number in there just to let their eyes pop.

Here you can buy, in any of 28 languages, the phrase book ("Only one!" the clerk is likely to say) or a $42,000 diamond ring or a solid gold watch encase such as Charles E. Fuhrmann wears with his name inscribed where the brand usually goes so no one will know his favorite.

Mr. Fuhrmann has come a long way since he emigrated from Germany 30 years ago and joined in business with the late Wolf Spritzer, another Austrian watchmaker who even then was peddling timepieces to the tourists on the side.

Today S and F, with five branches, is the largest retail establishment on the island, the fourth largest employer and features one of the largest collections of watches and jewelry under one roof in the world.

Along the red-tiled mall of Heerenstraat or the main shopping street of Breedestraat are the outlets of the other heirs to the Dutch West Indies Company: Senior and Co., distillers of the original Curacao liqueur; East Indias traders such as M. Daidas and Sons for the Costa Corner family's El Lorito; the Delvalle dynasty's El Globo, J. G. Pesha's department store, the mighty import-export shipping firm of S.E.L. Maduro and Sons, and others that have dominated the commercial life of this tight little island for centuries.

BARGAINS FLOW BOTH WAYS

As fast as they flow out, the bargains flow in from all over the world — cameras and optical equipment from Japan, silks and brocades from Hong Kong, perfumes from France, peppery from Madeira, linens from India, whiskey from the United States and Canada, and the inevitable watches from Switzerland.

Rumpled shoulder and rubbing shopping bags with fellow one-day visitors off the cruise boats has been the major attraction of Curacao for so long that few have had the heart to savor the unique delights that make this island one of the most charming in the West Indies.

But lately jet service has brought Curacao within five hours flying time of New York and a ten-year plan to add resort tourism to cruise tourism is already in the land.

Of course, for those who come only to take this little corner of Holland back to New Netherlands with them, Spritzer and Fuhrmann has a counter at the airport, and the last we saw of the shoppers were standing there three deep.

More about Curacao's other appeals next week.

Mrs. Frank Davidson welcomed the ladies and opened the meeting by reading a timely poem and offering prayer.

Mrs. R. Smithson, vice-president, led in the devotional period, assisted by three ladies from Trenton, Taking her theme "Making Christian" Homes A Sanctuary Unto God," from the magazine, "The Christian Home."

Mrs. Smithrin developed a fine and unusual worship service, using a model from the book, "The Art of Building Worship Services."

Reports of the treasurer, secretaries and conveners were head with interest, particularly that of Mrs. Sine, literature secretary, who reported a greatly-increased volume of sales of lightened-up books. A variety of literature was on display and the ladies purchased many books at the sale. Plans to speak-out of the Dominion Council W.A. annual meeting in Toronto, May 12-15 in which Mrs. F. Davidson and Mrs. R. Smithrin were appointed delegates; and of the Presbyterial meeting in September with Mrs. Davidson being appointed to attend as a representative from Presbytery W.A.

Mrs. E. Marsh and Mrs. A. N. Pryear were named to the Presbytery committee to be convened in April to discuss matters pertaining to the new women's organization.

WORKSHOP SKILL REPORT

Mrs. Davidson reported on the skill workshop sponsored by the department of education and stewardship which she had attended, also read an invitation for the ladies to attend a W.M.S. meeting in Tweed at 2 p.m. April 6, to hear the noted speaker, Miss Jane Scott.

The remainder of the afternoon session was spent in planning the program for the last meeting of the Presbytery W.A. which is to be held in the United Church in Marmora on May 8th.

USE YOUR HEAD ON ALL FOOL'S DAY

Today is All Fool's Day and it is well to remember it as it is your best friend may have no scruples about playing pranks on you. There are many old theories regarding the origin of the customs that have been followed on this day. Most of them are not authenticated.

Whatever the origin, the day is observed in many countries. In France, a person is an "April Fish," instead of an "April Fool." They believe that in the month of April, fish are so young, that they are easily caught. In Scotland, because they believe that a person hasn't sense enough to recognize it's own nest, such dopes are called "Gowks," which is Scotch for cuckoos. In all cases, the day is observed by the playing of pranks with the dell-berate intention of making the recipient play the fool.

And what has all this to do with marriage, you ask? Just a reminder to go easy when you do undertake to change one of one of your pranks. It's one thing to play a harmless prank with the evident intention of making the person you play it on appear a fool. It's quite another to overdo the jest, causing resultant hard feelings and maybe even a serious aftermath.

I have in mind a friend who, purely in a spirit of fun, started a story going around the office in which she worked, that April Fool's day she spread the news that Sue, one of her co-workers, had been seen the night before in a night club with the fiance of another girl in the office. Sue vehemently denied ever having been with the young man, all to no avail. My friend went a little too far in trying up her story and when, at the end of the day, she finally broke down and said "April Fool," a lot of harm had been done and hard feelings on sides resulted from this so-called "harmless prank."

We all have the misfortune of knowing the person who doesn't know "April Fool's Day" as an excuse to pull practical jokes on his friends.

Such an individual thinks it's smart to bring embarrassment to others. Tomorrow's neighbor will greet the discomfort suffered by the victim who has a chair pulled from under him, or who has been the recipient of the sending sneeze or sneezing glass. Total ostracism should be the lot of such pranksters. Even all Fool's Day does not give a person the right to do things that are cruel in the injury. Have you ever had a chair pulled from you because you "just in fun"? If not seriously hurt, I'll bet you ached for weeks!

My littler sermon is simply to remind Fools that they do have "bright ideas of jokes to play on your friends today, to think first whether or not they can do real harm. Have your fun, but be considerate of others while you are at it!

QUESTION AND ANSWER

Question — I am leaving for the West Coast soon. It will be my first trip by train. I have a roommate. I make my own bed? Do I have to wear a hat and coat when I go to dining car? Do I tip the waiter after every meal, or at the end of trip? — Mrs. N. R. W., Baltimore, Md.

Answer — You do not make your own bed. The porter will attend to it. It is not necessary to wear a hat or coat in the dining car on a long trip such as this. Tip the waiter after every meal. The chances are you will not have the same waiter for the entire trip.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.

Roxane M. — I'd like to nurse my baby.

Joyce T. — None of us nurse our babies are perfect.

Roxane M. — I expect my first baby in a few months. My sisters and the family want me to arrange for obstetrical care by the doctor they've all been using for years. But he doesn't believe in breastfeeding and advises the girls not to bother.

One of my friends used another obstetrician who at least tried to co-operate. She nursed a bit started, anyway, but the first months after the baby's born, bottles had to be introduced. I'd like to sign up with this physician, but the family is urging me to stick with the one they swear by.

I'm not really up on pregnancy and so has my husband. We're both intrigues me and I'd like to try it.

Joyce T. — Maybe in the old days nursing was manageable, but now, because that even our mothers advises against it in favor of bottle with all the lopnotch formula and baby foods.

Each family obstetrician must have a good reason for advising not to bother about breastfeeding our babies. Mine is three months old and doing beautifully on formula and vitamins. Roxy admits that her friend gave nursing a fair try and had to stop it almost at the start.

I think my sister just wants to be different, and to do so she's taking a chance with a doctor we don't know, risking her infant's early nutrition. There are less serious ways to be "different."

Why doesn't she relax a and stop trying to fight a losing battle?

The Council — More power to Roxane She's to be commended for her curiosity about the complete experience of child bearing which, according to Nature's design, includes lactation for the purpose of nourishing the infant from outside the mother's body.

Yes, it's old - fashioned, it's true. But, it's rare, it's risky. But, it's there and, asks Roxane, why not learn what it's like?

Actually, there aren't many doctors under two a year more, because the technique of breastfeeding is difficult to master. The key person here is — guess who—the infant.

But like mechanics of proper positioning of mother and child and the disharmony between a baby and a hospital's "schedule," have contributed to the use of "just-as-good" concoctions made from cow's milk But breast-feeding, if possible, offers the baby his own custom-made" nutrition. And, in addition, it offers the mother a closeness and essential.

VIEW-FINDERS

"View-finders have an infinite landscape in which new vistas and new beauties, still perhaps uncovered, or at least unrecorded, constantly unfold before you."—S. and A. Bloomyard.

Here are excerpts from letters written by Sidney Pringle of Belleville, giving enchanting views of life at Le Mesnil, International Girls' School at Mooiruyz, Switzerland. Over looking the savoy Alps, it is situated by Lake Leman in the sunny climate of the Swiss Riviera, near the famed Chateau of Chillon (clearly seen from the balcony of Sidney's room!) During winter month the school moves to a chalet in the mountains of Gstaad, where studies are continued along with winter sports instruction in livigorating air. Sidney is the 15-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Pringle, Trent Road, who writes:

"Last Thursday, we had no school as we went on an excursion to Basel by bus. We passed through Neuchatel and in Basel saw where Germany, France and Switzerland meet. I once again saw the Rhine. When we returned to the school, that night, my trunk, at last, had arrived.

"My Spanish is progressing quite well. Madame dictates French sentences, I translate quickly into English and then Spanish. There is more snow on the mountains across the lake. Sometimes I see a little plane trip over them. Although it's little cloudy, the view was good. The middle parts along the lake are lovely. The horses are beautiful and nice clean stables.

"I have 'signed up' to attend three concerts at the Victoria Auditorium. On Saturday night we are going over to Montreux for a Moliere play, Wednesdays meet or talk to other schools at international meetings.

"We are having a Christmas entertainment and dinner-supper party before we leave for Gstaad. I am in a dance number and the English girls are trying to do a play. Later, many of Switzerland's finest come. It is very nice and a surprising number of parents. The food is good and much to our surprise they seemed to enjoy the English play.

"At Gstaad we arrived here Saturday before lunch. It is a typical Swiss village. Above the Palace Hotel is on the hill and we can see it from our window. Not too much snow, about 40 - 45 centimetres, but it's snowing now. There are many Swiss chalets. Some very large and beautiful. Also sleighs and belled horses. The cows have enormous bells. As large as their heads. I can hear them at night walking through the village. Sunday we went to church and it was in German. The minister would preach a long sermon!

"The ski pro for the school takes us out every afternoon from 2 to 5. We go up the mountain in a chair car and then by T-bar. The pro can speak no English but I can understand French now. He keeps saying, 'Serrez les skis' he says it's work hard I should pass my Swiss gold ski test the end of February. He's about the Ski Club of Great Britain and Nicolette and I went in a downhill slalom which they had at the resort. It was all day and a pile of fun. All the girls and Princess Alexandra was skiing too. We had lunch and tea there.

"On Christmas Eve, the English, speaking girls went to church, we will go to an Anglican Church for the rest of the winter, where the services are in English. We had our Christmas dinner on Christmas Eve, and I never saw so much wine in my life.

"The boys of Rosey School have returned and Thursday afternoon, after skiing with some of them, we went to the Palace to meet a girl who is a princess of Thailand. She isn't a very good bowler and I gave her change for the machines. It costs one franc to bowl.

"Now that school has begun again, the European girls have filled the house at Gstaad. So I am living at Rosemarie with 20 other girls. As there is only one English-speaking girl it is better and Mlle Cordier and I leave each morning at eight for Gstaad and return after six. The teaching in French and skiing is better at Gstaad. We ski from nine-thirty to four. This week we only skied on Monday as it snowed so much and the wind blew so hard that the lifts were closed until today (Monday).

"Saturday afternoon I was at the Palace to a party and was introduced to William Holden by his son. We got acquainted before Ash Wednesday and we expect to see a movie there. I hope so. It is beautiful today and the skiing is wonderful. I do not go down the hills very fast. . . .

Many readers may recall Holiday Magazine's (Sept., 1960, issue) feature article about Rosey School: bought little know, but yet famous for its enrollment of European aristocratic and royal pupils. Her father, Mr. Pringle for excerpts from Sidney's lively letters, and with her every success in her studies and sports, with continued happy view-finding during this dream-come-true-year.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Buying on Time Is Alarming

DEAR DORIS:—My boy friend has just got a steady job and wants to get married right away. He says we could make a down payment on some furniture and get along fine.

I have always been taught to pay cash for everything and this kind of talk scares me. Suppose he should lose his job. What happens then?—CAUTIOUS.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR CAUTIOUS:—The dollar-down-and-dollar-when-you-catch-me kind of financing is foolhardy. Welfare records are full of cases where the first rosy flush of romance turns a sickly green in the face of a pile of debts. Heart-break and broken homes can follow.

Not that instalment buying can't be a great help in getting a start, if you use it properly. But starting a home is a great big expense, and always costs more than you figure. You need a good substantial amount set aside and assurance of a steady and permanent job with chance for advancement. Then take the plunge, buying only the necessities first, and keep even with the payments at all costs.

DEAR DORIS:—When we got married we said we would have four or five children. Now here it is five years later and we haven't any. The doctor says there is no organic reason why I can't get pregnant.

I can't wait forever. Do you think we should adopt? I am told there is quite a waiting list.—EAGER BEAVER.

DEAR DORIS:—Wait long enough—but not too long.

It's a tragedy when a couple waits until they are tottering on the edge of 40 before even the first appointment with the Children's Aid worker. Young children take a great deal of care, and older parents just haven't got the energy it takes. It is true that there are often long waiting lists and this sometimes carries the date of actual adoption well past the age limit.

On the other hand, many a marriage has been blessed with offspring without benefit of outside agency well after five years of marriage, but under ten.

Things to consider are—right now; your individual states of health with relation to possible pregnancy; number of children wanted, and the availability of adoptable babies. I'd say make an appointment now with the official adoption agency, your Children's Aid Society. The counsellor there will cover all these points and help you reach a decision.

DEAR DORIS:—Why won't my father talk to me—I mean about things that matter. All he does is put me off—after laying down the law about what nights I can go out and what time I must get home. When I say I want to talk to him there is always some excuse. My mother says she won't interfere and that Dad is the boss.

The other fellows think I'm a square because I have to stick to a bunch of crazy rules, study so much and walk out on a party just when the fun is starting. Do you think this is fair?—EIGHTEEN.

DEAR EIGHTEEN:—Some parents think they have to be tough.

By the time a fellow is 18, his father should begin to count on him to act responsible and to make many of his own decisions. It's the ones who take advantage of personal freedom to stay out too late, act too smart and perhaps run afoul of the law, that spoil it for the rest.

Some rules are good, but there should be compromises and special occasions. When you think a party will be late, ask him for special consideration; then come home when you say you will. If he won't talk to you, write him a note about it and show him this column.

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Garden Notes

Some Helpful Tips on Pruning

By FLORA M. SAVILLE

Pruning is not a pleasant job to most gardeners. He thinks of it as a tiresome chore to be got through quickly that he may get on to more interesting work.

In his haste to be finished he may lop off branches without regard to the reasons for pruning. Before taking up secateurs or saw take time to consider these six pointers.

1. To maintain the vigor of the plant. Cut out a few old branches each year according to the plants growth and condition.

2. To cut out injured deceased and dead branches, or wood that has become infested with insects such as scale.

3. To get the best possible performance of fruit and bloom.

4. To re-build old, overgrown and unsightly shrubs.

5. To control the growth and shape the form of the shrub.

6. To remove top growth to balance it with the root system at time of transplanting.

CHOOSE SHRUBS WELL

To save much future pruning always choose shrubs that will not get too big for your property and space them to allow for their natural development without crowding. Shrubs are only at their best when allowed to develop to their natural shape and height. And, there should be a little space between, that allows free circulation of air and the sun to penetrate. Then, too, crowded shrubs soon take on a tangled appearance which is anything but attractive.

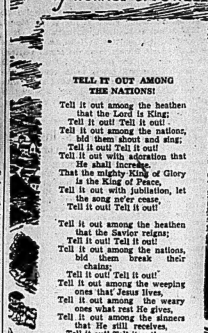
Your nurseryman can advise you on the eventual height and spread of any shrub.

Avoid as much as possible pruning shrubs that bloom in Spring and early summer, or much of the beauty will be lost for this year. They should be pruned as soon after flowering as possible. Late flowering shrubs such as Alethea (rose of Sharon), Buddleia and Tree Geranium ranges can be pruned in the spring.

Cut out any branches that cross or rub against each other. Remove branches from centre so that light and air can get in. Ornamental fruit trees and shrubs should be pruned lightly before and after bloom, for the best effect.

TREAT WITH WAX

Clean out tangled and too thick branches and treat large cut surfaces with wax or paint prepared for this purpose. Shortstraggling branches cut off suckers and growth that rises up from the ground beside the main trunk.



In trees cut off lower branches to allow for headroom that you may walk under comfortably or any branches which grow inward for the same reason.

Do not dig up the soil under trees or shrubs. The roots lie near the surface. Scrape off any weeds that grow with a hoe.

Feed shrubs, if you did not do so in the fall, with from half to one pound of balanced fertiliser such as vigoro. Make a shallow trench in a circle around the shrub out to about the tip of the branches. Put the fertilizer in and cover with soil. Water in well if season is dry. Apply it early in the spring and the rains will take it down to the feeder roots. A average small shrub will need one cupful of fertilizer, a large one two cups.

Stories of Famous Hymns

by HORACE B. POWELL

TELL IT OUT AMONG THE NATIONS

Tell it out among the heathen
that the Lord is King;
Tell it out! Tell it out!
Tell it out among the nations,
bid them shout and sing;
Tell it out! Tell it out!
Tell it out with adoration that
He shall increase,
That the mighty King of Glory
is the King of Peace,
Tell it out with jubilation, let the song ne'er cease,
Tell it out! Tell it out!

Tell it out among the heathen
that the Savior reigns;
Tell it out! Tell it out!
Tell it out among the nations, bid them break their chains;
Tell it out! Tell it out!
Tell it out among the weeping
ones that Jesus lives,
Tell it out among the weary
ones what rest He gives,
Tell it out among the sinners
that He still receives,
Tell it out! Tell it out!

One Sunday morning when Frances R. Havergal, popular English woman hymnist, was too ill to go to church she crept from her sick bed to find her Bible.

Thumbing through her favorite verses of Scripture, she was attracted by a line in the ninety-sixth Psalm:

"Say among the heathen that the Lord reigneth."

She read the passage over several times and suddenly the idea came to her to use it as the opening line of a hymn. Taking up paper and pencil she began to write and, in an amazingly short time, she had finished her hymn-poem just as it appears above.

While she was writing she heard church bells ringing and managed to put some of their music into her song. When her family returned from worship, she was at the piano trying to tap out a tune for her verses. According to a story told in later years by her sister, the following conversation ensued:

"Why Frances, I thought you were upstairs!" "Yes, but I had my prayer book and the Psalms for today I read: 'Tell it out among the heathen that the Lord is King.' I thought: 'What a splendid first line!' And then words and music came rushing in to me. There! it's all written out!"

A Lift For Living

'Death Could Not Hold Him'

By DR. RALPH W. SOCKMAN

The Easter news started in a garden. Three sorrowing women had slipped through the shadowy streets of an early morning to pay their respects at the tomb of their beloved Leader, who had been crucified two days before.

Finding the stone rolled away, they ran to tell Peter who came rushing to the gave and found it empty. Bewildered, Peter and the disciples departed.

But Mary stood without the sepulchre weeping. There appeared to her a Presence, which at first she did not recognize. As she beheld Him, she became convinced and cried, "Master!"

The same evening two disciples were departing from Jerusalem. They were deeply depressed. Their leader had been crucified. Their enterprise had collapsed. As they walked along, a Presence drew near, and began to throw Scriptual light on the events which had taken place. Their hearts became strangely warm. As this Mysterious Person sat down to eat with them for the breaking of bread, they recognized Him as their Risen Lord.

The Fourth Gospel records a third appearance to the disciples that evening. But the Easter drama of that first day had only a few scenes and only a few characters.

NOT GHOST STORIES

Six weeks passed — a pretty fair amount of time to test the validity of a report. If the Resurrection accounts had been mere ghost stories, they would probably have lost their exciting interest after six weeks. Furthermore, ghost stories begot fear rather than courage in those who believe them.

But the reports of the Resurrection changed the frightened disciples into brave spokesmen. They risked their lives telling about it on the streets. If they had hidden the body of Jesus, the disciples would hardly have suffered continued persecution for a false report of His resurrection. If the crucifiers had stolen His body, they would have confessed it in order to stop the spread of this new Christian sect.

But the Easter report kept on growing. And on the day of Pentecost the disciples gathered to celebrate their Hebrew festival. Then something happened. They became so imbued with spiritual power that they were able to speak and think beyond themselves. The outsiders who heard them were amazed.

Today, at this point, stood up and stirringly reminded the crowd of the ancient prophecies about God pouring out His spirit upon His people. This which they saw was a fulfillment of prophecy, climaxed by the crucifixion of Christ, "Whom God hath raised up, having loosed the pains of death, because it was not possible that He should be holden of it."

Such is the conviction which crystallized from the reports of Easter and the events that followed. However hard it may be to explain the Easter account, the historical fact is that Christ had become more of a power in Jerusalem after Pentecost, six weeks after His death, than He had been on Palm Sunday. The Temple authorities could not hold Him down. Pilate could not hold Him down. "Death could not hold Him." This is the Easter assertion.

SPIRIT LIVES ON

Several centuries before Christ, Socrates as he was dying told his pupils that they could not catch his soul. His spirit would live on beyond his body.

Nineteen centuries after Christ, over one hundred million will celebrate His triumph over death. What keeps the belief in immortality going and growing?

Some people assume that it is a sign of selfishness to crave life beyond the grave. Not so. It is love that calls out most loudly for continuing life. A man needs to be brave enough to face risk of extinction without tears, but what about the loss of his loved ones?

When Thomas Jefferson was dying, he told his daughter Martha that he had left something in a drawer for her to read when he was gone. This is what he had written: "On that shore which shall crown all my hopes, or drown all my cares, I hope to meet two seraphs, long vanished, my beloved wife and my daughter Maria." Jefferson would have looked into the smooth youth without flinching. And he could look into the grave with faith and hope and love.

The best minds in their best moments believe that death is not hold the good life. Love is too great for the grave."

APOLOGIZE TO IKE

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) Former president Eisenhower listened thoughtfully Wednesday while 65 Japanese students apologized for the June riots that forced him to cancel a trip to Japan last year. Then Eisenhower, standing on the lawn of his vacation home, told the group he hopes to visit their country in the fall. He added: "I consider this the last act to the June riots—and, like all good plays, it has a happy ending."

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED WILSON

SCRATCHING FOR FOOD

If you have ever visited a barnyard you must have seen hens and chickens scratching the ground; but unless you are an ardent bird watcher you are not likely to have seen wild feathered folk scratching. Yet this is the chief manner in which many birds look for food.

In early spring many flocks passing through settled Canada to their summer homes beyond civilization stop over for a short while to rest and feed. A number of these birds are scratchers, searching for either small animal life or seeds. The handsome fox sparrow is one with the unique habit of using both feet as, it kicks up the leaf litter from last autumn and digs down under the surface for beetles and little crawling creatures.

A FINE SINGER

Any time after mid-April a brown thrasher might be heard in settled Canada from eastern Quebec to Manitoba. Somewhat of a southern singer, it gives us special pleasure when it decides to call on us. The song, composed of two-part and three-phrases which are always given in pairs, is the best clue we have for identifying a thrasher. Scratching the ground in search of crawling insects is done by the long, curved bill rather than with the feet — much as we might poke about with a stick.

The white-throated sparrow, popularly known here as the "Canada Bird" because of the phrasing of its song, is also a ground feeder, scratching noisily in dead leaves, hunting for seed seeds. Fortunately for us, the white-throat has a fondness for ragweed seeds. Although some members of the family breed farther north, others nest in settled districts. Listen for the "Canada" song in early April.

ARRIVES IN MAY

The beautiful big white-crowned sparrow seldom appears in Canada until May, though it often remains only a short while before continuing north. Compost heaps and brush piles are great attractions for it, and in such places small flocks may be found scratching for weed seeds.

Towhees are scratchers too. The robin does this to some extent, but the veery, hermit thrush, and wood thrush are all noted for scratching among dead leaves to find insect food. Of course the robin can be expected here any moment now if it has not already come; but the others will not return before the worm crawling insects are easily located and uncovered.

The noisy scratching of a bird in dry leaves is frequently a bird watcher's introduction to a new species.

'Leafs Will Wrap It Up On Wednesday'

But Punch Forgets "If"

TORONTO (CP) — Coach Punch Imlach of Toronto Maple Leafs received a page from the politician's handbook Friday and promised to wrap up the Stanley Cup playoff series here Wednesday.

Like a politician's promise, there was an "if" attached. His team needs a win in tonight's semi-final game against Detroit Red Wings to stay in the series.

The Red Wings, with a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven set, are 3 to 1 favorites to break Imlach's promise.

"We seem to have a habit of doing everything the hard way," he said after a stiff 1½-hour workout at the Red Reeve Arena Friday.

"We'll win not only tonight's game, but the following one in Detroit on Sunday and wrap up the series before our own fans on Wednesday," he added.

Red Kelly — the 32d Abel refused to make predictions. He said he prefers to leave all the experting to Leafs and Imlach. It makes for riotous reading afterwards, said Abel.

Gordie Howe celebrated his 33rd birthday Friday in his practice by puffing on a cigar.

In the Leaf camp, injuries to veterans Red Kelly and Bert Olmstead are causing acute concern. The two took part in Friday's drill, but their presence didn't inspire optimism.

Kelly was asked after the workout whether he noticed any improvement in his groin injury. He merely shook his head. Olmstead said his injured knee was fine, but teammates said neither can skate without suffering pain.

They didn't have the legs to help Leafs much last Tuesday and Imlach said Friday their injuries were about the same as they were in Detroit last week.

Kelly's appearance in Detroit was his first since March 5 and Olmstead's first since he was injured in the series opener March 22.

Habs Will Miss Geoffrion

Hawks Roost Filled, Ready To Go

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks will be at full strength tonight for the first time since they opened their Stanley Cup semi-final against Montreal Canadiens.

Return of forward Ab McDonald from a hospital stage gives Hawk coach Rudy Pilous four complete lines to throw against the champion Canadiens in this all-important tie - breaker of the best-of-seven series. Each team has won two games.

Coach Toe Blake likewise can muster four lines but he will have to assemble them minus his ace scorer, Bernie Geoffrion.

The Boomer, laid up with a sore injury incurred two games ago, may play no more hockey this season. A cartilage condition is suspected. If x-ray examinations prove the suspicion correct, Geoffrion will have to undergo an operation.

TEAMS WORKED OUT

The Hawks arrived by plane Friday and worked out a few minutes after the Canadiens practised.

McDonald worked out in Chicago Thursday, the first time since an infection laid him low, and joined Friday's practice. He will rejoin his linemates, Stan Mikita and Ken Wharram.

Eric Nesterenko, who missed the last game because of a wrist injury, went the distance in the practice but then was sent to a hospital for treatment of boils on his elbow.

Pilous was sympathetic over Geoffrion's misfortune but said the Boomer's loss shouldn't be as disastrous to Canadiens as some people think.

'HE'S GOT GUTS'

"All Blake has to do is look along his bench and he's got guys he can throw out there. Besides, it doesn't figure that Geoffrion would score in these playoffs at his 30-goals-a-season rate."

Dickie Moore has already taken over Geoffrion's place at right wing—the move disrupting another line — and Blake has done some experimenting at left wing.

For tonight's game Marcel Bonin is likely to get the assignment to work with Moore and centre Jean Beliveau.

Come, Come Ingy, See The Movies

LONDON (AP)—Ingemar Johansson returned to Europe Friday and made two statements likely to win him more than a little reaction.

"I was up before the count reached 10" he said.

Then he added, during the course of an interview, that he doesn't owe the United States income tax people a cent.

The big Swede discussed the punch that ended his world heavyweight title scrap 19 days ago with Floyd Patterson of New York victorious.

"I was up before the count reached 10.

Johansson said he figured to do better against the U.S. tax men than he did against Patterson.

"They think I owe them more than $1,000,000. But I think I am not owing them a cent."

Eddie Bush Hit With $200 Fine

TORONTO (CP)—Eddie Bush, boisterous coach of Hamilton Red Wings, was fined $200 Thursday for heaving a couple of sticks on the ice during Wednesday night's Ontario Hockey Association junior A semi-final playoff.

The fine, levied by OHA president Ken McMillan of Georgetown, was the highest in the junior A series this season. Bush plans to appeal.

The fireworks started shortly after Toronto St. Michael's College Majors' Andre Champagne had received a double minor penalty for spearing. When the penalty clock showed only a two-minute infraction, Bush began hollering at referee Bill Gresbaner with no success.

Seconds later, when a faceoff was called in the Hamilton end, St. Mike's Dave Dunphy took a vicious swing with his stick at Red Wings' John Miscisin, hitting him in the seat of the pants.

Bush jumped up from the Hamilton players' bench and buried a stick onto the ice,

Hockey Hints

By Lloyd Percival

The Penalty Confession

Clarence Campbell, the scholarly president of the N.H.L., once made a very interesting observation during an interview for a Sports College broadcast. He said, in many cases, in fact in most of them, the chief cause of a penalty is a lack of skill. If the penalized player had been capable of checking the player he would not have held or tripped him."

Observation appears to bear out Mr. Campbell's theory that many penalties are a confession of an inability to handle a situation with skill. This applies particularly to the holding penalties given. What usually happens is that a player is faked out of position or he is slow to see the play shape up or perhaps he is beaten by a quick change of pace. To recover the situation he reaches out with his hands. This is often not a legitimate method of solving the problem. It is very understandable one.

But the point Clarence Campbell was making is a good one. If players make a habit of using illegal methods to cover up failure or a lack of skill they will never develop the advanced skills that they very apparently need. This is why the very common practice of teaching young players to hold is coaching in reverse — it holds up the skill development of the player and makes the puckcarrier trying to get past.

My advice to the budding "big leaguer" and to his coach is to concentrate on learning and teaching the legal skills, looking at the use of "outs tricks" as being more a admission of failure than a sign of know-how. Terriers Win OHA Title

WINDSOR (CP) — Galt has claimed its first Ontario Hockey Association championship in 40 years. The Terriers handed Windsor Bulldogs a 7-1 setback Thursday night.

The win gave Terriers the OHA senior title in a four-game sweep. Galt won the OHA eastern division championship while Windsor edged Chatham and Stratford en route to the western division title.

With the victory went the John Ross Robertson Trophy but, since it is being repaired in Toronto, the Terriers went home without the shell.

Galt's last OHA title was the intermediate championship won by another Terrier team which featured the Himes brothers, Normie and George.

The Terriers romped to 5-2, 7-3 and 7-1 victories before wrapping up the series Thursday night before a mere 960 fans.

Bulldogs scored first when Ed Switzer picked in a shot from the crease in the final minute of the first period. The Terriers ran wild in the middle frame. Butch Martin tied it in the second minute and Bob Mader, Joe Hogan and Bob McKnight added to their total.

Martin scored his second goal early in the final period.

Visiting netminder Lloyd Roubell, will meet either Kapuskasing or Rouyn-Noranda in the Eastern Canada Allan Cup semi-final.

'Eel Meals For Two Hockey Heels'

HAMILTON (CP) — When the Red Wings play in Detroit, the customers throw octopuses. When the Junior Red Wings play in Hamilton, they throw eels.

The latest seafood missile landed in front of the Hamilton net in the third period of the Red Wings' Ontario Hockey Association junior A game against Toronto St. Michael's Majors Thursday night.

A piece of cardboard, attached to one end of the eel, gave evidence that it wasn't the home supporters who were sweetening the afternoon diet. It was addressed to Hamilton coach Eddie Bush and his rambunctious left winger, Larry Jeffrey. The note read:

"To Eddie Bush and Lawrence Jeffrey

"We give you a meal of an ugly eel to a couple of heels."

Jeffrey responded with his second goal of the night as the Wings bested their visitors 7-3 to even the best-of-seven series, which Toronto leads 3-2 with one game tie.

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

The guy was a Red Wing fan all right and you couldn't exactly blame him for doing a little horn-blowing.

After all, hadn't his hero from Floral, Saskatchewan, proven himself, thus far, the big gun of a Stanley Cup series that had all the experts and dopesters making dates with psychiatrists?

Whether you like the Canadiens, Leafs, Black Hawks or Red Wings you had to go along with him.

For Gordie Howe has been proving to the sceptics that he is without a doubt one of the greatest hockey players of all time, and at the moment the greatest in the current hoedowns for the Stanley Cup.

The man was carried away by his enthusiasm. "You can have the Rocket Richards—yeah—and you can include Howie Morenz, too—for' all round play, ability, guts and desire, there has been nobody to equal Howe."

The Red Wings went into the semi-finals series 4-1 underdogs against the injury-riddled Toronto Maple Leafs. Even Jolly Jack Adams, bossman of the Wings said, on being installed, perhaps with tongue in cheek, "The Leafs will take it in six games."

Gordie Howe made his portly boss a prophet with no future in his own bailiwick. He fired the Wings to even greater heights than verbose Punch Imlach, the Front Office-coach-manager of the Leafs has the Toronto team to date.

Even with a number of the Leafian stars in hospital or hobbling around as walking cases, the Wings were not given much chance to cop the series. Detroit supporters held the slim hope that if the Adams crew was to get anywhere, the hockey Moses to lead them out of the wilderness was a guy named Howe.

And "Moose" Howe has done an outstanding job of leadership up to the moment. He picked as his copilot a Uke named Sloshuk and the two sparkplugs have combined to rev up the Wings' motors to top-speed and a runaway 3-1 lead in the semi-finals makes.

The big winger has scored two goals, two of them winners, and three assists in the four games played thus far. In the Wings' first win last Saturday night Howe set up Sloshuk for the clinching fourth goal, played the power play and killed penalties.

But Howe brought out his best in Sunday's 2-0 victory in Detroit. He broke up the game with a backhander at 4.51 of the last period, scoring his 38th playoff goal. Not bad for a guy who is 33 years of age today. And no cracks about "April Fool."

A story from Detroit says: "Howe played a tremendous game, checking well, feeding the power play and killing penalties. He was the outstanding player on the ice for every shift. On Sunday night he broke away from his checks and broke he gave Toronto defenders a 28-yard start on breakaway drives and caught them."

"It was truly an outstanding effort by the Floral, Saskatchewan, native; perhaps one of the greatest games ever by a Red Wing player."

Tonight the four-battle series resumes in Toronto and Montreal. The Red Wings will meet a fired-up Toronto squad, perhaps at their best strength to date after a five-day rest, and with their backs against the wall. The question? Can history repeat itself? It was back in 1942 that the Wings took the first three games from the Leafs only to have the Toronto crew race back with four straight victories to win the cup.

In Montreal the rampaging Black Hawks take on the Canadiens to break a five-all stalemate. The debacle the battle of the evening for the Habs roared back in Chicago with a display of hockey that was championship caliber all the way to square the set.

The Hawks looked anything but cup winners in the fourth game and they'll have to hitch up their wagons tonight if they want to take home that coveted fifth-game victory.

Beavers, Frontenacs Win

First in Series

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Kingston Frontenacs and Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers Friday night each scored their first wins in the best-of-seven Eastern Professional Hockey League semi - final, both games main on the short side of the wide ice rinks.

At Kingston the Frontenacs gained their first victory in four games, 5-4 in a fault like Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds 4-1. The Thunderbirds took the previous three games 3-1, 5-4 in overtime and 4-2.

The Beavers, also performing before a hometown crowd, secured a 6-2 shutout over Hull-Ottawa Canadiens. But the Canadiens lead the series two games to one.

Bob Kitchener goals came in the second period. Ed Roaklein opened the scoring at 9:12 when he grabbed a loose shot at centre ice let it go between the legs of goalie Ed Johnston; at close quarters. Two minutes later Duane Rupp scored on a partially screened blueline shot.

Jack Evans added a third way 23 shots to claim his third shutout of the season. Each team drew six minor penalties in the game, delayed several times by the fighting spirit of 3,000 tossing eggs on the ice.

PACKED FRONTENACS

In the other game veteran Orv Tessier paced the Frontenacs with two goals as Bob Attersley and Gerry Ouellette scored single s. Rookie Cliff Schmautz scored the game - winning goal of the series for the Thunderbirds.

Tessier's first goal came after only 21 seconds of the first period. Schmautz made it 2-0 at 6.36 of the first, but second period goals by Attersley and Ouellette gave Kingston a 3-1 lead. Tessier scored the insurance marker in the third frame.

John Henderson was a standout in the Kingston nets after his instantly-performance in the first three games.

Remaining in the series will be at the Soo Sunday. A sixth game, if necessary, will be held in Kingston Wednesday.

The third game in the Beaver-Canadiens series will be in Kitchener Sunday.

Rhythmic Behavior of Wildlife

For the past hundred years or more, scientists have been aware in a general sort of way, of what are now called "biological clocks." That's another way of saying that "rhythmic behavior of wildlife." Darwin spoke of this sort of thing in his writings as did Svante Arrhenius, a noted Swedish scientist, born 100 years before his time.

Strangely enough, all too little work has been invested in this rhythmic behavior until comparatively recent years. How and when you would see odd newspaper stories about the more spectacular instances, such as the Atlantic "fire worm" of Bermuda, the palolo worms of the South Pacific, or the breeding behavior of an interesting little fish called the grunion.

Now the systematic study of cyclic behavior of all wildlife is occupying the entire time of a great many biologists. From time to time their feelings are made public and are received with great welcome by one and all.

Actually, cyclic behavior goes on every day under our very noses. Take, for example, the daily routine of your dog or your cat. Watch them closely and you will soon be convinced that these animals actually can tell time.

NIGHT OR TIMES

Some years ago I found myself in charge of the breeding farm of the Thomas Stables at Rexdale, Virginia. That winter we had 37 fillies on hand. These animals were to be trained to run and play in a large field called the "play pen" of half a mile long and a quarter mile wide. Jolly Hizes, the old colored trainer who had charge of all the colts, used to bring the youngsters in for water, feed and bedding-down every day at four-thirty. At four twenty-five these half-grown mares might be anywhere in the field, but at four-thirty, sharp, every last one of them would slide to a stop at the gates waiting for admission to their stalls. You could set your watch by them.

While I am in no sense a professional biologist, I have, however, been conversant with rhythmic behavior of wildlife for the past 35 years while working out the vagaries of the solunar tables. Here is rhythmic behavior with a capital R. At first the matter was considered only as to its lunar aspects. It did not take long, however, to learn that the sun played its part also. Working out that formula took some doing.

Actually the thing had to be worked out with a known result as a starter — the actual increase in activity of fish, birds and animals. From that known result, the job in hand was to work back to the probable or actual cause. All too often I found myself going up a blind alley. Nothing for it but to rub out and start over. Correlations are tricky things with which to fool around. For example, a postgraduate student at Columbia University some years ago wrote his thesis on correlations. He showed how it is all too easy to go off the deep end in linking cause and effect.

One example that he gave showed a definite, year-after-year, correlation between an increase each fall in the number of pneumonia cases in New York hospitals and the increase in the number of discarded straw hats that showed up in New York's garbage cans. The correlation stat-istic, of course, easy to find; obviously the gradual lowering each fall of daily temperatures. But some correlations are less obvious.

One day New York's Fire Commissioner told me of the definite, established rise in monthly increase and decrease in the number of fires during the fall moon. It is necessary to put on extra nocturnal patrols. By the same token, consider the radical increase in basement-weapons each each month during the dark of the moon.

DOESN'T STOP THERE

The instances referred to earlier of the palolo worms, the Bermuda fire worms and, of course, reproductive cycles, completely rhythmic with the moon. The same is true of certain types of sea weeds as well as plants, for one and flowers. But the matter does not stop there by any means. The reproductive cycle of the human female averages almost exactly 28 days in rhythm with the gravitical or lunar month — 29.5 days.

The late Dr. Townsend, then in charge of the New York Aquarium, told me of the daily rhythmic behavior of clams in the exhibition tanks. At the times of low tide at Sandy Hook (which reflects as closely as may be the true Atlantic tides) these clams would bury themselves in the sand on the tank bottom. At times of high tide, the clams would be on top of the sand, shells open and moving about, just as they would be doing in the open sea.

Observing this rhythmic behavior in wildlife has been, and still is an absorbing study. To be sure, there is still much to be learned. It is quite obvious that while the timing of the activity periods is in definite rhythm with daily moon and sun positions, surely a bass in a Minnesota lake or a trout in a Colorado stream knows nothing of tides and actual moon-position. Yet these fish react exactly the same to the solunar periods as do their engaging brothers and sisters.

Today there are many unbelievers who label the solunar tables as pure poppycock. The public had a phrase for these — "none are so blind as those who will not see." Believe me, the solunar periods are not calculated by guesswork.

Instead, they have been figured out quite carefully as the result of 25 years of intensive study. This year, I shall see and see if I'm not right. Keeping track of the daily solunar periods will pay big dividend, in sport during the course of a year.

Vancouver Canucks moved back into a third-place tie with Seattle Totems Friday night by defeating Spokane Comets 3-1.

Edmonton Flyers, out of the playoffs for the first time in WHL history, wound up their 1960-61 program Friday night, defeating Winnipeg Warriors 7-2. Winnipeg also is out of the playoffs.

COOK DENIES REPORT
NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Herald Tribune says Jack Kent Cooke, owner of Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League, said Thursday that he had made an offer to buy the Cincinnati Reds of the National League.

The daily newspaper quotes Cooke as saying there is no foundation to reports that he had made an offer to buy the Cincinnati baseball club with the intention of moving the franchise to Toronto.

However, The Herald Tribune quotes Cooke as saying he had discussed what he called "the situation" with several interested parties.

Red Wings Nudge Irish

TORONTO (CP)—If St. Michael's College Majors get into the Ontario Hockey Association junior A final, says coach Rev. David Bauer, they're not going to play at a game-a-day pace to meet anybody's playoff deadline.

The OHA has been granted an extension of the April 7 deadline to declare its winner preparatory to the Memorial Cup matches but there's still a question of how much longer it will take.

The Majors go into the seventh and deciding game of the semi-final with Hamilton Red Wings here Sunday. The winner then meets Guelph Royals in the best-of-seven final.

Wings carried the only goal in the first period, added two more in the second and another pair in the third as Chelsea spoiled netminder Buddy Blom's shutout bid with three minutes to play.

LED THE ATTACK

Larry Jeffrey and Pit Martin led the Hamilton attack with two goals each. Bob Dillabough scored once.

Before Don Marchio handed out 21 minor penalties, 12 of them to the Leaders, Hamilton's Neil Porth and Toronto's Jack Cole took minors and majors following a high - sticking episode and a brief scrap in the second period.

The penalty proved costly to the Collegians. Hamilton scored three goals on power plays and another while the losers had a manpower advantage.

The winners outshot the visitors 34-17.

Allan Cup Playdowns

AMHERST, N.S. (CP)—Amherst Ramblers defeated Grand Falls, Nfld., 4 - 1 here Thursday night to win their best - of - three Eastern Canada Allan Cup quarter-final series 2-1.

The game ended in a wild brawl with almost all players taking part.

The Ramblers will now go against the Ontario winners. Galt eliminated Windsor Thursday night and will meet the winner of a Hearst-Kapuskasing series to decide who will meet the Ramblers.

Defenceman Russ Malone shot what proved to be the winning goal at 15:35 of the first period. Frank Dorrington gave Ramblers a 2-0 lead after less than three minutes of play and Ray Laplante tied it up three minutes later.

Moe Lamirande and Billy Payne scored for Ramblers in the second. Dave Kiley counted the final Amherst goal in the third.

There were two brawls in the third period. The first involving Granby's Gilles Bedard and Amherst's Dick Vanasiek, resulted in match penalties for both. Lou Kiley tangled with Gilles Picard and Roger Picard of Granby at 19:02, touching off a melee which cleaned the benches.

Indians Win Over Barons, Bisons Lose

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The battles for places in the American Hockey League's Calder Cup final resume tonight at Springfield, Mass., and Hershey Pa. Indications are they'll really be battles unless the referees rule tougher than in the opening games.

Defending champion Springfield Indians walloped Cleveland Barons 8-1 Wednesday in a best-of-seven semi-final opener that produced 11 penalties.

Hershey Bears trimmed Buffalo Bisons 6-1 in their best-of-seven opener, marked by more than 30 penalties.

Sunday, Springfield is at Cleveland and Hershey at Buffalo.

DETROIT (CP) — King Clancy, so the story goes, never won a fight in the National Hockey League. He was involved in all sorts of scraps and usually had to be rescued by a teammate.

A few times they let the Ottawa Irishman duke it out with battles and Clancy ended on the bottom looking up.

He recalled his battling the other day when someone mentioned the ruckus at Chicago where coach The Blake of Montreal Canadiens took a poke at referee Dalton McArthur, "but it isn't getting much sympathy from Clancy, former referee.

Spurs Trim Chelsea 4-2, Wed, Wins

LONDON (Reuters)—The battle for the English First Division soccer championship warmed up Friday by Tottenham Hotspur defeated its London neighbor, Chelsea 4-2 at Tottenham.

But the Spurs' nearest rival, Sheffield Wednesday, also won, beating Newcastle 1-0 at Newcastle.

The standing remained the same at the top of the First Division — Tottenham with 56 points and Sheffield Wednesday with 52, both having seven more games to play in the 42-game schedule.

At the bottom of the standing Preston and Blackpool bid to get out of trouble. A 2-0 win over Manchester United took Blackpool up two places and a 3-2 victory at Manchester City took Preston off the bottom two places, which it occupied by Newcastle.

Ipswich increased its advantage at the top of the Second Division to three points by beating Middlesbrough 3-1. Second place Sheffield United was idle.

That "new team in the old city"—Washington Senators — has been making its presence felt in the Grapefruit League this spring.

For a franchise that started from scratch and picked players out of a grab-bag pool of players, the newcomers have progressed remarkably well in the baseball exhibitions.

The Senators clobbered Kansas City A's 13-3 Friday at Pompano Beach for their sixth victory in the last seven starts. They won-lost record 11-6, second best among the 10 American League teams.

The "old" Washington franchise has been moved to Minnesota's Twin Cities.

Camilo Pascual, Dave Stenhouse, Willie Tasby and Pete Daley provided the batting punch in Washington's 15-hit outburst. Each contributed three hits with Long and O'Connell collecting homers.

BEAT YANKEES

In two games, Pittsburgh Pirates won their second game this spring from New York Yankees, as Bob Friend pitched a blanked Indianapolis of the American Association 3 - 0. Cleveland Indians edged Toronto of the Pacific Coast League 4 - 3 in eight innings at Miami. Detroit Tigers whipped Baltimore Orioles 6-3. The Pirates posted their 15th victory in 21 games in maintaining their world series supremacy over the Yankees.

Harvey Haddix yielded three hits and an unearned run in seven innings to gain the verdict.

Mickey Mantle of New York was sidelined with a pulled stomach muscle.

Bob Purkey's three - run homer in the eighth inning accounted for all the Reds' runs against Indianapolis.

GOES INTEGRATE

Pittsburgh went the distance for the Tigers and limited the Orioles to five hits, struck out nine and walked one.

Milwaukee Braves obtained pitchers Max Surkont and Seth Morehead from Chicago Cubs in exchange for infielder Andre Rodgers and Daryl Robertson.

Milwaukee manager Charlie Dressen said, "Morehead could be just the relief pitcher we have been looking for and Drabowsky could give us an extra starting pitcher."

Director Would Like to See Govt. TV Channel in States

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — One of the men who helped develop U.S. television would like to see a government channel in the United States.

"The air belongs to all the people," says director Delbert Mann, "not to Madison Avenue."

Mann is directing a movie called Lober, Comp Back, for which Doris Day and Rock Hudson play a couple of Madison Avenue account executives.

Before he came to the movies and won his best director Oscar for his first picture (Marty), Mann was one of television's bright young men.

He and producer Fred Coe, from 1948 on, turned out some of TV's best drama shows on the old Television Playhouse. Then Mann teamed with Paddy Chayefsky to deliver such TV classics as Marty, Bachelor Party and Middle of the Night, all later made into movies.

WANTS OWN TERMS

Mann has become one of the movies most successful directors but declares he would return to his old medium — on his own terms.

"Madison Avenue tends to ride with the herd," says Mann, "and that means riding toward mediocrity."

"I'm not saying all westerns or private eye shows are mediocre — some are very good — but the air should not be saturated with them. There are millions of people who enjoy cultural entertainment too. And the air belongs to them too.

"If I want to listen to Leonard Bernstein and the New York Philharmonic, I should be able to get it in prime evening time instead of Sunday afternoon."

Most of the U.S. TV cultural programs are relegated to Sunday afternoon, a time when cash - minded sponsors figure most people are any place but in front of their TV sets. TV programming, as a result, has made Sunday afternoon into an intellectual ghetto.

Mann believes that a government channel would eliminate this and make cultural programs available at night. He believes also that the government channel would help rather than hurt commercial TV.

"The government could subsidize a full length performance of the Metropolitan Opera whereas a commercial sponsor would find it too long — hair to sell detergents or cigarets."

CHRISTENDOM

Cross in his stocking feet, as a sign of penitent humility, at the tomb in the Church of St. Paul.

Then the 79-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church prostrated himself, and kissed the marble slab at the foot of the shrouded Cross.

Millions of Christians and Americans marked the occasion, in churches small and large. In many areas, huge outdoor services were scheduled for Easter morning.

In Havana Cuba Friday, Roman Catholics turned out by thousands Friday night for the annual Good Friday procession.

The showing served as a dramatic response to the Fidel Castro regime's anti - clerical campaign.

Church officials, who are at odds with the government, estimated 30,000 persons jammed the streets around Our Lady of Charity Church in downtown Havana at the outset.

Thousands more joined with processions as it wound along a route that took it through narrow old Havana streets.

Participants, carrying lighted candles, sang hymns and prayed aloud along the way.

Wintry weather hit many areas of Europe as pilgrims flocked to the great Christian shrines for Good Friday services. Rain and blizzards turned out on weekend holidays.

Long-distance marches protesting nuclear weapons were on in England, West Germany and the Netherlands.

Across Canada most churches held added extra services to accommodate those who confine their church-going to once or twice a year and many churches plan sunrise services outdoors.

Sunday will see the conclusion of two pilgrimages by Canadian Roman Catholics.

CARRY CROSS

In Montreal three women and 31 men are carrying a 110-pound wooden cross along a route that will end on Mont Royal with mass at the trailer-chapel of Rev. Paul Aquin, C.S.C.

And on Vancouver Island, 12 men are carrying a 120-pound cross to Hatch's Corner in Nanaimo, where Msgr. A. G. Baker blessed the cross before pilgrimage began. Both treks began Thursday night.

Your Car

Gas Gluttony Bad Driving Habits Cause

By EUGENE S. MILMOE

Although there are dozens of reasons why a car may be a gas glutton, those which are frequently responsible for foster conditions beyond the control of the car maker or the service man.

In brief, fuel appetite depends on the way the car is operated and cared for. Constant high speeds; sustained idling; short distances, frequent stop-and-go driving; erratic acceleration, cutting the engine for faster warm-up (cooling when attempting to start, are common faults. Other causes, although not operating habits, must also be blamed on the owner and care the car.

Include under-inflated tires, dirty air cleaner, no-thermostat, fouled or worn plugs and points, incorrect timing, inadequate lubrication, overloading, improper tune, improper driver mistakes, high gas consumption is rarely due to defective parts of "lemons" but rather placed off the assembly line.

C. M. asks: "What causes corrosion in the cooling system?"

(A) The natural impurities in water plus lack of rust and corrosion inhibitors, failure to drain and flush properly, or air leakage in the system.

From G. G.: "I happened to check my front wheels the other day after a 15 - mile trip and noticed my inner tube quite hot around the bearings. Should this be?"

(A) Normally, they will get considerably hot. If the heat becomes excessive between the bearings, the bearing lubricant, or the brakes could be in need of attention.

M.E. writes: "A month ago, I brought a '59 four door hardtop. It's equipped with power steering and I noticed that it steers really in one direction but back the other. What is wrong with it?"

(A) In the power steering system there are two valves, valves (distribution and reaction). When they become clogged, this condition can result. You mechanic can easily correct this.

S. G. asks: "My car was stalling frequently and the dealership diagnosis was a binding carburetor float which is repaired. What does this float do?"

(A) It controls the amount of fuel entering the carburetor bowl and maintains the correct level. When inoperative or defective, flooding or fuel starving results.

FLOODS SUBSIDE

poured into 800 homes, causing an estimated $80,000,000 in damage.

In the flood-weary south, hundreds of persons evacuated their homes in southern Mississippi and western Alabama as a deluge of spring rain forced overflow water into lowlands.

Most of the evacuees were among those who were driven out by floods just five weeks ago along the Leaf and Chickasawhay in the Hattiesburg, Miss., area.

The weather bureau reported as much as eight inches of rain fell in some areas Friday. Flooding and evacuations were also reported along the Yazoo, Pearl, Luxapallila, Tombigbee and Tennessee rivers. Most are expected to crest Sunday or Monday.

In western Alabama, some Tuscaloosa streets were under as much as a foot of water.

The turbulent weather pattern spread thunderstorms over most of Florida with rain, hail, snow and sleet northward to the Ohio Valley, lower rural Lakes, Pennsylvania and New York. Philadelphia, Pa., added three inches of snow to its six-hour period during the night.

Science at Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Making a planet breathe, finding the root of humor, making "no smoking" signs in space.

INHOSPITABLE PLANET

The planet Venus is perhaps less hospitable than the space between it and earth. It is too hot for liquid water or for life. Its atmosphere likely has no water vapor, nitrogen and carbon dioxide, but little free oxygen. In short, it is a stifling; choking hades.

But Dr. Carl Sagan of the University of California says it may be possible to change all that. Perhaps some life can exist high in the Venus atmosphere just under the clouds that cover that planet. If this cooler area were seeded with blue algae, these tiny one-celled earth plants might grow rapidly, breathing in carbon dioxide, breathing out oxygen.

With carbon dioxide reduced, the planet would lose some of its insulation and heat would escape out to space. As the planet cooled, water vapor would fall as rain.

Then, says Sagan, man can decide who to send to Venus: a nuclear scientist, or a deep sea diver.

ABOUT HUNGER

Where does hunger come from?

In some animals, at least, its roots are in a dual control centre deep in the brain. Part of this area—in the hypothalamus—appears to govern the basic process of eating. But just behind it, a region in the medial forebrain bundle seems to provide the great drives of hunger. And they seem to work hand in hand.

In animals which have already had a full meal, electrical stimulation of the basic eating drives them into voracious feeding, even breaking a barrier of electric shocks to get to the feeding device. But damage the hunger-drive area, and fully fed animals refuse even appetizing food.

Stimulation will drive them across the barrier, and will eat only if they don't have to work for their food.

NO SMOKING

Space travellers may be smokers on earth, but in their rocket ship they'll have to observe the "no smoking" signs.

The air purification system will probably be taxed to the limit just providing clear air to breathe without filtering out cigaret smoke, say experts at Aerojet General Corporation.

RAWDON

42 Pound Wolf Shot At Harold

RAWDON —Mr. Gordon Scott of Harold R.R. 1, who resides on the 7th line concession, Rawdon shot a wolf in his laneway at 10 a.m. one morning, recently. His son, Howard, said he was father in finishing off the animal. The wolf weighed 42 pounds and is now in the safe keeping of the Tweed Game and Fisheries Department. It is understood there will be a bounty of $65.

Mr. Scott has been at home with a heart condition. He had received several queer tracks around his premises and his surmise proved correct when he bagged the wolf. Deputy is the teacher at Harold public school.

ATTACKS ON

Friday and declare:

"My advice is for people not to sound off before they have all the facts."

Hiestand described society members as "violent, emphatic, dedicated anti - Communists" with not more than two percent possible extremists.

He said criticism of the group by congressmen, other public figures and newspapers was part of a "pro - Communist smear" and was proof that the society was successful in fighting communism.

Hiestand said Welch's remarks about Eisenhower had "been made several times" and were taken out of context by critics of the society.

In reply to questions, Hiestand said he didn't know how many members or chapters the society had, but he did know the goal was 100,000 members this year.

Hiestand also said the society was not a secret one but the identity of members was kept confidential to protect them from possible persecution and attack.

Focus on Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Aluminum in your sleep, the allergy to old dust, tooth decay and teen-age drinking.

SLEEP ALERT

Part of your thinking brain may be wide awake while you're asleep.

British researchers ordered a group of sleepy volunteers to rules their hands whenever they heard their own names. Then, a tape recording of 36 names in random order was played. The volunteers fell asleep listening to the tape recording, but many awoke with automatic hand movements when their names came up on the record.

DUST TO OLD DUST

It's the old dust around the house that sets allergy sufferers to sneezing, sneezing and itching, a chemist says.

House dust breaks down with time into the irritating products that cause the trouble. Fresh dust doesn't have the same effect, Dr. Arthur Lieter of Oregon State College told the American Chemical Society.

TOO MUCH, TOO SOON

Teen-age alcoholics: Where do they come from?

A Boston study of 30 teenage problem drinkers found these facts:

Almost all the fathers and some of the mothers were alcoholics. Often the father had deserted, leaving the family nearly destitute. The pattern of excessive drinking was apparent before puberty. Most of the alcohol was stolen. Outstanding personality traits: Hostility, depression, impulsiveness and sexual confusion.

FEEL GOOD FAST

Worried about feeling low? Have a good brazing medical checkup.

Regular checkups, besides being a good way to prevent trouble, make you feel healthy as well, a British doctor suggests.

For of us—even the healthiest in mind and body—come out of a good medical examination without a feeling of elation, he says. Reason: We've been assured that our body's complex parts are intact and functioning well.

TOOTH DECAY

With fluoride dentifrices, good brushing techniques and the amount of time the teeth are exposed to the dentifrice are factors in how effective they will be in preventing tooth decay, researchers report.

In addition, brushing with fluoride dentifrices will enhance the efficiency of fluorides applied to your teeth by a dentist, a recent dental research meeting was told.

STILL IN HARNESS—Charles W. Keech, 86, a harness-maker for 76 years, thinks he could have been a good surgeon because of his facility with knife and needle. He runs a harness shop in Enterprise, Ont. Mr. Keech, shown at work while pet cat Polly looks over his shoulder, say business is excellent. (CP Photo).

Flourishing Harness-Making Business Still Operating

ENTERPRISE, Ont. (CP)—Charles Wellington Keech, 86, works eight to nine hours a day at his flourishing harness-making business, eats whatever he wants and enjoys a little drink "when it comes my way."

He was 10 years old when he left school and went to work in his father's shop on Main Street in this community about 25 miles northwest of Kingston.

He sold his first set of team harness for $38. Now the price is $125, with show trappings running as high as $250.

Mr. Keech runs the only harness shop in the area with the assistance of his son, Walter, 35. "We've got more than we can do all the time," he says, "but the years have changed it from workhorses to ponies and racehorses." Rather sadly he reflects on the fact there are fewer than five teams of work horses left in the area.

"The farmers are buying their milk. What in the world is their idea with all that good, summer pasture going to waste? Some buy their potatoes. They don't bake bread. How lazy can you get?"

Mr. Keech enjoys hard work, as does his sister, Joanna, 90, who runs a hotel in the village.

The old harness-maker speculates that he might have made a good surgeon.

"I'm pretty handy with the knife and the stitches. I think I'd do all right in the operating room."

The Misses Edna and Cathy Hubble spent Sunday in Toronto.

FROG SOUND

The carpenter frog is said to have a voice resembling the blow produced by hammering a long nail into heavy timber.

Scoharie

"Now let the heavens be joyful,
Let earth her song begin,
The round world keep high triumph,
And all that is therein;
Let all things their sounds increase
Their notes of gladness blend,
For Christ the Lord is risen,
Our joy that hath no end."

SCOHARIE — Mr. Theodore Foster, Miss Norma Foster, Mrs. Ann Coltedge, Miss Mary Huff and Mr. Rodney Huff were Friday evening dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Foster, Ann and Randy.

Belly Landing Made Safely As Wheels Lock

Plane With 49 Aboard 4 Hours Over Airport

MONTREAL (CP) — A tense four-hour drama over Montreal International airport at suburban Dorval ended happily seconds before 11 p.m. EST Sunday night when a Trans-Canada Air Lines aircraft made a belly landing after developing landing-gear trouble.

With 42 passengers and a crew of seven aboard, the four-engined turbo - prop Vickers' Vanguard made what passengers labelled "a perfect landing" and wound up at the end of the runway with bucked propellors and little other damage. There were no injuries.

Sparks flew from the runway as the plane's fuselage touched down and scraped along 1500 feet of tarmac but from the main airport terminal it looked like a normal landing except for milling ambulances, fire trucks and airport officials.

The plane, Flight 761 from Tampa, Fla., arrived over Montreal airport nearly 50 minutes ahead of its 7:20 p.m. scheduled landing time and finally crash-landed at 10:59 p.m. after the crew had worked feverishly to try to lower the faulty left landing-gear.

KEEP MOS AWAY

More than 25 ambulances and countless fire trucks converged on the airport and RCMP and Quebec Provincial Police, helped by Montreal and suburban police prevented a mass of sightseers from approaching as the aircraft circled overhead.

The Vanguard in TCA service since Feb. 1, was the fourth TCA plane in less than a month to develop landing-gear trouble.

There weeks ago a Vanguard turbo - prop Viscount landed safely at Montreal airport after cockpit panel lights

BOSTON (AP) — "There wasn't a whisper. Everyone was waiting to see what would happen."

That was one passenger's description of the tension aboard an Eastern Air Lines jetliner Sunday night as the big turbo-prop plane — with a damaged tire on one of its dual nose wheels — slid down for a safe landing on a foam-slicked runway at Logan International Airport.

The jet in motion extraordinary disaster measures at Logan, including 30 fire trucks, ambulances and hundreds of police.

Tension mounted as the big plane circled Boston for two hours and eight minutes to use up fuel. When the plane finally touched safely down the runway through 1,500 feet of foam the relief felt like a load lifted. The landing, on all three wheels, was at 10:38 p.m. EST.

Jane Stein of Scarsdale, N.Y., a pretty Bryn Mawr University freshman, burst off the plane, threw her arms around the first man she saw, a reporter, and kissed him soundly. "This is how I feel," she explained.

HELD BREATH

Miss Stein told what it was like aboard the plane:

"Everyone sort of held their breath. . . . There was a moment of complete silence as the plane came in to land after heading for a foam cover for the field.

"We could feel the wheels touch down and I could feel the tension increase. There wasn't a whisper. Everyone was waiting to see what would happen.

"When we felt the plane come down and roll to a stop, we broke into yells and cheers as we realized everything was all right."

British Secret Service Hunts Radio Signalling Red Ships off Holy Loch

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain's secret service is searching for a radio believed to be beaming messages to a Soviet trawler fleet operating near the U.S. nuclear submarine base at Holy Loch, the London Daily Telegraph reports today.

The newspaper in a front-page story says security officials in the Glasgow area were trying to pinpoint signals from an unknown source strong enough to reach the trawlers, believed outside the three mile limit.

"The trawlers are in the area which (U.S. nuclear) submarines armed with Polaris missiles must pass through after leaving Holy Loch," the paper says.

ICE CONTINUES TO GRIP COAST IN MARITIMES

Ships Having Hard Time to Reach Port

HALIFAX (CP) — The Maritimes have shaken the worst effects of a week-old snowstorm, but ice continues to grip the coast.

The 40,000-ton liner Empress of Britain sails into the ice-bound Cabot Strait today in an attempt to reach Quebec City. The icebreaker Norman B. MacLean will break a path for her as far as Anticosti Island.

All CNR ships working between Nova Scotia and Newfoundland now are operating from Mulgrave, N.S., rather than North Sydney, N.S.

The 8,000-ton ferry William Carson was the last to switch to the new route, 70 miles longer. The change was made on Friday after the ferry was blocked for a week in the ice of North Sydney with 70 passengers aboard.

Ice off the northern Cape Breton coast is described by veteran mariners as the worst they remember.

The icebreaker Wolfe is to make new efforts today to free the CNR freighter Cabot Strait and the coal carrier Nova Port.

Chill Winds, Rain, Slush Fail to Dampen Spirits

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Winter clung to Canada during Easter, but chill winds, rain and slush failed to dampen the spirits of church goers, ban-the-bomb marchers and Easter parades.

Sunrise services across the country were generally well attended, though some people at outdoor services took part from the comfort of their cars.

In regions where Easter bonnets didn't have to be protected by umbrellas the wearers had to clutch their finery away from high winds.

The five services — Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver, Winnipeg and Regina — demonstrations were staged Saturday to protest nuclear arms. No incidents were reported in the marches.

In Edmonton 1,500 attended a sunrise service sponsored by the eight Lutheran churches in the city at a drive-in theatre. About 1,000 attended a similar service in a Halifax school auditorium sponsored by the Shriners while the Salvation Army conducted outdoor services.

About 100 attended an interdenominational service at London, Ont., but many remained in their cars.

Quebec City Archbishop Maurice Roy, Roman Catholic Primate of Canada, celebrated mass at the basilica and Anglican Bishop Russell Brown led services in the 150-year-old Holy Trinity Cathedral.

Drizzle soaked the west coast and only 5,000 attended the interdenominational service at Empire Stadium. The service, sponsored by the Shriners and Pacific National Exhibition usually attracts 10,000.

Alberta and Saskatchewan had sunny skies and though Albertans moved on to golf courses, Easter parades in Moose Jaw, Sask., were more fun than spring fashions.

The weather was most miserable in the Maritimes where rain and snow fell in many areas while others were still digging out of last week's snowfall.

'Ban-the-Bomb' Parades Held in Many Communities

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Anti-nuclear weapons demonstrators marched Saturday in centres across Canada.

In Regina, Premier T. C. Douglas told 450 ban-the-bomb marchers the main hope for world peace lies in nations surrendering their national sovereignty to a world authority with powers to maintain and enforce peace.

Other anti-nuclear demonstrations were held in Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver, Winnipeg and Regina.

Addressing men, women and children from the steps of the Saskatchewan legislature, Mr. Douglas suggested four steps Canada could take to promote a world authority.

Canada, he said, should withdraw from the NORAD defence agreement with the United States and insist all defence parts be under United Nations auspices; ban nuclear weapons from its soil; give leadership in UN negotiations for progressive disarmament with inspection; and turn over all its weapons to the UN for use in enforcing world peace.

GUARD DOUBLED AS KENNEDYS ATTEND MASS

4 Cuban Suspects Under Surveillance

PALM BEACH, Fla. (CP)— The security guard was doubled when President Kennedy and his wife attended Easter church services, but the president himself would not comment on alleged kidnapping-assassination plots against his family.

The vacationing president, who arrived last Thursday, will return to Washington Tuesday. Originally, he had intended to fly back today.

Pro-Castro Cubans allegedly were behind plots to kidnap Kennedy's four-year-old daughter Caroline or assassinate the entire Kennedy family—father, mother, Caroline, and John Jr., four months old.

Secret service agents have had the Cuban suspects—three men and a woman—under around-the-clock surveillance in this area, but have held off arresting them for lack of evidence.

A crowd estimated at 1,000 had assembled on the lawn and in front of St. Edward's Catholic church to hear Mass before the president and Mrs. Kennedy arrived Sunday — about 10 minutes late — for 10 a.m. Easter mass.

CHANGED ROUTE

The first precaution—the secret service took disappointed the crowd—was the usual route from the Kennedy winter home was changed and the president and his wife slipped in through a side door of the church, almost unnoticed, while the spectators waited on the outside.

Well in advance of the Kennedy's arrival, secret service men augmented by local county and state police had filtered into the crowd to keep a close watch for any potential troublemakers.

Secret service chief U. E. Baughman said the security force he directed on the church was about double the usual size.

Ordinarily one or two secret service agents all immediately behind the president during mass. Sunday the agents stood

Kennedy Will Visit de Gaulle Late in May

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP)— President Kennedy will fly to Paris May 31 for three days of talks with President de Gaulle, the president's vacation headquarters announced today.

In reply to questions, press secretary Pierre Salinger said Kennedy has been invited previously to visit other European capitals in connection with the trip.

The Paris visit will be Kennedy's first trip abroad as president. However, he will go to Canada in advance of going to France.

Plans for a trip to Ottawa to address parliament were announced earlier. Indications then were that Kennedy will go to Ottawa perhaps two weeks before visiting Paris.

23,000 Marchers Reach London After 4-Day H-Bomb Protest Trek

LONDON (AP)—More than 25,000 bedraggled marchers against the H-bomb shuffled through London's west streets today for a mass rally in Trafalgar Square climaxing a four-day protest trek through the English countryside.

Steady rain poured down on the long columns of chanting demonstrators heading for a linkup in the heart of the capital.

The weather dampened enthusiasm for the rally, which had been billed as Britain's biggest ever demonstration against nuclear weapons.

More than 15,000 banner-waving marchers, with mounted police at their head, tramped into central London at the end of a 54-mile trek from the gates of the Aldermaston atomic weapons factory.

Another 8,000, chanting "ban the bomb" and other slogans, converged on the square after marching from a U.S. air base in Buckinghamshire.

In the square itself, beneath Nelson's Column, a crowd of about 2,000 waited to greet the two processions.

Organizers had hoped for a turnout exceeding the 70,000 demonstrators who assembled a year ago at the end of the annual Aldermaston-to-London trudge.

But the rain kept thousands of supporters away.

Earl Home and Rusk To Draft Reply to USSR

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign Secretary Earl Home of Britain arrives here tonight to start preliminary work with U.S. State Secretary Dean Rusk on a Western reply to Russia's note on Laos.

They are expected to have a draft of the reply ready by the time Prime Minister Macmillan reaches here late Tuesday afternoon for conferences with President Kennedy.

The president and the British prime minister are scheduled to meet four times: Wednesday morning and afternoon, Thursday afternoon, and Saturday morning.

Russia, in its note to Britain last Saturday, agreed with the British proposal to hold a 14-country conference on the political future of Laos, but remained vague on the timing of a cease-fire, which the British, backed by the United States, proposed as a first step.

Kennedy said the Soviet Union's reply "offers hope that a way can be found to establish a neutral and independent Laos through negotiations."

SAYS TOO VAGUE

But Soviet vagueness over a swift cease-fire "contains certain observations with which we cannot agree." The president did not specify the Soviet observations.

The president did say further:

The Soviet reply appears to be a useful next step toward a peaceful settlement of a potentially dangerous situation."

Documents Date To 2nd Century After Christ

JERUSALEM (AP) — Legal documents dating to the second century after Christ have been found in caves in the Judean wilderness.

Dr. Yigael Yadin, professor of archaeology at the Hebrew University, said between 40 and 50 papyrus documents and scrolls were discovered on the western shores of the Dead Sea.

The same caves last year yielded letters from Shimon Kochbah, leader of a Jewish rebellion against the Romans.

Yadin said the legal documents exceeded in "clarity of language, beauty of writing, wealth of detail, all documents hitherto discovered of that period."

One scroll was found in a bamboo reed and Yadin had to enlist the help of a brain surgeon to extract the document intact.

Other papyri were found written in Greek and Aramaic. One rare find was written in Nabatean, an ancient Semitic language.

Yadin said another expedition in the area turned up 40 pre-iron age objects. He described this find as "one of the most important discoveries ever made in this country, shedding new light on the material culture, art and way of life of the fourth millenium before the Christian era."

No Evidence Of Sabotage

ERLANGEN, Germany (AP) Investigators probing the crash of a Czech airliner in which 52 persons were killed said today they have failed to find evidence of sabotage aboard the British Ilyushin-18 turbo-prop.

Discovery of a pistol at the wreckage led, to speculation there might have been gun play aboard the four-engined plane shortly before it crashed north of here on a flight to Africa last Tuesday night. Cause of the crash is still undetermined.

The state attorney Saturday ordered the victims' coffins ready for shipment to Czechoslovakia — reopened for x-ray examination for evidence of shots, shot wounds of particles of explosives.

Prof. Max Weiss, University of Erlangen professor who directed the examinations, said his investigations failed to turn up any evidence of foul play.

AMODEO'S GROCERY STORE ENTERED OVER WEEKEND

Thieves Saturday night forced their way into Amodeo's grocery store on North Front St. and made off with about $20 in cash and cigarets. Police said the intruders smashed the glass in the front door of the store to gain entrance.

Later the street-side canteen at Amodeo's was also found to have been broken into, but nothing was missing as the place had been closed for the winter.

Three Injured, Driver of One Car Charged

Three persons were injured and admitted to Belleville General Hospital Saturday morning following a two car collision on a main intersection in the village of Trenton.

Injured in the mishap were Alvin Craig, 24, and his wife, Edward Comerford, 26, and Raymond Comerford, 16, of Ralphbide, driver of the second car.

Comerford was knocked unconscious by the force of the impact, while Mr. Craig was thrown 15 feet from his car when the door flew open. The Comerford youth has internal injuries, while Mr. Craig has cuts and bruises on his body and had his knees cut with glass. His wife, since released from hospital had three teeth broken and suffered a cracked jaw.

Police Chief Walter Higgins said the Comerford youth was being charged with careless driving, failure to stop at a stop street, and with driving without a licence.

Mr. Comerford was westbound on Dundas Street when his car collided with the Craig vehicle southbound on Front Street. The force of the impact spun the Comerford car around facing the opposite direction.

Six Admitted To Hospital After Collision

Six persons were admitted to Belleville General Hospital early Sunday morning following injuries suffered in a two-car crash at Latchford's Corners on Highway 14, half a mile north of the city limits.

Provincial police said that a northbound car driven by Alec Fleming of Springbrook, collided with a westbound auto driven by William Stanley of Trenton.

Injured in the accident which occured shortly after midnight were Alex Fleming and his passenger Miss Rosanne Vandervoort, daughter of Stirling.

Passengers in the second car injured were: Marjorie Hewison, of Frankford; Dianne Broughton, Bancroft; Marie Conley, and Ronald Conley, both of Frankford.

Miss Vandervoort, a grade 9 student at the hospital, was the most seriously hurt. Her father, Lorne Vandervoort, said today that Miss Vandervoort was still on the critical list with severe head injuries.

Picton Teacher Killed as Auto Strikes Train

A Picton school teacher, Thomas Hayden, age 61, was instantly killed, while his fourteen-old son, Mark, escaped with but minor injuries when their car ran into the side of a CNR passenger train west of Kingston Saturday night.

The boy was taken to King-ston CNR passenger hospital for treatment. Mr. Hayden lived at 73 Ferrows Ave., Picton.

Provincial police said the accident occurred about 8.40 Saturday night when the Hayden car ran into the side of the second section of westbound train No. 493. Mr. Hayden was said to have died of a broken neck.

Police believe that Hayden either failed to see the westbound train after waiting for an eastbound train to pass on the adjacent track, or decided into the side of the moving train.

City Churches Crowded for Easter Services

It wasn't ideal weather for showing off that new Easter bonnet but Sunday saw city churches crowded for annual Easter services.

Practically every church in the city was filled to overflowing as city church goers listened to sermons based on the Crucifixion and Resurrection of Christ nearly two thousand years ago.

Windy weather accompanied by snowflurries discouraged any attempt at the afternoon Easter parade although few of the hardy Braved cold winds to take a stroll along the city's main street.

Easter traffic on the highways was heavy with 401 highway being particularly busy.

With the exception of one two car crash Saturday night north of the city there were no serious accidents.

March Warmer Than Last Year, About Average

Weatherwise March weather wasn't so bad!

During the month residents were given a few false hopes for an early Spring and then at the end there was a relapse of winter with the snow falling out something on the rough side.

Water filtration plant records during the temperature for the month was a balmy 58 degrees and in contrast the thermometer sank to a mere two reading, with a mean temperature of 30.8 degrees.

There were 1.18 inches of rain and 19.1 inches of snow for a total precipitation of 2.09 inches.

A year ago the maximum temperature was 48 degrees with a low of seven below and a mean two reading, with a mean temperature of 30.8 degrees. Rainfall was only .11 inch, snowfall 5.5 inches and total precipitation 1.73 inches.

The average for the past ten years has been a maximum reading of 53.1 degrees a minimum of 22.9 degrees and a mean of 38.6 degrees. The average March rainfall over the same period has been 1.55 inches with 12 inches of snow and a total precipitation of 2.78 inches.

Large Patches Of Open Water Appear in Bay

Chilly weather and snowflurries may seem to belie the fact that Spring has been here officially for nearly two weeks and that July 1st is not far away gone, but the Bay of Quinte is beginning to take on a spring-like appearance.

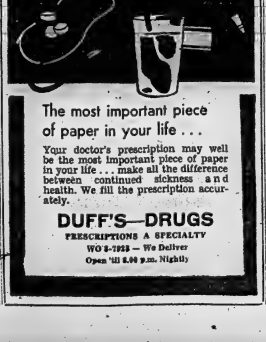
During the past few days large and large patches of open water are appearing in the winter's ice cover, with the water extending east from the Bay Bridge to beyond the Belleville General Hospital.

West of the Bay Bridge the ice is rapidly rotting away, with a stretch of about a mile on water appearing by Friday midway between Belleville and Trenton.

But the stiff southwest wind of Easter Sunday speeded up the impending breakup, and the ice was pushed down by about Jones' Creek. Also ice is beginning to pile up on Zwick's Island.

The ice on the Belleville inner harbor is also very thin however. The breakup time here will be signalled by the sinking of a derelict scow on which a local baseball club has sold raffle tickets.

Keep Close Look For Outbreaks Of Cg Gang Wars



Tweed village police, assisted by provincial police from the district, are still keeping a close watch in the Tweed district for youthful gang wars which have threatened to break out during the past two or three weeks.

Police Chief Walter Higgins of Tweed says that gangs of youths from Tweed from as far north as Harlowe, and from the Belleville area, are involved.

A week ago police from the area received word that Tweed to be ready for a threatened all-out gang war which failed to materialize and since then there have been isolated incidents of rowdyism in cafes and other public places.

Saturday night provincial police were on the watch for a threatened disturbance at a Northbrook dance.

A week ago several youths were picked up by police and taken to Tweed to go following questioning.

Turnout Cut To Lowest Total in Years

The old girl whistled in with winds which gusted to 32 miles an hour. That, plus a 45-degree temperature and a brief flurry of snow, cut the turnout to the lowest total in years.

In previous years, when upwards of 1,500,000 persons participated in the annual fashion parade, movement along the seven-block parade route was a slow and tedious process.

The gusts knocked down police barriers, whipped one woman's 10 - inch - high bairdo, shredded Easter lilies in Rockefeller Center and forced the hatted to clutch at their heads.

Pink and lavender were favored for women's Easter outfits, although observers agreed a soft pink appears the favorite color this spring.

BELLY LANDING

indicated the landing-gear had not locked.

Last week a DC-6 jet aircraft had similar trouble in Edmonton and Friday a four-engined Super-Constellation had to make an emergency landing at the United States Air Force base near Goldsboro, N.C., for similar trouble.

Captain E. T. Marriott of Sale d'Uba, Que., pilot of the aircraft, said he used all prescribed methods to try to lower the fault in landing gear "including dives and pullouts."

Finally, after consultation between Montreal control - tower and the Vanguard manufacturers—Vickers - Armstrongs (Aircraft) Ltd., Weybridge, Surrey, England—it was decided to try a belly-landing.

Captain Marriott said "The landing was not as rough as I expected it to be."

A veteran with 28 years TCA service, the first officer, Capt. W. E. Barnes said the crew was not concerned particularly with the landing gear supply "although this was a factor we had to take into consideration."

Captain Barnes, a former Canadian Press staff member in Halifax, praised the competence. In 1945 he piloted a TCA four-engined North Star from Montreal airport with engines afire. "Only one fellow got singed on that one," he said.

He said foam was not used on the runway at night because the landing was on a paved strip and the ground was damp between the runway and dispersal area. "We felt this would prevent sparks from igniting their vapor. Fuselage touched the ground."

CHEER THE CREW

Passengers cheered the crew as they disembarked at the crash-landing. A TCA doctor examined the passengers and found only a few bruises. Others made into an airport waiting room and reported no injuries besides "jarred nerves."

Scotch and Cognac helped passengers calm their nerves after their troubles while the plane circled Toronto.

But, said Stewardess Hilda Neilson of Dalhousie, N.B., "we literally had to break the door open."

The bar already had been sealed in preparation for landing but, when it developed that the plane was going to remain in flight for a while, drinks became legal again and the problem was how to get to them.

"The pilot should get a raise," said Peter S. Hindle, employee of a Montreal shipping company, "it was a wonderful landing. I have experienced worse landings with the wheels down."

Hugh McCormick of Montreal, publisher of the weekly Notre Dame de Grace Monitor, said he had flown all over the world "but I've never landed on four wheels better than tonight."

Mrs. Eileen Cox of Ottawa said: "I just don't like I wouldn't panic but I couldn't. I guess I had complete confidence in TCA."

Sheila Boland, Montreal office worker, said the passengers were told right after the plane left Toronto the city that it was having trouble with the landing gear.

"There was no panic at any time," Miss Boland said, "and not many people seemed to know any excitement. The stewardesses kept us informed and they seemed to be cool and competent."

both imprisoned in Sydney harbor.

The icebreaker Sir William Alexander was sent from Halifax Sunday night to assist the 900-ton pulp carrier Suzanne Smith, stuck in ice near the Strait of Canso. She was reported to be in imminent danger.

In Prince Edward Island, a state of emergency declared Wednesday because of snowbound, blocked roads, was lifted Saturday. And on the Magdalen Islands, 100 miles further north in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, heavy aircraft landed Saturday with passengers, mail and badly needed supplies.

The Islands, which are accessible only by aircraft in winter and by navigation, by the air strip had to be cleared of snowbanks up to 30 feet high before the planes could land.

Income Tax Explained

Designed and written for the taxpayer who is not in a position to employ the services of a professional accountant or Tax Office Service.

In our previous article we dealt with, to a limited extent, the eligibility of foster parents and nieces and nephews who may qualify for exemption.

In this article, we will outline the qualifications necessary for foster children now allowed by the tax office. Foster parents to qualify must be receiving or paying claims for from a child and such child must be wholly dependent on them for support. Now that this child has grown up and supports is required to support him, he may lawfully claim them as dependents. He can claim one of them for the equivalent to married status if he is single and the $1,000 exemption. For the other one he may claim the dependent's exemption of $500. A point to be remembere here is that foster parents do not have to be of opposite sexes. This will apply where two aunts raised a child with one of them working and the other at home keeping house, both qualify as foster parents. A claim such as this should be covered in a letter attached to the return, giving full details.

In numerous cases a married taxpayer will take in a niece or nephew in order to support them. The parents of the child taken by the taxpayer are still living and can take the child back whenever they wish. In such cases the niece or nephew does not qualify as adopted and no claims will be made by the taxpayer. They claim a niece or nephew the taxpayer must have a full custody and control of such child. This means that there must be no claims by or persons who can rightfully take the child from them. For income tax purposes "adopted" must be either in law or in fact. When in doubt consult your nearest Income Tax Office.

Question — I lived with my aunt and uncle while attending university my parents were not in a position to pay for my higher education. Can I now claim them as dependents, as I am now married and have a family?

Answer — No. They do not qualify as your dependents.

Question — My wife and I have taken in a nephew to put through university as my parents cannot afford to give him higher education. Can I claim $500 for him on my tax return?

Answer — No. He does not qualify as an adopted child.

ferred at the President's vacation headquarters in Palm Beach, Fla., over the latest in the Kremlin's reply to the call for a three-day peace plan to end the Laos crisis—the first fire, reactivation of the Indo-Canada - Poland commission for communication and finally the hailing of the 14-country conference.

WANTS CEASE-FIRE

Sunday night: Washington officials indicated that the United States would insist on an effective cease - fire before it entered any international conference to settle Laos' fate.

"The first thing required is a cessation of hostilities to permit negotiations to go ahead," Secretary of State Dean Rusk told reporters.

Rusk also has contended that "the first thing required is a cessation of hostilities to permit negotiations to go ahead."

Officials indicated that the Laotian crisis will be only one of the issues Kennedy and Macmillan will discuss.

MOSCOW (Reuters) — British Ambassador Sir Frank Roberts called at the oviet foreign ministry today for further talks on the Laos crisis.

The move came amid Western plans to ask Russia for ratification of its agreement on a cease-fire as outlined in a note handed over to Roberts Saturday.

A British spokesman said the ambassador discussed the Soviet note with Vassily Kuznetsov, first deputy foreign minister. The spokesman was unable to give any details of the conversation.

The Soviet note agreed that Britain and Russia, as co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference on Indochina, should issue a statement for a cease-fire in Laos and call a 14-country conference in Poompenh, Cambodia.

But the note did not directly answer Britain's proposal that a cease-fire be established before an international conference is held.

Diplomats here summed up Saturday's Soviet note as a "moderate, reasonable and encouraging" reply to the March 23 British proposals for ending the civil war in Laos.

The Soviet note agreed to the three main points in Britain's proposals—a cease-fire, revival of the 1954 truce supervisory commission on Laos and the calling of an international conference.

Eugenio Balzan Prizes Greater Than Nobel

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Three new prizes richer than the Nobel awards are expected to be given for the first time late this year for major contributions to mankind.

The Eugenio Balzan prizes have been established in memory of a former Italian newspaperman who amassed a great fortune through wise investment of his termination pay.

Prizes totalling more than $500,000 every year will be awarded for contributions to peace, humanity and brotherhood among nations, literature, philosophy and the arts and (3) science and medicine.

A foundation presided over by the presidents of Italy and Switzerland has worked out almost all of the details except where and when the first awards are to be announced.

RECEIVED LUMP SUM

Balzan, born in northern Italy of middle class parents, did odd jobs in his youth and eventually became a good reader over at Corriere Della Sera in Milan, Italy's biggest and most influential newspaper. He rose to be reporter, was transferred to Switzerland to cover and became business manager. Tiring of the strictures of Mussolini's fascist government, he left in 1932. After 35 years with the paper he received a lump sum in liquidation pay.

He moved to Switzerland, invested his money and became an important financier. Under Swiss banking laws, the exact size of his fortune is secret, but it was estimated at from $13,000,000 to $20,000,000 when he died in 1953.

One source said the foundation's capital now is considerably larger than the 60-year-old Nobel Fund which started with $6,000,000.

STRENGTHEN DEFENCES

JOHANNESBURG (AP)—The defences of South Africa and the neighboring mandated territory of Southwest Africa are to be strengthened by construction of 160 new "watch towers" built like pillboxes and protected by wire fields and ditches. The Johannesburg Sunday Express reported that Defence Minister J. J. Fouche said in an interview the watch towers will stretch from Cape Town in the south of Windhoek, capital of Southwest Africa, in the north.

Gizenga's Friend Will Try To Have Him Join Federation

By DENNIS NEELD

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP) — In the role of mediator, a Lumumbist official who is on speaking terms with President Joseph Kasavubu's central government arranged a peace flight today to the rebel stronghold in Stanleyville.

Cleophas Kamitatu, president of Leopoldville province, said he would sound out Antoine Gizenga, head of the Stanleyville regime in Oriental province, about joining the confederation of Congolese states that The Congo's anti-Communist political leaders are putting together.

The UN Congo command agreed to give Kamitatu transportation to the rebel capital 725 miles northeast of Leopoldville, but it is not a party to any negotiations.

Gizenga, who calls himself premier of all The Congo and is recognized by the Communist bloc and a few African states, has snubbed previous bids to the rebel confederation.

Kamitatu said he was understanding his mission as a neutral and not as an envoy of the Kasavubu government.

Kamitatu and Gizenga were both political associates of the late Patrice Lumumba, who had advocated a strong central government rather than a loose federation of states. But independence Lumumba's government was unable to hold The Congo together.

When Lumumba was ousted by Kasavubu last September, Gizenga fled to Stanleyville, set up a rump government and claimed the premiership that the nationalist leader was slain. Lumumba died in Katanga province.

Officials indicated that the Leopoldville and once was arrested by the central government. Gizenga then he has declared a grace of co-operation with Kasavubu and wants to be the leader of the Tananarive proclamation of confederation.

It is the second ambitious effort yet to bring about a reconciliation in The Congo.

Reports from Stanleyville, however, say that Gizenga's regime is still opposed to bringing the Congo constitution to set up a federal government in the place of the republic government.

The UN command delivered the flight request from UN Secretary - General Dag Hammarskjold dealing with the Katanga army's recapture of Manono, in north Katanga, last week from Lumumbist forces who invaded Katanga earlier this year.

Presumably Kamitatu will also deal with the Katanga government's reaction to transport facilities for the peace mission.

Despite the presence of the Indians, units of the Katanga army today continued their drive into the Lumumbist-held Kabalo area. Military officers said the Katanga troops in the area under Tshombe's forces had taken the town of Kabalo, an important rail junction 150 miles south of Elisabethville which is in the hands of anti-Tshombe Baluba tribesmen.

Twenty-three white South Africans arrived in Elisabethville by plane from Johannesburg today to join the Katanga army's white mercenary force. The number of South Africans serving in Katanga is unofficially reported to be nearly 130.

ries—as co - chairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference that partitioned French Indochina and gave Laos independence—to issue an appeal to the Laotian factions in the jungle civil war to stop fighting.

President Kennedy cautiously called the Soviet note a "useful first step toward a peaceful settlement of a potentially dangerous situation." There was a feeling among Western sources in Moscow that the president's cool reaction was influenced somewhat by U.S. Ambassador Llewellyn Thompson's talks with Soviet Premier Khrushchev Saturday within an hour after the note was delivered to the British.

FIGHTING EASES

Fighting in Laos subsided Sunday after a flareup late last week that aroused fears the Communist rebels were making a major drive before peace talks begin.

The Soviet note—in effect acknowledging the fall of The Thorn and the shoring up strongholds—Kam Keut and Muhassy.

North Viet Nam denied Sunday that the Vietminh troops helped the rebels capture The Thorn 40 miles northeast of Vientiane. But the Hanoi spokesman made no mention of Kam Keut, 130 miles east of Vientiane, and Muhassy, 22 miles from the Mekong River South of Kam Keut.

French Cautious

Though one can understand and appreciate the reasons behind the U.S. attempt to obtain a stern policy statement from the South-East Asia Treaty Organization, it is probable that France is on the side of the angels in holding out against a firm commitment.

The theory that the way to avoid war is to draw a distinct line and let the possible enemy know that stepping over it will have dire consequences makes eminent good sense—but only if certain conditions are met. One of these conditions, it seems to us, is that the possible enemy must be in full command of events. We have very grave doubts whether either the Communists or the Western democracies hold a tight rein on the factions they are backing in the Laotian civil war.

Under circumstances like these, the French insistence on refraining from taking a definite stand on future policy until all the conditions under which this policy would be applied are known and can be carefully examined would appear to be the course of reason.

For instance, Thailand, at the opposite extremity from France in the range of opinions represented at the SEATO conference table, has indicated it is prepared to go to the aid of any Laotian government which included the Pathet Lao, the rebel faction now receiving Communist support in the very nature of things, it may well prove that inclusion of representatives of the Pathet Lao is essential if any stable government is to be established in Laos and peace restored. What hope will there be of reaching a compromise if, at the outset, the SEATO powers insist that only the factions they support can be included in the government? Aside altogether from the question of whether, in the face of such insistance, the Laotian government could be considered to be truly independent, there is the additional question of whether it would be even nominally neutral.

The French, who have much more experience in this part of the world than either the U.S. or Britain, having formerly ruled the area, at least deserve a careful hearing before their attitude is rejected.

Old Headache Returns

There was a time when the annual deficits of the Canadian National Railways were regarded as one of Canada's major headaches.

Then came the war, with the railways playing major roles in the movement of men as well as goods, and the lush post-war years.

The wheel, however, has swung full-circle and we now have those CNR deficits with us again, that for 1960 being a record, $87,496 777. It would be a mistake, though, to picture the CNR plight today as worse than during the depression years. True, the worst showing of the CNR in the "dirty thirties" was still some $6,000,000 better than the deficit for 1960, but $41,000,000 in 1931 and 1932 was a lot more money—from the standpoint of purchasing power—than was $67,000,000 in 1960.

The CNR has undertaken far-reaching changes in organization, marketing, technology and methods, which may, together with an improvement in general economic conditions, provide at least a partial answer to its financial problems.

Meanwhile, though, we think it deserves congratulations for an unusual change in policy — a change which may not mean a great deal in dollars and cents but which, nevertheless, is indicative of an admirable state of mind. Its annual report was smaller in size and in the number of pages. "Gone," reports The Canadian Press, "were the flashy, glossy presentations of past years, with pictures of company executives and new equipment. In their place was a compact booklet with four graphs and 28 pages telling how and why the CNR fared, as it did in 1960, and what is being done about it."

Excellent!

Believing as I do that man in the distant future will be a far more perfect creature than he now is, it is an intolerable thought that he and all other sentient beings are doomed to complete annihilation after such long continued slow progress. To those who fully admit the immortality of the human soul, the destruction of our world will not appear so dreadful.
—Charles Robert Darwin.

Men do not understand books until they have had a certain amount of life, or at any rate no man understands a deep book, until he has seen and lived at least part of its contents.

Letters to the Editor

Urges Protestants Aid Catholic College

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I am sure it is a matter of great regret to responsible citizens of this city and area on the front page of a Toronto newspaper associated with the suggestion of further taxation for Catholic schools.

I refer to Tuesday morning's Globe and Mail with reference to the Nicholson College financial assistance problem.

I am sure that none of us of any faith wish it to be said or even suggested that a Protestant majority would not desire to help our good Catholic citizens in any worthy project.

It would appear that certain municipal councillors felt that as a matter of principle it would be unfair to the general public taxes to the assistance of a private institution and voted against it and with that principle we do not quarrel; whereas others very properly pointed out that public money had been granted recently to Albert College which is maintained by United Church private high school.

The circumstances of the request of our city council in this situation may not constitute a precise legal parallel and no doubt councillors acted in accordance with excellent principles in which they believed, and which quite clearly had nothing to do with religious differences.

Unfortunately the result is that the United Church asked for help and received it and the Roman Catholic church did not, and this simple fact remains as a possible source of embarrassment and adverse publicity.

It would seem to the writer that municipal (public) council will very properly upon reconsideration and while upholding all proper principles, realize the fact that in future we cannot be blamed or censured in any way accede to any such further requests for assistance to private denominational schools and then demonstrate the love, affection and respect in which we hold our fellow Catholic brothers and the harmony which has always existed between us by making this grant.

Failing the above I would like to see a subscription opened by Protestants with the public laymen of the Protestant sentiasgoe to raise a like sum.

In the world of 1961 the the which unite Roman Catholic and Protestants are much more important than are the small areas of disunity.

Let us demonstrate that unity in a suitable manner at this time.

Successful Living' Column Wins Praise

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer:

I was very interested to read your new feature column "Successful Living" by Mrs. Clark, a Canadian social worker. What a pleasure it is to see features written specifically for Canadian readers by a professional person who knows our problems and who has obviously experienced and well qualified for the job. Mrs. Clark appears to have heart as well as knowledge and humor.

I am constantly encountering people who are readers of "Successful Living", because of their human interest value. I am also very aware of the number of people who are in real need of guidance and help with human problems and of whom the material presented in your columns can be of significant assistance.

I feel we are to be commended for presenting a Canadian feature of such good calibre and I hope more of our papers will follow your example.

Congratulations to you and Miss Doris Clark.

Yours sincerely,
D. G. Gardner,
Ontario Department of Public Welfare, 8 York Street, Toronto.

Editor's Note: Thank you, Mr. Gardner. The Ontario Intelligencer is the first newspaper in our Province to select Miss Clark's column for publication. Mrs. Clark's wife Moore writes the column on food and cooking which appears as a daily feature in this newspaper.

Suggests Four Steps To Cure Dog Menace

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

Attn: Mayor and City Council

What is being done about the "dog" situation in Belleville? I would like to have the West Hill included along with all the rest of the city in regards to this intolerable situation. It seems it is a situation that has gotten completely out of control as far as Belleville is concerned. Let us not hide under the false impression that this is the fault of the dog catcher. This seems to have been the usual excuse that has floated in the past. What about the irresponsible and thoughtless owners of these dogs. It is from these people that the situation which now faces the citizens of Belleville arises. These people love dogs, as long as they do not have to be responsible for them. Turn them loose and let the neighbors, the postman, the paperboy and the delivery man be tormented and bitten. This is the motto these "dog lovers" believe in. This city used to be called Belleville the Beautiful but more and more it is getting to be Belleville the Barren. It isn't worth while to plant flowers and shrubs and spend beautiful dollars a year for them just to have them destroyed by dogs running at large.

I believe there are two or three steps that can be taken by you, Mr. Mayor, and also you, City Council, that would eliminate this deplorable situation.

1. Don't fire the dog catcher—give him some support via a strong bylaw so he can act speedily.

2. Increase the fine for a dog that is impounded to a minimum of $5.

3. Increase the dog tax fee—which at the present time is a small dog tax—and make it more adequate.

4. Try (if possible) to educate these irresponsible owners that they do have a responsibility and obligation to their fellow citizens and neighbors.

A Responsible Citizen
(but a pretty irate one)

P.S. — Let's have your answer, Mr. Mayor and City Council.

Wants Teeth Put Into By-law on Dogs

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I see by the Intelligencer of Tuesday last that dogs are again causing trouble in the East Hill district, as well as in Thurlow Ward.

Municipal by-laws forbid owners to allow their dogs to run at large, but it is anything over done about this daily nuisance?

We are supposed to have a city dog catcher. I wonder is he ever does anything about this menace? Day after day I see the same dogs roaming the streets — damaging property and leaving filth behind them! It is quite plain that the owners of these animals let them loose deliberately in defiance of the by-laws. Some dogs are let out in the early morning before anyone is about after dark and others allowed to roam at will all night long.

May I suggest that the following remedies be tried?

1. Put the dog catcher all the extra help he needs for as long as he needs it. There are lots of men in the city who could do with a little work. Then let him get busy and see necessary to clean up the situation!

2. Double or triple the fines. Put some teeth into the by-law.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR EARL L. DOUGLASS

ALL THROUGH THE YEAR

Easter is past. How far is it part? How far are you going to allow Easter to be the passage-of hope and power to think into the background of your thought and living?

What a great occasion we make of it—especially on Easter Sunday! This is precisely as it should be. But let us not forget Easter Sunday as soon as it is past, than we never really understood Easter in the first place. If Jesus Christ had died on the cross and this death had not been followed by a resurrection, Jesus would be classed with Socrates, Plato, and the best of the Jewish Prophets. But certainly no religion would have arisen as the result of His life and teaching.

The early Christian had a message which amazed and overwhelmed all who heard it. A man suffered the ignominy of the crucifixion in Jerusalem, had been buried, and after three days had arisen from the dead! He was the Son of God! Man of God? Was not this the promised Messiah, the Saviour of the World?

This was the torch which a determined, happy generation of Christian believers carried through the unbelieving world. It wrought wonders. Faith in the resurrection will produce similar results today.

Let us not say that Easter is past. Let us remember that every day is Easter for the truly committed Christian.

Strictly Personal

Something For Nothing Not Valued

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is a melancholy fact of human nature — to be learned from the Nazi not only at the expense and annoyance — that people do not appreciate what they get for nothing.

I have learned this over the years in connection with public appearances. When I speak before some "charitable" group without a fee, my reception is considered a contribution to the charity, but is taken for granted.

In most cases, I am scarcely thanked for my time and effort, when I lecture for a big fat fee, but I get letters of appreciation with gratitude, flattery and flowers. An expensive talk is "worth" much more than a donation of most people.

This is not, of course, some truth to this. Most speakers who are willing to perform for nothing have to do so as a grind — they are selling some doctrine, or political position, or are just verbosity, or simply looking for personal publicity. Such persons rarely make good speakers, anyway.

Yet, no matter how effective the performance, if the featured speaker has contributed his services, he is somehow downgraded in the eyes of the audience. You get nothing for nothing" seems to be the attitude.

Actors hate to play benefits for this same reason, and audience which knows an actor is donating his services to a cause tends to be much more critical and indifferent than one which is watching a highly paid performer.

I am sure that a large part of this disaffection felt by most of Europe and Asia for our investigation of Congress is the result of our not demanding a quid pro quo. If we had set up some still conditions for foreign aid, had insisted that the governments of the world put up some right specifications of good behavior when funds, or if generously would be better liked and respected.

For the same reason, we often feel closer to someone who gives us a gift. The donor of a gift is, after a while, felt to be rich. ("He gives away money to ease his conscience"), while the maker of a loan is felt to be friendly. We incur certain vaged obligations to any person, and favors we cannot repay soon become psychological burdens.

Whatever is worked for and paid for (either in money or in suffering) is held valuable. We men have long known this deep psychic truth, and their elaborate ways with a man are neither coyness nor coquetry, but the pure knowledge that a cheap and easy conquest makes the victory seem worthless.

It's Not Unusual for Tall, Thin Boy to Have Small Heart

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: My son, 13, recently took a routine chest X-ray and the doctor at the clinic says he has an unusually small heart for a boy his age. Our own doctor told not to worry about it; he has examined my son dozens of times and thinks the clinic is wrong. He is a very tall, thin boy, longish neck. Should the doctor says could account for it. H. R. J."

Tall, long-chested people are apt to have hearts that appear small on X-rays. Contrariwise, people may appear to have slightly enlarged hearts. In such variations, I would place great confidence in the observations made over a period of years by one doctor with your regular physician — and not be unduly disturbed by the fact that your son doesn't happen to be average. He may, most likely, be healthy, not average. You want his heart to behave, and so long as it behaves well, it doesn't worry because it happens to appear larger or smaller — on an X-ray plate.

"dear Dr. Molner: A 16-year-old boy I know has a cyst on the side of his neck. It is there at times, increases in size, and has been drained occasionally by squeezing. It is not painful. What is the earliest time a cyst can be removed? Is it an operation that requires a specialist? R. H."

A cyst such as this appears to be — a sebaceous cyst — is not ordinarily a matter for concern. Your regular doctor can tell you if by chance it requires a specialist's care.

Squeezing is a politest as well as perhaps a harmful action, since a cyst tends to keep filling up again as long a the lining remains. Removal is the only probable cure. Barring unusual circumstances, it can be removed during an (A branchial cyst may also occur in the neck, but these are due to faulty development at that point.)

"Dear Dr. Molner: Is it possible for a person who has never had diabetes to have it only during pregnancy, then lose it afterward? — M. H."

Yes, this is possible, but it does not change the fact that in other circumstances, once you have diabetes you never "cure" it; you merely control it.

The belief in "temporary diabetes" in pregnancy is most often found in women who are much over-weight; have a family history of diabetes; have had large babies (over nine pounds at birth), have had difficulty such as miscarriages or stillborn babies. It may be that none of these applies to this case. It is, however, possible for the classic signs of diabetes to appear sugar in the urine, high blood sugar) which disappear after pregnancy. A word of warning: It is quite common for those women to become diabetics later in life.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have had canker sores for years. What causes them? I have been told they come from nervous stomach, from acid stomach, etc. I eat plenty of fruits and vegetables. — Mrs. R. C."

Canker sores can be stubborn and hard to cure. Among things that can cause them are allergy, irritation from a jagged tooth, sensitivity to toothpaste of some particular type, or mouth weak, chronic gum infection.

Another important possibility is that the trouble could stem from some fault in vegetables which one happens to have an unsuspected allergy. (Conversely, I have seen cases recently where taking more citrus fruits, Vitamin C, caused canker sores to disappear.)

Are you bothered with ringing in the ears? If so, write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, P. O. I have, with others, been feeding many of "my" birds all through the past long weeks of cold and snow. I have a full sorry for them all about my home. Their tiny legs didn't seem to provide enough support for them, but now, once again, Mother Nature is bringing Springtime to us all.

I awake these sunlit mornings to the chorus of bird song gives me much cause for rejoicing and meditation. I think about the tree branches outside my bedroom and library windows. I like to just listen to these tiny creatures of my handiwork as they proclaim "Hot" and "cold" wars may come and go, but the birds still proclaim their rights, cut their lives in work, family raising, and in song content. They are brave too and bear hardship without a whimper. They inspire bravery and reverence in the soul. Just listen to them!

Spring is more fascinating and enjoyable than the study of bird life.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

There was a medical convention at the hotel I was staying in last week and I was struck by the number of doctors there who were elderly men yet straight and fit, with wholesome color in their cheeks and the lively eyes or far younger men in most other occupations. I recalled I mentioned this to one of the doctors I knew, and suggested it was due to the fact that doctors are their own private patients, and observed the rules of health.

"Not altogether," said my friend, "but it is a fact that a considerable extent to the almost continual activity of the doctor's life. Unlike businessmen, lawyers and most men in the upper brackets of income, who spend most of their time sitting (usually) and carrying on occasional spurts of activity at odd or none times of the day, doctors have to keep physically moving. They are making calls. They are in hospitals. They are walking around. Most of them for some reason or other, don't go in for sports, or anything but regular jours. —

That is the reasons women live longer than men is that they have always been on the move around the house. Human beings are designed, physiologically, for activity. Most of the descendants of uncounted generations of people who survived because they were active. The inactive ones didn't survive to propagate.

"Actually," said the doctor, "it is the fidgety man who lives longest."

27 Fatalities Across Canada Over Holiday

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Deaths caused by highway accidents during Easter weekend crept within three of the minimum predicted by the Canadian Highway Safety Council but did not exceed the tolls of the previous two years.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. local times Thursday to midnight Sunday showed 27 traffic deaths reported in six provinces.

Last year Easter weekend produced 27 deaths. Thirty-five died on the roads during Easter 1959.

All the Maritime provinces were free of road deaths. Nine were reported in Quebec, seven in Ontario, four in Saskatchewan, three each in Alberta and British Columbia and one in Manitoba.

Altogether 31 Canadians died accidently during the holiday. There were two deaths by fire, one in Quebec and a child in Nova Scotia. Three persons were drowned, one in Quebec and two in British Columbia. Two persons were shot in Saskatchewan and one was struck by a train in New Brunswick.

In Saskatchewan a man was crushed to death when a car jack slipped and a child hanged himself while playing in British Columbia.

The figures do not include industrial accidents, known suicides or natural deaths.

Ontario dead:

William Nicolaf Chernoff, 25, of Ottawa and Gordon Wayne Dolan, 19, of Cumrobin, killed Friday in a highway crash near Fitzroy Harbor, about nine miles northeast of Arnprior;

Malcolm Harding, 36, of Stouffville, killed when his car crashed into a utility pole Thursday.

Everett Rutter, 68, of Trenton, struck by a car Thursday as he walked along a street;

Mrs. Nora Adeline Travis, 40, of RR 3 Prescott, in a two-car collision Saturday night four miles south of Smiths Falls;

Thomas Hayden, 41, of Picton, Ont., when his station wagon struck the engine of a westbound freight near the Kingston city limits Saturday night.

Mrs. Marjorie Fraser, 25, of London, in a collision on the city's outskirts during a Sunday night snowstorm.

Shell man checks furnace which pre-heats the petroleum before it is fed into "cat-cracker"...Stand nearby, and the roar sounds like holes.

BULLETIN:

Shell heats petroleum to 900 degrees and shatters its molecules—to bring you today's Super Shell for top performance

Among the nine ingredients in today's Super Shell is "cat-cracked" gasoline.

This is gasoline that has literally been cracked under 900-degree heat and catalytic action, shattering heavy molecules into lighter ones. Result: a super-octane ingredient that adds the purr of power to top performance.

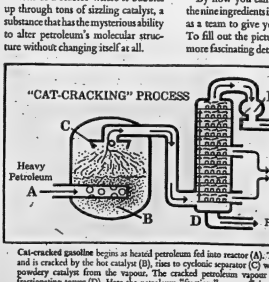
THE "CAT-CRACKED" gasoline in today's Super Shell has a lot to do with the way your engine purrs. But it has nothing to do with cats.

Cat cracking is the process by which this ingredient is made. It starts in what is officially called a catalytic cracker. Oil men call it "cat-cracker" for short. It is a towering, roaring complex that actually converts petroleum's heavy molecules into livelier, lighter ones. The process is fascinating.

A sizzling mystery

Petroleum is first heated to a temperature of about 800 degrees. Hot! But that's just the beginning.

The petroleum is then piped into the bottom of a reactor where it bubbles up through tons of sizzling catalyst, a substance that has the mysterious ability to alter petroleum's molecular structure without changing itself at all.



The catalyst is so hot that it actually raises the petroleum's temperature another 100 degrees—to a torrid 900 degrees F. At that point, the molecules shatter—and when the petroleum emerges in the form of a vapour, it has changed completely. It then condenses to become Super Shell's basic power ingredient—"cat-cracked" gasoline.

Other advantages

By using different catalysts and different processes, Shell refinery experts give you a variety of advantages. See ingredient #9 for one of them.

"Cat-cracked" gasoline also helps ingredients #3 and #4 to give Super Shell outstanding anti-knock quality.

By now you can begin to see how the nine ingredients in Super Shell work as a team to give you top performance. To fill out the picture, here are some more fascinating details.

Cat-cracked gasoline begins at heated petroleum fed into reactor (A). There it vaporizes and is cracked by the hot catalyst (B), rises to cyclonic separator (C) which removes the powdery catalyst from the vapour. The cracked petroleum vapour then rushes into fractionating tower (D). Here the petroleum "fractions" come off the line according to their boiling points (see legends). The most volatile fraction-gasoline is condensed at the top (E). From every gallon of petroleum fed to the cat-cracker, only about half a gallon ends up as cat-cracked gasoline—an expensive process, but worth it for the top performance it gives today's Super Shell.

Ingredient #2 is TCP for power, mileage and longer plug-life,‡

Super Shell now contains an even better version of this famous additive. It was originally developed for use in aviation gasoline.

TCP additive can give your car up to 15 per cent more power; 17 extra miles per tankful; and make your plugs last twice as long.*

Today's aviation-grade TCP does this by neutralizing the harmful effects of engine deposits. It stops them from glowing when hot—a major cause of power loss. And it also stops them from diverting your spark—a major cause of "missing."

Ingredient #3 is heavy alkanes—for both power and economy at all speeds

Shell scientists will tell you that gasoline can be too sensitive.

That's their unflattering description of a gasoline that performs well enough when you're driving slowly but causes knock and loss of power at higher speeds.

Super Shell behaves itself at all speeds. Shell scientists insist on it. They "discipline" today's formula with heavy alkanes, a high-octane ingredient that is notably insensitive.

Result: Super Shell gives you top performance whether you're in slow traffic, or accelerating, or cruising on a superhighway.

NOTE: Heavy alkanes also have the advantage of lowering your fuel consumption. Your engine can use them up slowly—and still give you all the power you need.

Ingredient #4 is anti-knock mix for extra resistance to knocks

You might suppose that a pair of high-octane ingredients are enough to give you knock-free performance. But Shell scientists have ears like musicians.

They insist on adding a special anti-knock mix. A mix, so effective, one teaspoon per gallon can boost anti-knock rating by seven points.

This mix has the tricky job of regulating combustion so that Super Shell gives each piston a firm, even push—rather than a sharp blow which would cause a knock.

Ingredient #5 is butane for quick starts on icy mornings

By itself, butane is so volatile that it would actually boil in your refrigerator. In Super Shell, it helps your engine fire in seconds.

Think what this means in cold weather. Your battery is relieved of strain—and so is your patience.

NOTE: Super Shell is primed with butane all year round. In winter, Shell scientists simply increase the quick-start dose.

Ingredient #6 is mixed pentanes for fast warm-ups on cold days

Pentanes are made by tearing gasoline apart, much as you split logs into kindling to start a log fire.

In this case, the "logs" are petroleum's heavier hydrocarbons. A special process transforms their molecules from slow-burning "logs" to quick-firing "kindling."

NET RESULT: Fast warm-up and top performance in a hurry.

Ingredient #7 is an "anti-icer" to stop stalls due to carburetor icing

Super Shell's formula is adjusted up to eight times a year for your area to beat the weather. Whenever the temperature is likely to be less than forty-five degrees, an anti-ice ingredient is added.

Why add anti-icer at forty-five degrees? Because even then, frost can form in your carburetor just as it does in your refrigerator. It can choke your engine dead.

Ingredient #8 is gum preventive to keep the fuel system clean

Even the purest gasoline can form gum when stored. This can clog carburetors, fuel lines, and pumps.

With Super Shell you don't have to worry. A special gum preventive does the trick.

It acts like a policeman controlling a mob. Keeps an eye on unstable elements—stops them from clotting and forming gum.

Super Shell makes gummed-up engines a thing of the past.

Ingredient #9 is Platformate for extra energy, more mileage

It takes one million dollars' worth of platinum catalyst for Shell to produce its Platformate. But fortunately for you and for us, this precious stuff can be used over and over again.

The whole platinum process, which gives Platformate its odd name, reforms petroleum into super-energy components—such as benzene, toluene and xylene.

These three alone release 7 per cent more useful energy per gallon than the best 100-octane aviation gasoline.

But make no mistake. This is not untamed energy. Far from it. The super-energy of Platformate is harnessed by the eight other ingredients in Super Shell, where it behaves so well you scarcely know it's there. That is, until you note your extra mileage. After that, there is no doubt.

Test Super Shell for yourself

Try Super Shell next time you fill up. You'll soon feel and hear a difference in the way your engine runs.

That difference is top performance.

Women Plan for Universal Franchise in Civic Elections

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—Civic voting rights of Canadian women depend on where they live. This is shown in a survey by Mrs. Hendry O. McClellan, chairman of laws for the Saint John Council of Women.

The council and affiliated societies plan to ask for the universal franchise in civic elections throughout New Brunswick.

"It would seem that we do not have the universal franchise simply because we, the citizens, have not asked for it," Mrs. McClellan said. "Since housewives are the largest group without the right to vote, it would seem that we, as a council of women, should take the lead."

The survey showed that British Columbia, Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba have a Cities Act granting voting privileges in all cities of those provinces.

All have universal franchise, meaning that all residents—not only civic taxpayers—may vote in civic elections, subject to the usual limitations of age and citizenship. In Saskatchewan, residents may vote at 18.

MAY TAKE TIME

"In New Brunswick," the survey report said, "there is no universal franchise in any civic voting jurisdiction whose act we have studied.

"In Saint John, Moncton and Edmundston, voting rights are restricted to those who pay taxes. Fredericton and Lancaster have enlarged the traditional voting rights by allowing wives of resident taxpayers to vote. Campbellton allows residents to vote if they are in receipt of a yearly income of not less than $600."

Letters asking information on the subject went to the mayors of all provincial capitals and all six New Brunswick cities. Replies came from 13 of 15.

The mayor of Halifax said his city appears the only one in Nova Scotia not having universal franchise. "A city council committee is studying the matter."

The report said many Eastern cities apparently haven't the franchise because they were established when civic affairs dealt largely with matters relating to property ownership. In contrast, many Western cities from their beginning were called on to handle matters affecting all inhabitants.

TIMELY REWARD

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — Dianne Davis, 8, was presented with a wrist watch for saving Roger David, 2, after he fell into the Gananoque River.

Grandmother, Housewife Elected Chief of Reserve

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mrs. Gertrude Guerin, 43-year-old grandmother, housewife, and vice-president of Southlands elementary school, is the first woman to be elected chief of the Musqueam Indian reserve here.

With a friendly manner, cheery smile and bouncing energy, she is well suited for the job requiring a crying shoulder for the personal problems of the villagers and a knowledge of business administration.

Musqueam reserve is a good example of the changing ways of a modern-day reservation. In this area west of the Point Grey golf course not far from the city's centre, back in 1906 the Musquesams turned back explorer Simon Fraser, refused to let him on their land.

Today the band welcomes anyone who wants to make use of their land—provided they take out a lease. Land leasing is the mainstay of the village.

In her first week in office, Mrs. Guerin was handed a brush to help paint the floor of the Musqueam village's old Roman Catholic Church.

RENT FROM GOLF CLUB

There are only about 40 homes, 250 people, the old church and a cemetery. Most families have their own homes and have at least one car.

The men work mainly at longshoring, fishing, or in the mills. The women keep house and the children attend Vancouver public schools.

The chief and two councellors run reservation affairs under the watchful eye of the federal Indian affairs department which must approve all major decisions.

The golf club leased 239 acres and other leases are held by market gardeners and a nursery. New leases for a housing subdivision, a golf driving range and a boat marina are being considered.

Mrs. Guerin says she believes that reservations will be needed as a mainstay for people of her race for at least a generation or two.

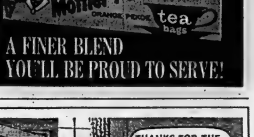
"I hope we can convince all the parents here of the importance of sending their children all the way through school," she said. "The problem is that many of the older people didn't have an education themselves and therefore don't place much value on it."

Hold Good Friday Service

RAWDON — The three appointments on Rawdon United Church circuit gathered on the evening of Good Friday, in Mount Pleasant United Church.

The church was a flower of beauty with Easter lilies and a large white cross.

The pastor, the Rev. W. G. Fletcher delivered the message. The special selections were "There is a Green Hill Far Away," "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" and "Beneath the Cross of Jesus".



Mrs. Donald Heath of Bethel sang "Living for Jesus" with Mrs. Will Heath as accompanist.

Fashionable New Topper

By ALICE ALDEN

If you aren't too keen on the new tent-like or cape coats, there are plenty of slim ones around, and very new-looking they are, too.

Ben Zuckerman does several delightful coats in his new couture collection.

Ready for a stroll on New York's Fifth Avenue—or any other smart thoroughfare—is this coat of beige fleece. Softly shaped in front, it falls straight in back.

The high neckline and short sleeves are new coat signatures.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.

Mrs. F. Y. — The clique is like a Keep Away sign to other girls.

Margery Y. — They can form their own club instead of hanging around ours.

Mrs. F. Y. — My daughter, Margery, is 12. She and two classmates call themselves The Secret Swans. They have all sorts of rituals which keep the other girls in the class at arms' length. For example, they write notes in a code they made up, and they talk (obviously, about the others) in their own variation of Pig Latin. Also, every day they each wear something belonging to the other two.

I've tried to explain to Margery how unkind it is to reject girls on the outside. One of these is Adrienne, who used to be her pal in the lower grades. Adrienne's mother told me that the Swans treat the non-Swans with disdain, and pick on Adrienne, in particular, because of her lisp.

Margery Y. — Adrienne is a schmoe. She just stands around waiting for me to invite her into The Secret Swans. I stopped being friendly with her over a year ago. She has plenty of other friends in the class and they should start their own club. But instead she keeps begging me, "Margie, let me be a Secret Swan." That makes us laugh and say no. So, of course, she feels sore and tells her mother we've mean and horrible.

We have lots of fun with our club. Every day we think up new secrets for just us three to know. Like today we're all wearing red sweaters and silver pins. But none of them are our own.

The Council — In trying to get Margery to understand how hurtful it can be to shut out a classmate, Mrs. Y. is tackling a job of education that might well be re-inforced by the school itself. For some mysterious reason, Margery and Adrienne and their classmates are learning everything about the nature of plants and insects and governments, but nothing about the rules of human nature.

Adrienne, already burdened with a speech handicap, deserves some sympathy and courtesy rather than ridicule and heckling. She, no less than Margery and her chums, is at an age where "belonging" is all certainly. Margery can ease the transition from the old ties to the regrouping which may well make each girl happier in the long run.

Perhaps, Mrs. Y., you might discuss the matter at the local school board, for the sort of Public Relations now being offered in many high schools and most colleges. Concerned mothers like Mrs. A. and well meaning kids like Margery would welcome insight into what makes people tick, presented in suitable installments from Kindergarten up.

For children to study children is no "frill." It's as fundamental as the 3 Rs.

Family Honors Parents on 40th Anniversary

FOXBORO — On March 23, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kelly celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary and enjoyed a dinner at the Queen Motel Restaurant. Their bridesmaid, Mrs. Roy Bartlett, accompanied them.

On their return home they were pleasantly surprised to find their home filled to overflowing with family, relatives and friends.

The Rev. S. A. Kemp was the officiating minister 40 years ago.

The family which consists of four boys and six girls were present at home for this special occasion. They are: Eugene of Halloway; Bill, Ronald and Harold of Foxboro; Mrs. Stafford (Ruby) Colden, Roslin; Mrs. Harvey (Betty) Smith, Halloway; Mrs. Gordon (Madeline) Mitts, Stirling; Mrs George (Dorothy) McClean, Foxboro; Shirley and Helen, at home.

A pretty three-tiered wedding cake centred the table. Mr. Earl Wannamaker was the master of ceremonies and spoke briefly. He called on Violet and Harry to take special chairs of honor and introduced a short program which consisted of a mock wedding; a reading by Mrs Allyn Finkle and music by Messrs. Harry and Lorne Carter. The Kelly family sang "A Mansion Over the Hilltop" and Mrs. Wannamaker favored with music on her portable organ.

Mr. and Mrs. Kelly were the recipients of a large number of gifts, which consisted of a two-piece chesterfield suite, mahogany chime clock, ruby necklace and earring set for the bride and cuff links and matching tie pin for the bridegroom. A number of other gifts and cards were received.

Harry and Violet expressed their sincere appreciation for the lovely gifts, good wishes and hospitality accorded them at this time.

Refreshments were served by the daughters, which included fruit bread, fancy cookies and wedding cake.

sons and a few other girls to some of the non-cabalistic meetings. No longer "best" friends, these two can be good friends. Meanwhile, from widening her contacts and observing how Margery's and her new pals operate, Adrienne may soon find herself the Margin of a new club.

As for "secrets", they're fine as a bond, but not as a weapon. They must be harmless and offer no threat to others, serving only as special indentification among member. Nobody remembers secrets, which, however devlously, lead to good. The "secret word" on Groucho's program, for example, leads to $100.

Mrs. Y. is doing an alert mother's job in calling Margery's attention to the power of a clique to wreak cruelty. Conceivably she can remind Margery of the equal power to act constructively and compassionately, and still have the fun of exclusivity among themselves.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Wagner Shaw

GLAMOR — WHAT IS IT?

The dictionary defines glamor as being "an alluring and often illusory charm." That's a thing certain: You aren't born with it! You have to work hard to attain it. Once attained, the charm that you have acquired has to seem perfectly natural and easy. An obvious attempt to exude "glamor" defeats it's own purpose.

Too often it is assumed that clothes alone make for the glamorous look. They help of course, as I said last week, but one may be the possessor of a fine wardrobe and still be lacking in personal charm.

An extremely necessary part of the formula for glamor is to take into consideration the feelings of other people. Performing daily courtesies in a gracious, thoughtful manner is important. Remember to say the simple little words that mean so much. "Excuse me" "Thank you" and "Please" should be used when needed — not only to those you are trying to impress (such as a new beau) but also to the bus driver or a salesperson or the delivery man. The young lady who aspires to be rated "glamorous" (and who doesn't?) in the eys of a young man whom she has just met, should guard against any of the following jarring notes: Remember that the male should always do the pursuing.

Remember that male should be on a date. Don't telephone just to chat. Let him make all the overtures, or it won't be long before he drops out of the picture. Make sure your gown is suitable for any occasion any a date is forthcoming. Don't make yourself conspicuous by your attempt to look glamorous. Dressing up in a gown that is too slinky or decolletee is only bring embarrassment to the wearer.

Never allow your conversation to revolve around you, or your troubles. Keep general and mutual friends to yourself. Make a point of talking about things that you know are of interest to him.

Watch your dancing manners. Never go under the assumption that dra ping yourself around your partner's neck makes you irresistible. Far from it! Amoving is the better word.

Go easy on make-up. If one must err, let it be on the side of too little, rather than too much.

These are just a few samples of the so-called "little" things without which glamor is impossible. There are many more, of course, but basically the thing to remember is that, to attain glamor, one must have charm. And what is this "illusory charm"? Simply the continuous practice of consideration for, and interest in, others.

Leftover Ham

By Mary Moore

Since I recommended Glazed Baked Ham in the Easter Dinner Menu, it seems logical that I should follow up with some interesting methods of using up leftover ham.

You could make the old dependable Ham Croquettes or Quiche Lorraine Pie but I have a recipe for a Spiced Ham Loaf for you. If you want to glamorize the leftover ham for a company meal you could apply the Apricot Glaze I have described.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

MONDAY

German Cabbage Rolls; Potato Pancakes; Lettuce and Green Onion Salad with Sour Cream Dressing; Dutch Apple Pie; Coffee.

SPICY HAM LOAF:

1 cup soft breadcrumbs. 1-3 cup milk, 2 cups well-packed ground cooked ham, 1 egg, 1 lb. ground raw pork or sausage meat (optional but recommended), 1 tablespoon brown sugar, 1-8 or 1-4 teaspoon ground cloves (to salt).

Soak the crumbs in the milk and mix in all remaining ingredients. Shape into a compact round or oval loaf and place in an ungreased baking dish. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. for 50 minutes. If desired 20 minutes before baking time is up make up and pour over this Apricot - Pineapple Glaze: One-third cup packed brown sugar, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 teaspoon dry Mustard, 1 cup apricot nectar or pineapple juice, 1-4 teaspoons vinegar, 1-2 teaspoons lemon juice. Mix these ingredients. Before pouring over Ham Loaf, carefully pour excess fat from baking pan. Pour glaze over Ham Loaf and bake 20 minutes longer. Lift loaf to hot serving platter. Spoon glaze remaining in pan over ham (avoiding fat as much as possible).

NOTE:

This loaf is good accompanied by a border of broiled tomato halves or baked bananas (see Wednesday, March 13th).

HAM ASPARAGUS CASSEKOLE:

(Note: If you use a casserole for this it should be shallow and big. If you do not want to use a casserole the ham mixture may be served over cooked fresh frozen asparagus tips on toast.

2 cups cubed cooked ham, 1-4 cup butter or margarine, 2 tablespoons finely chopped green pepper, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1-2 cup shredded carrot, 1-2 cup finely sliced celery, 1-4 cup flour, 2 cups milk, 1-2 teaspoon salt, dash of pepper, cooked fresh frozen or canned asparagus tips or pieces, 4 slices toast.

Gently cook green pepper, onion, carrot and celery in butter until onion is clear Blend in flour, add milk and cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until sauce is thickened. Add seasonings and ham and continue cooking to heat through. Arrange 4 toast slices in one layer in casserole, trimming off crusts if necessary to make them fit. Cover each with cooked asparagus tips or pieces. Pour over ham mixture. If desired sprinkle with grated cheese. Bake at 375 deg. Fahr. about 20 minutes or until bubbly and golden.

Retires After 40 Years S.S. Service

ROSSMORE—After 40 years of faithful service in the United Church Sunday School, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Gerow have retired from active service. Mr. Gerow as superintendent and teacher of the Adult Bible Class, and Mrs. Gerow, director of the Cradle Roll, a position which she has held for many years. Several now residing in the village have happy memories of "Aunt Flora" and "Uncle Ted", as they were known to all.

All regret to see them go; but hope that their health will improve and that they will still continue to join the Sunday School whenever possible, wishes congratulating her on Sunday afternoons at three o'clock.

The Sunday School has been re-organized and will meet at a new time on Sunday mornings from ten to 11.

There was a good crowd in attendance last Sunday, and it will continue to grow in the years ahead. The parents are urged to send their children, but better still, to bring them to Sunday School where they may be trained to be followers of the Lord.

Successful Living

To Spank or Not to Spank

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—Is it all right to spank a child? I have heard so much for and against that I wonder. There are times when, I just can't make my little boy obey by talking to him.

Believe me, it hurts me just as much as it does him when I cradle him, but after the screams are over he does what I tell him for a while.—MARY G.

DEAR MARY G.:—To spank or not to spank! Those who oppose any kind of corporal punishment point out that a parent may be taking out her own temper on her child, who is powerless to really fight back. If spanking happen too often, they lose their effectiveness, and the child may get the idea that all disagreements are settled by force.

The only kind of spanking that is to be thought of at all is one sharp slap on the accepted position, never a beating. If it is done at the time of an act of disobedience, it may successfully deliver the message intended. But there are other ways of disciplining which in my opinion are more effective for regular use: isolation until Junior is ready to act in a more acceptable way, in a spot where he can cool down and think it over, often turns the trick. People—little ones and big ones—don't like to be banished from the company of others and this sobers them up.

Remember that your little one really wants to please, understands, and will react to your praise, when he has done well, more readily than to your displeasure.

DEAR DORIS:—I could kick myself the way I act with my best friend. George and I are both 17, and we have gone through public and high school together. His grades are better than mine, but I don't mind that.

My trouble is, I can't resist gloating over him when I win at tennis or bowling, or when a new girl looks twice at me. He says very little and this infuriates me more. Then I go away and feel mean about the whole thing.—GLOATING JOE.

DEAR GLOATING JOE:—Don't kick yourself—find out why you do this. Strange as it may seem, you possibly act superior because you feel inferior. You'd like to show you are a smart fellow and it doesn't quite come off.

This does not mean you are not a smart fellow. You have your own special strong points and that's all any of us have. Often feelings of inferiority come from living in a home where mother and dad think they have to nag their boy into excellence instead of praising him.

One father kept telling his son not to be stupid in the hope of challenging him. But not enough encouragement and hope were given and the young fellow slumped, discouraged, and did poorly all the way through school. This particular young man only began to succeed when he married a girl who believed in him.

Boasting and gloating will turn people away from you. Know your good points and quietly improve on them. Then try turning the tables on yourself and praising the other fellows when you honestly can. You'll find they will get more generous with their praise too, and you won't need to show off.

145 Killed In Earthslide Near Kiev

MOSCOW (AP)—An earthslide killed 145 persons near Kiev, March 13 in one of the worst disasters of its kind in Soviet history, the Kiev newspaper Pravda of the Ukraine reported Friday.

Damage was estimated in the millions of dollars and 143 persons were injured, though 84 have been released from hospital by Thursday, the newspaper said.

Rumors of the disaster have circulated in Moscow for two weeks, but it has nowhere mentioned by Moscow papers, the Soviet news agency Tass or by Soviet radio.

The Kiev newspaper said legal proceedings have been started against "those responsible for the catastrophe" but it did not identify them.

The slide occurred near Babiyard, where the Nazis massacred tens of thousands of Jews and Ukrainians during the Second World War.

It was touched off, the newspaper said, when workmen used faulty technique in filling a ravine partially filled with water. The water washed out one side of the ravine and the earth crashed down into an inhabited area, devastating about 75 acres.

Willy Brandt Will Try To Defeat K. Adenauer In September

By TERENCE DAVIDSON

BONN (Reuters) — Willy Brandt, the dynamic mayor of West Berlin, will make a serious bid to oust West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer from power in elections next September.

In the federal elections due to be held that month, youth is challenging age and experience.

Adenauer, 85 but still vigorous, clear-thinking and a dominant personality, has been West German chancellor for nearly 12 years since the office was created after the Second World War.

As head of the Christian Democratic party, Adenauer has won the last three elections. Under his government, a war-shattered Germany has blossomed in a few years into one of the world's most prosperous nations.

The two candidate are as different as chalk from cheese in almost every respect save one—their loyalty to the Western alliance.

The 47-year-old Brandt has created a heroic public image for himself as a defender of the freedom of West Berlin against Communist pressure. He is growing mayor of that city and the star personality of the opposition Social Democratic party, which has not held office in the post-war years.

Adenauer was born the son of a Cologne government official and received an old-school legal training. Brandt, an illegitimate child born "Herbert Frahm" into left-wing politics in his teens and emigrated to Norway when the Nazis took over.

IN CONCENTRATION CAMP

Adenauer, twice a widower and 21 times a grandfather, was imprisoned briefly in a concentration camp as a result of his opposition to the Nazis. Brandt lies possessing Norwegian nationality, which he now has dropped. He has a glamorous Norwegian-born wife and two young sons.

Physical differences are striking: Adenauer, the old statesman from the Rhineland with his measured, stiekil manner of speech and sly sense of humor, his face seamed by age; Brandt, the husky, red faced, North German, whose public utterances have the urgency of a call to arms.

One major subject of difference between the two men is arms—atomic arms.

Adenauer has said that if "all troops of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization are given nuclear weapons except West Germany, then the Germans will become nothing but cannon fodder for the enemy."

The Social Democratic party congress which formally elected Brandt, as its candidate for the post of chancellor declared:

"The arming (of the German) Federal Republic must not aim at an increase in the number of atomic powers and, by the same token, the provision of the German armed forces with atomic weapons."

West German forces possess dual-purpose weapons capable of using nuclear warheads, but the warheads remain under American control.

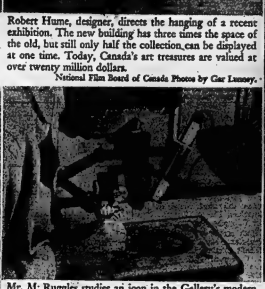
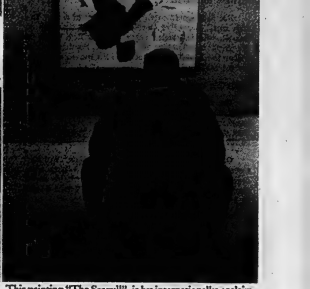
New Gallery Sparks New Interest

Crowds like this are common in Canada's new National Gallery. The glass-walled downtown building attracted a half-million people last year, reflecting a rising Canadian interest in art. There are now many small collectors who set aside a few hundred dollars each year for the purchase of art. The Gallery sponsors lectures, tours, and discussion groups, often in connection with the National Gallery Association, formed by and for people interested in art. It has over 1700 members. Spectators here discuss a touring Van Gogh exhibition, the largest collection of paintings by the great Dutch master ever to come to North America.

Robert Hume, designer, directs the hanging of a recent exhibition. The new building has three times the space of the old, but still only half the collection can be displayed at one time. Today, Canada's art treasures are valued at over twenty million dollars.



National Film Board of Canada Photos by Gar Lunney.



Another exhibition on the move. In the past year, a quarter of a million Canadians shared in the nation's art treasures through thirty-seven travelling exhibitions.

J. R. Harper, curator of Canadian art, admires a beautiful carving from the Gallery's superb collection of early French-Canadian wood sculpture. Paintings by Canadian artists span three centuries and selections from them have been exhibited in Yugoslavia, West Germany, Brazil, Mexico, Italy and England, often on an exchange basis.

Mr. M. Ruggles studies an icon in the Gallery's modern laboratory. In addition to restoring and preserving the Gallery's own works, the department provides technical advice to other institutions both in Canada and abroad. Last year it went to the assistance of Indongsia, who requested advice on art preservation in its hot, humid climate.

This painting "The Seagull", is by internationally acclaimed Quebec artist Paul-Emile Bordeau, who died in Paris last year. He is one of several Canadian artists whose work is being internationally acclaimed. Reactions to this painting vary but critics generally agree it is worth the study given it here.

Canada's new National Gallery is a modern downtown building with a glass-walled ground floor through which may be glimpsed sculpture by modernist Henry Moore, paintings by Canada's "old master" Tom Thomson. Attracted by these and other artists, a half-million visitors flocked to the National Gallery last year.

The Gallery's collection is of acknowledged International stature. A selective buying program with the stress on quality and balance has provided Canadians with fine exemples of many Old Masters as well as leading modern painters, both European and North American.

CANADA'S WAR COLLECTION

The Canadian War Collection (some 4,500 works) can now be displayed to advantage for the first time. Selected paintings are exhibited on the sixth floor of the Gallery. The paintings are changed from time to time so that eventually most of the collection may be seen. They include First World War works by Canada's now world-famous "Group of Seven."

PRINTS AND DRAWINGS

The Department of Prints and Drawings now has over 5000 works, card-indexed and available to visitors and students in the Print Study Room. The collection is respected throughout the art world. To help with identification, the staff has a morgue of 28,000 photographs of drawings. Curator of the department is Miss Kathleen M. Fenwick.

ART EDUCATION

Daily guided tours of the Gallery are only part of the Education Division's work. They sponsor lecture tours by distinguished speakers, adult discussion groups and film showings, as well as training the Gallery's own staff. Colored slides of 83 Gallery paintings are available to museums and universities. A display of 24 panels of photographs and text outlining the development of art in Canada is rented to centres outside of the normal exhibition circuit. Schools and universities may borrow without charge from the Gallery's library of art films.

TRAVELLING EXHIBITIONS

The Department of Exhibition Extension Services, with liasion officers in east and west, last year produced 37 exhibitions which had 166 showings in a coast-to-coast program that is the most highely developed in the world. Improved facilities for shipping and preserving makes possible the circulation of original art, even in freezing temperatures.

"National Galleries seldom maintain activities of this kind outside of the central building," says Dr. Comfort, Director of the Gallery. "The service is unique and valuable."

Judging by the curious—and argumentative — crowds that now fill both the Gallery and the travelling exhibitions, the Canadian people are finding art, too, unique and valuable.

Irish Dead Serious About Reviving Ancient Language

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN

DUBLIN (AP)—The Irish are busy these days—trying to learn Irish.

To help them along, street and road markers are printed in both English and Irish—Gaelic to everyone except the Irish. So are theatre programs, road maps, lottery tickets, railroad timetables, government publications, an increasing number of newspaper columns and signs over phone booths, bus depots, police stations, rest rooms and other public edifices.

Is this another Irish way of giving the English the back of their hand?

Maybe. But the Irish are dead serious about reviving their ancient language.

The constitution of Eire, the 26 counties making up the Free State, provides for two official languages, English and Irish. Irish is a required subject in all public and parochial schools and a speaking knowledge of it is required for appointment to any government job. One out of every five schools teaches all subjects, even English, in Irish.

The rest teach some classes in English and some in Irish.

USED IN PARLIAMENT

Delegates to the Dail, the Irish parliament, often deliver their most sulphurous speeches in Irish because it is more suited to invective and more impressive with the home folks.

One of the linguistic glories is to walk into a Chinese restaurant in Dublin and hear a patron sing out: "A fhreastalaidhe bheir duinn roinnt egg foo yong ma'se do thoile."

This is not Chinese. It's Irish, for, "waiter, bring us the egg foo young."

The Formoza - born waiter, who speaks English with a brogue devoid of "r" sounds—it plays bob with his "Erin go bragha"—is conversant in all three languages.

Less than 250 years ago, not one Irishman in 100 knew any English. And less than 50 years ago only one out of seven knew any Irish.

In the intervening two centuries the language all but disappeared, except from the remote districts of the west and south, under the constant onslaught of the British penal laws, involved to bring the rebellious Irish to heel.

IRISH PROHIBITED

The Irish were forbidden to speak, read or write the language. Possession of a book or pamphlet in Irish was a punishable offense.

Defiant as always, the Irish huddled behind hedges and stone walls, in barns and lofts, to learn Irish from the "hedge scholars." Illiterate school masters, with a price on their heads. The spoken tongue survived.

The "keeners," Irelandse professional mourners — most of them women — helped keep it alive at country wakes by wailing the dirds of the deceased in colorful couiets.

Oddly enough, the soul of the language fled even faster as the people moved closer to freedom under the various Home Rule measures of the 19th century. Daniel O'Connell, the great Irish liberator, was no booster of the Irish language. He associated the language with poverty and backwardness; and was convinced the people would progress further in English.

WRITERS DOMINATE

By the time Ireland gained her independence, her sons had put a fine twist in the King's English. Irish writers dominated English literature in the first half of the 20th century; Shaw, Synge and O'Casey in drama, Yeats in poetry, Joyce in the novel.

Ireland's feeling now is that the language is a treasured heritage and to abandon it would be intellectual suicide.

Any language reflects the passions of the people who speak it. Irish is admirably suited to that task.

"A grand language to swear or lament in," as the Irish put it.

The old Irish curse, "may the devil tear you from the hearse in front of all the funeral," sounds bad enough in English but in Irish you can practically hear the coffin thump into the road.

The Irish alphabet, written in medieval Gaelic characters, has only 18 letters, but it can produce twice as many sounds as any other European language. By softening and dropping first consonants, words can be made to change in meaning.

VOTING RESTRICTIONS

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

They tell me the middle tier zoo-keepers in the Chicago stadium, who can produce anything from a dead mackerel to a live dinosaur, are readying a gargantuan life octopus for tomorrow night's classic between their beloved Black Hawks and the hated foemen from Montreal.

This sixth, and possibly deciding battle between the now desperate Canadiens and the stratospheric Hawks, could be one of the biggest explosions to hit the Windy City since Al Capone and his Detectables started with rud gun-muzzles with the Untouchables of Elliott Ness.

And it could be a forerunner of bigger things to come. Should the Hawks send the Habitants crashing down to their first Stanley Cup series defeat in thirteen seasons, Chicago, hockey-wise, will be the hottest in its history since Mrs. O'Leary's cow dropkicked the lantern that sent half the city shooting skyward in flames.

For that would mark the beginning of a new Indian war. Big Chief Gordie Howe, six man river of Detroit, has just rallied alone within his Red Wings to pin-prick the bubbles of Punchline prophecies and slither the Leafs in a 4-1 set, has his braves all ready for the big joust.

Who big question? Who will it be?

On the Hawks' flaming performance Saturday night when they administered the first shut-out to the haughty champions on Forum ice in 84 playoff games, they should wrap it up on Tuesday night before some 20,000 frenzied Chicagoans.

On the other hand, on the Canadiens' brilliant comeback effort when they defeated a mediocre Chicago team 6-5 in the twelve-goal game, the Habitants could send the series hurtling into a seventh and final classic in Montreal.

The game in Chicago Tuesday night could prove to one of the most bitterly-fought tilts of the entire series. Canadiens' fans after the shoeing of the Habs in Chicago, felt that with the club playing in the Forum, the champions should emerge Saturday night with a 2-3-2 lead and a grip on one handle of the mug.

Rabid Chicago fans, strong in belief of the Hawks' potential, were hopeful of an emergence from the state of mediocrity that marked the Hawks' fourth-set defeat. But I do not believe any of them from a member of the Chicago Stock Exchange to a brown-boy in the abattoir, would bet a plugged nickle that the Flinn Pucksters would hang a horse-collar on the champions in their own ice stable.

That is what happened and it left a stunned Forum—and Montreal—not to mention many Habitant fans in various parts of the country in a state of shock. And from newspaper accounts, a gentleman named Hall who missed the Vezina Trophy by a butterfly's breath, was the outstanding hero of the piece. This hockey Horatio held the third-period bridge while desperate Habitant sharp-shooters blasted at him from all angles.

And Red Wing fans will tell you they have a hero, too. Big Gordie Howe was said to the tune of hockey Detroit. His all-round play, going both ways, offensively and defensively, was the highlight of a brilliant hockey career. A fierce competitor who oozed desire and ability, he led the Wings to an upset triumph over the injury-beset but fancied Maple Leafs in a two let-down semi-finals series.

But for the moment, tomorrow night's game in Chicago is the big one. And heaven knows what dishes that second tier zoo department of Chicago fandom will give out with.

In the last game they heaved a dead octopus garnished with eggs. Target for the night, the referee. Tomorrow night, quien sabe? Three years ago they pelted the Toronto Maple Leafs with plastic but explosive hand grenades.

Over the years their weapons have numbered old eggs (brittle but usable), heated pennies, dead fish, deceased squirrels, bottles of ink and live bullets, unaccompanied by a gun.

In 1938, the last time the Hawks won the Stanley Cup, among the livestock hurled to the ice was an "undead" rabbit. Players and officials chased the Easter emblem around the rink while the stadium organist played "Here Comes Peter Cottontail."

Game Away From Finals

By LAURENT CHIASSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Canadiens today find themselves in a plight they haven't experienced in five championship years—trailing in a Stanley Cup playoff series.

And unless a formula can be found to upset Chicago Black Hawks' effective, checking, the desperate Canadiens may miss the cup finals for the first time in 11 years.

This situation was brought about Saturday night when the Black Hawks blanked the Canadiens 3-0 to take a 3-2 lead in their best-of-seven semi-final.

The Hawks now are in a position to wrap up the series at home Tuesday and reach the finals for the first time since 1943-44, if a seventh game is necessary it will be played at Montreal Thursday. The winner goes against Detroit Red Wings in the final.

Defenceman Elmer Vasko shot the Hawks in front in the second period with a whistling 45-footer that eluded goalie Jacques Plante while the Canadiens were shorthanded.

HIT FOR TWO

In the last period the Hawks struck for quick goals by Ab McDonald and Bobby Hull to make sure the game was theirs.

"Well, you can't say now that we can't come back with a clutch game," coach Rudy Pilous exclaimed during greeting reporters in the Black Hawks' dressing room after the game.

Coach Hector (Toe) Blake of the Canadiens was dejected.

"We were simply outplayed and outhustled," Blake said. "But we've done it the hard way all season. So why should we stop now? There's no reason why we can't come back and beat them."

The Canadiens, winners of the historic cup for the last five seasons, have never trailed in any other series since they lost in the seventh game of the 1952 cup final to Detroit.

The Montrealers had tolled through 38 National Hockey League and playoff games without being blanked since last Saturday. They also had gone through 134 consecutive league and playoff games on home ice without failing to score at least once and had avoided a shutout in 34 consecutive playoff engagements, home and away.

Glenn Hall, the NHL's iron-man goaltender who hasn't missed a game in 326 consecutive schedule and 30 playoff games, said he felt "tremendous" after recording his first shutout in playoff competition.

Hall gave Montreal's general manager, Frank Selke, credit for his playing.

"You can't score goals with the puck on your sticks.

"Selke has told me, 'If you won't do so for me now, you can expect trouble when it comes to signing contracts next season.

Then Selke turned to Blake and said:

"Apparently some of these young fellows are not interested in money as the Black Hawks."

HARD SAVE—Chicago Black Hawks put on the pressure in the fifth game of their semi-final series with Montreal Canadiens as Ron Murphy (10) drives a hard shot at masked Montreal goalie Jacques Plante. Indians, Bears Win Three In Row

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Pennant - winning Springfield Indians and Hershey Bears need just one victory each to reach the final round of the American Hockey League Calder Cup playoffs.

Both teams whipped into 3-0 semi-final leads Sunday. The Indians crushed the Barons 6-3 in Cleveland and the Bears blasted the Bisons 5-1 in Buffalo.

Saturday night the Indians rallied to beat the Barons 3-2, while Buffalo forced Hershey into overtime before bowing 2-1.

Fourth game of the Springfield-Cleveland series is scheduled for Tuesday night in Cleveland. The Bears and Bisons play their fourth game in Buffalo Wednesday.

BROKE A TIE

Springfield scored three times in less than three minutes in a brawling second period to break a 1-1 tie.

During that session, Moe Mantha of Cleveland and Ted Harris of Springfield fought and Mantha emerged with a broken nose. Then Springfield's Keith Douglas was separated from six teeth when he was bashed by an errant stick.

Dennis Olson of the Indians scored the first goal in the first period. Ron Atwell got that one back 61 seconds later.

In the second period, Bill McCreary broke the tie at 13:09 and Jim Anderson and Harry Pidhirny sailed way the game for the Indians.

NEVER IN TROUBLE

The Bears never were in trouble against the Bisons. Ray Kinasewich paced the winners with two goals, and Claude Laforge, Les Duff and Jack McIntyre got the others. Dick Gamble scored for Buffalo at 6:50 of the final period.

Saturday in Springfield, Cal Gardner and Ed Mazur put the Barons ahead 2-0 before Ian Cushenan got the Indians on the score sheet. Thirty-second goals by Noel Price and Anderson gave Springfield the victory.

Jack Caffery scored at 2:24 of overtime to win for Hershey at home. The Bears had tied the game on a goal by McIntyre with only three minutes left in regulation time. Gamble had opened the scoring for Buffalo midway in the second period.

Wednesday Ties Spurs Clobber Preston

LONDON (Reuters) — Glasgow's first - class soccer club reached the finals of the Scottish Soccer Cup for the 27th time while London's Tottenham Hotspur tightened its grip on top place in English League's First Division Saturday.

Celtic swamped Airdrieonians 6-0 in a cup semi-final.

Dunfermline and St. Mirren fought to a scoreless tie in the other semi-final at Tynecastle Park and will have to play again Wednesday. The winner will play Celtic in the cup final April 22.

Inspired by a 4-2 win over Chelsea Friday, the Spurs crushed lowly Preston 5-0.

The Spurs' nearest rival, Sheffield Wednesday, was held to a 1-1 tie at Blackburn.

The Spurs now have 38 points to Wednesday's 34. Both teams have six games to play in the 42-game schedule.

Newcastle earned a point in a 1-1 tie at West Ham. The point was an important one since Newcastle's cellar companions — Blackpool, Manchester City and Preston—all lost Saturday.

All four teams now have 27 points, but Manchester City has two games in hand on Newcastle, and one on Blackpool and Preston.

Ipswich Town, at the top of the Second Division, increased its lead over Sheffield United to four points. Ipswich beat lowly Huddersfield Town 3-1, while United Drew 1-1 with Liverpool.

STILL IN CELLAR

Lincoln City beat Middlesbrough 3-2. The team is still last in the Second Division, with 21 points from 37 games.

Portsmouth, second from the bottom, also won, 4-0 over Brighton, and this gave Portsmouth 27 points from 36 games.

Bury maintained its third-division lead with a 3-0 win at Notts County. Queen's Park Rangers, in second place, kept up their challenge by beating third-place Walsall 2-0.

The race between Peterborough and Crystal Palace at the head of the Fourth Division remained as close as ever. Both won Sunday, keeping the margin between them at two points. But Peterborough has three more games to play than Palace.

Moranda Wins Northern Senior Title

NORANDA, Que. (CP) — Rouyn - Noranda Allouettes edged Kapuskasing-Timmins 5-4 in second overtime period Saturday night to capture the Northern Ontario Hockey Association senior championship and promptly borrowed two players from the losers to help them in the Allan Cup playoffs.

Vail Mitchell scored the goal that gave the Alouettes the best-of-seven series by four games to three, banging in a rebound at 4:12 of the second extra session. Earlier, the Kaps had wiped out a 5-0 deficit to take the lead early in the third period.

Cliff Connelly, Brian Anderson, Jean - Guy Thibault and Ray Dupuis were the other Alouette marksmen, Terry Tenlino, Merv Bowers, Nickie Rukavina and Steve Rumak accounted for the losers.

Rukavina and Moe Chevrefils are the two Kapuskasing forwards who will accompany the Als when they open their best-of-seven semi-final series at Fall Monday.

Centre Johnny McLellan and defenceman Lloyd McKay of Timmins Flyers and centre Jerry Labelle and defenceman Jack Power of Abitibi also will bolster the Alouette lineup.

Second game of the final will be at Gall Tuesday. Succeeding games will be at Noranda Thursday and, if necessary, Friday and Saturday.

Howe 'Wrapped It Up' For The Leafs

CELEBRATE VICTORY — Coach Sid Abel (black suit) of Detroit Red Wings jokes with his players after the club beat Toronto Maple Leafs 3-2 Saturday night to win their National Hockey League semi-final series by four games to one. The Wings, shown in their dressing room after winning in Toronto, will meet either Chicago Black Hawks or Montreal Canadiens in the Stanley Cup final. (CP Wirephoto).

Led Wings To 3-2 Win

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP)—It wouldn't be entirely incorrect to say that Gordie Howe has picked Toronto Maple Leaf pockets of a few thousand dollars. When a guy scores the clutch goals as Howe has done, what else could Leafs think?

This was the way the Toronto hockey players probably looked at the situation today when they thought of the pay cheques Howe and his Detroit Red Wing teammates will pick up by advancing into the Stanley Cup final at their expense.

The Wings refused to roll over and play dead despite the 1-to-4 odds quoted against them when the best-of-seven affair opened. They rewrote the script after Leafs won the opener 3-2 in overtime and smacked Leafs four straight, ending with a 3-2 victory Saturday night for a final berth.

Now they can rest a few days while Montreal and Chicago fight for the other final spot.

HAVE $9,000 EDGE

Wings are already $9,000 up on the Leafs. They picked up $22,500 for their semi-final victory against Toronto's share of $13,500. But the big dough is in the championship round where players of the winning team divide a $31,500 pot and the losers a mere $13,500.

Detroit teams haven't hit the final since 1956 when Wings lost in five games to Montreal.

Howe, 33, is playing at almost the peak of his 15-year National League career. He scored the game - winning goals against Leafs in the third and fourth games when Wings won 2-0 and 4-1 and then celebrated his 1000th appearance in a cup game Saturday by scoring the opener and assisting on the second that sent Detroit into a 3-0 first-period lead.

Len Lunde and Al Johnson were the other Detroit snipers Saturday. Red Kelly and Dave Keon socked it for the Toronto scoring in the game that, at times, was poor.

Leafs didn't have much chance although they hit the Detroit goalpost a couple of times and came within an eyelash of scoring if the final seconds when they buzzed all around goalie Terry Sawchuk.

HOWE SCORED EARLY

Howe scored at 4:36 when Wings were shorthanded through a tripping penalty to Howie Glover and Dreden perfect strike to Len Lunde at 14:11 for the second goal.

Johnson got his at 5:27 of the second period when he took a pass from Leo Labine and collected with a 10-footer to make it 3-0.

Kelly's goal came at 16:11 of the middle session when he skated down the centre, faked a shot to put the Detroit defence out of position and fired a partly-screened 30-footer past Sawchuk.

Keon's goal was a gift from Sawchuk. The Wing netminder skated out to clear a long-length rubber but, instead, put it on the Toronto centre's stick. Keon casually skated in to flip the puck into the open net with Sawchuk waving feebly about 10 feet out.

Bower was removed for a sixth forward in the final seconds the Detroit defence backed practically into the net to help Sawchuk out of danger and send Leafs packing for another season.

Griffith Wins Crown

MIAMI BACH, Fla. (AP)—Newly - crowned welterweight champion Emile Griffith, 22, appears to be on the road to riches, with a punch to knock his opponents down and the youth to continue doing it a long time.

He knocked out champion Benny (Kid) Paret with a 13th round left hook to the chin Saturday night. Griffith, who fights out of New York, limited himself to 10-rounders before he signed for 15 against the Cuban veteran.

Paret has a return bout coming to him, but he said he first wants some rest — perhaps 90 days.

Griffith said his co-manager, Gil Clancy, "woke me up" after the 12th round.

"He told me I had to have all the next three," Griffith said. Impressed by this admonition, Griffith saw an opening after he took two body blows and glazed Paret's eyes with the knockout punch. Paret took another left and a right on the way down to his first count of 10 in 46 fights.

'Punch The Seer' To Hang Up Gear

Irish Clash With Royals In Finals

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto St. Michael's College Majors advanced to the Ontario Hockey Association junior A finals Sunday with a 5-3 victory in the seventh game of their semi-final round with Hamilton Red Wings. The Majors took the series 4-2, with one game tied, and now meet the pennant-winning Guelph Royals in the finals.

The appearance of Toronto captain Bruce Draper sparked the Majors. Draper, who suffered a concussion a week ago with St. Mike's leading the series 3-1, skated briefly before Sunday's match and decided not to play.

After missing the first period, the all-star centre returned to the ice to lead the Collegians as they scored five consecutive goals after trailing 3-0 going into the middle frame. The crowd of 8,189, largest of the series, gave Draper a round of applause on each return to the bench.

Although not credited with a goal, Draper set up one by Dave Keenan and was a factor in the play which led to Sonny Osborne's tying marker. Paul Jackson and Andre Champagne counted the other Toronto goals.

Howie Menard, Pit Martin and Lyle Porter were the Hamilton marksmen.

Dates for the best-of-seven final have not been set but the first two games are expected to be played in Guelph Wednesday and Friday with the third and fourth in Toronto next Sunday and the following Tuesday.

WILL MEET SOO

HAMILTON (CP)—Hamilton Quigleys defeated Deep River 67-39 Saturday to win the Ontario Basketball Association intermediate A semi-final. Quigleys took the two-game, total-points round 152-89. They now meet Sault Ste. Marie in the two - game final which opens here Saturday.

TORONTO (CP)—Punch Imlach probably won't make any more forecasts in affairs of the National Hockey League and Stanley Cup playoffs.

"I'm going to have to quit predicting things," the Toronto Maple Leaf coach said Saturday night after his Leafs lost 3-2 to Detroit Red Wings and bowed out of the best-of-seven cup semi-final in five games.

Imlach made his statement in the Detroit dressing room where he had gone to congratulate coach Sid Abel.

"Thanks for winning this for us," Abel said with a big smile. He was referring to the Imlach prediction before the series started that the Leafs would take the Red Wings and advance into the championship round.

Earlier, in the Detroit quarters, general manager Jack Adams credited Imlach with helping out the Wings. "Imlach and his strategy about how we were the underdogs did us a lot of good," Adams chortled. "We just reversed it and our boys played that much harder."

PLAYED GOOD HOCKEY

Abel said "we began to play playoff type hockey in the last two games of the season, and look how far it has carried us."

"Of course, goalkeeper Terry Sawchuk was just great. I couldn't have asked for better. I think our defence tightened up and was as good or better than it had been all season long."

Meanwhile, Gordie Howe and Vic Stasiuk held their mutual admiration society meeting. Stasiuk's assist from the corner set up Howe for two game-winning goals in the series and he fished one out again Saturday to set up Detroit's second goal.

"We've been playing better hockey since Vic joined us," Howe said. "He was the difference in this series."

Stasiuk, traded to Wings by Boston Bruins in January, returned the bouquet. "Gee, I think this is a big thrill for me," he said. "If you haven't played with Howe, you haven't played with anybody."

Imlach was a sad lot.

They dressed quietly while Irish - American Imlach talked to the players out for the annual team picture.

"We were lousy around the nets throughout the whole series," Imlach told reporters. "And this is it."

Smythe Misses Last Roundup

TORONTO (CP)—An unhappy crew of Toronto Maple Leafs had their annual farewell picture taken at Maple Leaf Gardens Sunday but three faces were missing, including that of owner Conn Smythe.

Players and management pose for the official photograph each year before disbanding for the season.

Leaf's 3-2 loss to Detroit Red Wings Saturday night brought an end to their Stanley Cup quest for this year.

Smythe turned up at the Gardens but several players were late and he didn't wait around for them to arrive.

"I guess he just didn't want to get into the picture with us," said his son, Stafford, chairman of the Leafs hockey committee.

Petes Win Peewee Title

PETERBOROUGH (CP)—Peterborough captured the Ontario Minor Hockey Association peewee division here Saturday, winning the two - game total-goals series 9-7 over Sarnia. Sarnia scored a 5-4 victory Saturday. A week earlier Peterborough had triumphed 5-2.

LIFE POST

They'll Do It Every Time — By Jimmy Hatlo

At the Park

HELD OVER
"3 WORLDS OF GULLIVER"

One of the world's best-loved stories, Jonathan Swift's classic "Gulliver's Travels" has been brought to thrilling screen life through Superdynamation, the fabulous motion picture process, and Eastman Color. Starring Kerwin Mathews as the swashbuckling doctor who is a giant in Lilliput and a miniature homunculi giant in Brobdingnag, Columbia Pictures' "The 3 Worlds of Gulliver" opened Friday at the Park Theatre, completely enthralling aults, children and in-betweens. Jo Morrow and June Thorburn star with Mathews in the Morningside production.

Moviegoers who remember "The 7th Voyage of Sinbad," in which also were performed many wondrous feats of movie magic, may expect an even richer helping of Superdynamation excitement. For in the first time, one can sail with a real-life Gulliver from our world to the fabulous worlds of very little and very big people created by Jonathan Swift.

In the astounding land of Lilliput, where people are the size of ordinary birds, Gulliver helps two tiny lovers in their star-crossed romance and magnetically terminates a war by sweeping aside the war fleet of the enemy of the Lilliputs. In the land of Brobdingnag, a fabulous 60-foot beautiful giantess, Gulliver is kept as a miniature household pet.

The second highest score in the tournament's history by beating Harriston 21-0.

The London squad went into the game five men short and scored four goals in the first period. In the next two periods, aided by late comers, they added another 17 goals.

The Harriston squad got only one shot in the Oakridge net, whereas Dale MacLean in the losers' net faced 61 shots. Top scorer for the London squad was Ed Taylor with five goals. Steve Warren had four.

Oakridge were scheduled today to meet Blenheim, who edged Palmerston 3-1 Saturday. In other C series games Kincardine beat Norwich 6-2, Bedney defeated Mitchell 3-2 and Watford shaded Wingham 4-3.

In B series play Renaul blanked Ripley 11-0 and Zurich 6-0. Alberton downed Lucknow 4-0 and went on to beat Alias Craig 7-1. Alias Craig had earlier beaten Atwood 6-3 and Zurich had beaten Tara 3-0.

Sault Ste. Marie Thunderbirds moved into the Eastern Professional Hockey League finals Sunday by defeating Kingston Frontenacs 5-4 and winning their best - of - seven semi-final series four games to one.

The remaining final playoff spot has yet to be filled. The Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers evened their semi-final series Sunday by edging Hull-Ottawa Canadiens 2-0 at Kitchener. Their best-of-seven series now stands tied at two games apiece.

The Soo squad won the first three games of its series against Kingston 3-1, 5-4 in overtime and 4-3. Frontenacs came up with their only win last Friday on home ice when they defeated the Soo team 4-1. The deciding game was played on Soo ice.

The Thunderbirds clinched their playoff spot when Norm Waslowski slapped two third period goals past goalie John Henderson. Waslowski fired the winning goal at the 6:32 mark when Henderson came far out of his net after a loose puck. Waslowski got there first and easily steered the puck into the unprotected cage. He fired his second marker into an empty net. Henderson was pulled in favor of an extra forward.

Kitchener - Waterloo Beavers gained their second victory in a row over the pennant-winning Hull-Ottawa Canadiens on goals from Leon Rochefort and Sandy McGregor.

Rochfort's 40 - footer beat goalie Ed Johnston on the short side at the 6:56 mark of the third period. McGregor scored his on open net with Johnston on the sidelines and 10 seconds left to play.

The series moves to Hull Wednesday with the sixth game in the Canadiens' home town. The seventh game, if needed, will be played in Hull next Sunday.

CBC Not Making Idle Boasts About New Series

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — When CBS promised that its Way-Out dramatic series would be different, it was not making idle boasts.

One must presume the first show last Friday night was a fair example of things to come. The story concerned a brilliant, irascible professor, dying of an incurable disease. He contents to submit his brain — and one eye — to a post - mortem experiment.

It seems that an eminent brain surgeon has been able to keep a brain alive and functioning outside a body and is eager to expand his research to a human brain. The professor consents, mostly to irritate his wife who not only uses lipstick which he abhors, but smokes, which he loathes.

The professor duly dies, and then we see a little boy containing the professor's brain and one eye-staring toward the ceiling. Obviously, the brain can't talk, but the scientists can judge its reactions by a graph measuring its electrical impulses.

All in the laboratory comes his widow, all dressed up, lips heavily rouged. She puts her face into the eye's line of vision, and when the graph registers sharp annoyance, deliberately lights a cigaret and blows smoke in the eye.

The fiendish shows the graph registering fury.

In tone and style, Way-Out resembled the Alfred Hitchcock show more than anything else but this first effort was so far out it was just plain gruesome.

'Battle of Alamo' Fought All Over Again in Hollywood

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Battle of the Alamo is being fought all over again in Hollywood, but not as bloody as the real one in Texas—it's a dilly.

It all started with skirmishes between publicist Russell Birdwell and newspaper film critics who decried Birdwell's expensive Oscar campaigning.

Birdwell, wise enough to know that controversy creates lines at the boxoffice, took out full page ads in the Hollywood trade papers attacking the critics by name.

But, as it turned out, that feud was mild. The hot one, is between John Wayne, producer, director and star of The Alamo and Chill Wills, nominated for best supporting actor in the Oscar-nominated movie.

JOEY THOUSANDS

Wills' advertising campaign to win an Oscar has cost him thousands of dollars and is masterminded by W. S. (BowWow) Wojciechowicz, a physical education instructor for prison convicts.

BowWow once was married to Sheilah Graham, a Hollywood Columnist. That's how he first got into the Hollywood act.

A Wills' ad, written by BowWow, is what stirred Wayne's wrath. The ad stunned the movie colony because Wills' a native Texan, declared: "We of the Alamo cast are praying harder"—than the real Texans prayed for their lives in the Alamo—for Chill Wills to win the Oscar."

TEXAN OUTRAGED

One Texan in town wanted to investigate Wills' ancestry, said:

"Nobody but a damyankee would so desecrate the sacred memory of the Alamo."

The following day Wayne, Iowa-born, came to the defence of the outraged Texans. In full page ads, the 6-foot-4-man declared that he had no prior knowledge of Wills' ad and added:

"The Chill Wills ad is an untrue and reprehensible claim.

A refrain from using stronger language because I in defend intentions were not as bad as his taste. (signed) John Wayne."

BOW-WOW_YIPES

This brought a small ad reply from Bow-Wow in yankee from Pittsburgh):

"Hello John Wayne:

"Chill Wills was in no way responsible for The Alamo ad . . . Chill Wills did not know anything whatsoever about this ad, and when he saw it, he was madder than John Wayne and Birdwell together. (signed) W. S. Wojciechowicz."

Wills' latest ad showed the burly characted actor in Texas-style cowboy get-up, twirling a rope. The caption said only:

"Chill Wills . . . nominated . . . best supporting actor."

Even The Alamo was forgotten.

Astrological Forecast

Tuesday, April 4
By CARROLL RIGHTER

General Tendencies: An upsetting influence is in operation today and if you are not careful, you are apt to find you have estranged yourself from those you like the most, or can have some accidental or argumentative condition follow taking any chances. Keep above reproach — as wise as the Serpent and as harmless as the Dove.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) — Try not to start any arguments with others today. Jealousy or deliberately irking others may result in serious estrangements or trouble. Also, be very careful when doing your work or there can be irreparable damage.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Be diplomatic when dealing with that spunky tie and a smooth manner can be a serious argument occur that would be unfortunate. Also, take care that you meet all obligations scrupulously. Let that big smile see you through nicely.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — Make certain you follow through on any commitments you have made. Also, be sure you drive carefully and look where you are walking. Later, before you make any promises, think carefully so you are sure you can meet them in the future.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) — If you are not absolutely honest with any accounts or written reports, you can get into real trouble with a friend today. Be above reproach and all will work out beautifully with promise of greater abundance in the future.

Leo (July 2 to Aug. 21) — Act circumspectly throughout the day and evening or you lose much of the good will you have so carefully built up, and can alienate worthwhile friends. Be respectful with higher-ups and get ahead faster. Loyalty and respect are priceless.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) — Don't permit that secret anxiety to keep you from going out in the world of affairs and accomplishing a great deal. There are many fine opportunities in the offing, but you have to be alert to them and accept quickly.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) — There will be many an opportunity for you today to be the peacemaker, a quality for which you are well noted, impress others willingly with your kindness and fine self-control.

Scorpio (Oct 23 to Nov. 21) — If you are to get ahead faster, you must use more modern methods in your job. However, be very tactful in getting your co-workers to go along with you in your progressive ideas, then you will see great and greater success is possible.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — Remain cheerful and unperturbed today, even though some unexpected tax or other matter comes up which is not really serious, but could unnerve you for awhile. You can be very happy tonight with mate or loved one.

Capricorn (Dec. 2 to Jan. 20) — Steer clear of that argument at stode and get out early to the appointments and activities that can mean greater abundance for you. Handle any civic affairs very wisely, too. P.M. take loved one out to dinner, then theatre, etc.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — You are right in feeling that you are not advancing as quickly as you should, but if you read your paper or other periodicals, you can get excellent and constructive ideas that will take you far. Buy the mechanical items you need, too.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Take time to show affection for close ties today, since too much concentration upon business affairs alone could lead to grief. Get your work done quickly, then off to the enjoyments with family that please and increase happiness.

If your child is born today .. there will be a tendency in adult life to flee be embroiled with the new and pioneering, but suddenly to withdraw into the safty of old - fashioned ideas and modes of living. Early give training in sports so that this subconscious fear can be overcome and then the chart becomes most successful in Pursuits of Tomorrow, opening up frontiers in the scientific and philosophical in particular.

Five Michigan Children Perish As House Burns

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — Five of Mrs. Delores Johnson's seven children—including one for whose mistreatment she served a probation term—died in an upper floor Sunday fire at their home.

Mrs. Johnson, 30, escaped with two by smashing out a window. Neighbors held her back when she tried to rush into the blazing house for the others.

The pre-dawn fire, of unknown origin, swept the family's old, frame house. Four of the children who lost their lives were trapped at the top of a stairway leading to their bedrooms. The fifth was found downstairs. One of those who died was Debora, 4.

When Debra was a baby, Mrs. Johnson had been punished her for playing with matches. She held the child's hands over an open gas flame. For this Mrs. Johnson was convicted of cruelty and placed on probation.

"I tried to get back in the window," testified Mrs. Johnson sobbed after the fire.

Dying with Debora were Donald, 6; Allen Dale, 5; Andrew Ackerd, 4, and Jeffrey Lee, three months.

Mrs. Johnson escaped with Diane Mary, 3, and Darlene, 2.

The mother, who is separated from her husband, Andrew Johnson, 31, had taken the children Easter shopping the day before on welfare money.

Fervent Prayers For Peace Heard Easter Sunday

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Christians throughout the world Sunday commemorated the resurrection of Christ. But adding a sombre note to an otherwise joyous Easter Sunday was international tension.

Fervent prayers for peace were uttered at special church services attended by millions around the globe.

In Vatican City, Pope John called men to the peace of the risen Christ and, as he did a year ago, spoke with confidence that it is troubling the world.

In England, the Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, advised churches to refrain from political controversies and theological squabbles.

"How often," he said in an Easter sermon in Canterbury Cathedral, "do good and Christian men, faced with the terrible conflicts of nations, cry, demand justice, when all they mean is their own dominance to cease."

As the sun rose over the Jordan sector of the holy city of Jerusalem, pilgrims assembled in a quiet garden around the mouth of a cave, believed the commemorate Christ's resurrection.

A service was conducted in German and English in the garden under the city wall, built around an ancient Semitic tomb which looks very much like the one from which the stone was rolled away on the first Easter morning.

Inside the city walls, around the traditional Holy Sepulchre, the Roman Catholic Patriarch of Jerusalem, Alberto Gori, celebrated pontifical high mass.

marchers kept up a brave show of enthusiasm but even the accompanying jazz bands dragged limp. Some of the demonstrators, mostly youngsters, in bowler hats with their jeans and carried umbrellas.

Leading the marchers were several Labor MPs and churchmen, including the Bishop of Stepney and the Rev. Canon Collins is a leading light of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, which organized the two marches.

"It's a splendid turnout," he said enthusiastically as rain poured down his face.

Marching at his side was Professor Nicholas Kaldor, former, the nuclear physicist who was a member of Britain's atom bomb team during the war.

TARGET FOR FIREWORKS

Marchers from Wethersfield appealed Sunday for police protection after guerrilla bands claiming to be Empire loyalists threw fireworks and smoke bombs at them.

There was criticism that the annual protest march was becoming nothing but a mammoth petting party. This was caused by unsegregated sleeping in schools and church halls and the youth of many of the marchers.

Said Canon Collins: "of course, you get kissing and cuddling among those boys and girls. But there's nothing wrong in that."

Cubans Seek U.S. Visas At Montreal

MONTREAL (CP)—Nine Cuban nationals who landed at Montreal airport Sunday night after being refused entry to the United States were scheduled to meet with immigration authorities today in an effort to obtain U.S. visas.

The Cubans were part of a group of 25 who were rejected when their British Overseas Airways Corporation jet set down in New York Saturday because of storm conditions in Montreal.

The remaining 16 refused to be bound by the plane when it resumed the flight to Montreal and won at least temporary asylum in the U.S.

The flight originated in Jamaica.

A spokesman for the Montreal group said Sunday night that they were adjusting their plans and were not seeking asylum in the U.S. or Canada.

He said they wanted the visas to visit relatives and friends, mostly in Puerto Rico, and planned to return to Cuba.

Of the 16 who remained in New York, however, were reported to be seeking political asylum.

Unions Declare Open Season on Civil Servants

MONTREAL (CP)—The Gazette says a union organized by 400 employees in the province's finance department has declared open season on "an important industrial relations problem" for the provincial government.

The newspaper says the move "encompasses the whole question of bringing other segments of the Quebec Civil Service" and "virtually unions all employees in the season on . . . civil servants."

The union, which has the right to represent the employees in being made by the provincial government, is the Union des Employes de la Province de Quebec, headed by Roger Provost; and the 210,000-member Confederation of Catholic Workers of Canada, led by Jean Marchand.

The union plans to negotiate with the government through a council of employees associations with no central labor affiliation. There is no collective agreement.

The gazette adds that Section 6 of the Public Service Employees Disputes Act prohibits civil servants may not belong to affiliations other unions but "their leaders say there is nothing illegal about their present organizing activities . . ."

NEW YORK (AP) — Mrs. Gamble Benedict Porumbeanu, runaway heiress who married a Romanian-born former chauffeur a year ago, has an heir of her own.

The 20-year-old brunette gave birth Sunday to a six-pound, 12-ounce son in a New Jersey hospital. The child will be named Gheorghe Mihai, after the paternal grandfather.

The heiress and Porumbeanu, now 36, eloped to Henderson ville, N.C., last April 6.

As a result of the marriage, they were adjudged paupers here by Magistrate Peter Hoen for refusing to obey a court directive to stay away from the court order was obtained by the heiress' grandfather.

Mrs. Porumbeanu is entroiled in a court battle over her grandfather's estate, which is reputed to run into the millions.

The estate is controlled largely by her grandmother, Mrs. Katherine Gedden Dresser, who opposed the marriage to Porumbeanu.

Pope Calls Men To the Peace Of Risen Christ

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John on Easter Sunday called men to the peace of the risen Christ and, as he did a year ago, spoke bitterly of tensions that is today troubling the world.

The 79-year-old pontiff of the Roman Catholic church spoke from the exterior loggia of St. Peter's Basilica to a crowd of more than 250,000 persons gave him a tumultuous welcome as he appeared after celebrating mass in St. Peter's Basilica, the church's most important.

He concluded his Easter message by wishing "a happy and blessed Easter" in 55 languages. He said sometimes the sadness seeks to invade our soul admidst the recurring disagreements of the day and here, terrifying actions of a great number of men, which trouble our society—and by nature are our brothers.

"Their disordered cries fill the cities and fields; their threatening agitation disturbs and troubles those who love justice, liberty, a life which is laborious, honored, honest and tranquil. It is the same agitation which saddened the streets of Zion on the tragic eve of the death of Jesus."

Demand Ouster But Official Resigns Post

PRINCE ALBERT, Sask. (CP)—R. A. Inkster resigned Sunday as secretary-treasurer of Local 284 of the International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen (CLC) after his ouster was demanded by H. E. Gilbert, international union president.

The lodge had been told by W. E. Gamble, the union's Canadian vice - president, that it would lose its charter if Mr. Inkster was not expelled.

Mr. Inkster had been active in negotiations for lodges in central and Western Canada last spring to break away from the Canadian Brotherhood and form a Canadian division of the union.

Mr. Gamble explained last week the expulsion was requested because Mr. Inkster had allegedly violated the union constitution by carrying members delinquent in dues and donating $25 of union funds to an Indian reserve. Lodge members said they had voted for assistance to the sick worker.

Sunday's meeting of all 40 lodge members elected Norman F. G. Cusson to succeed Mr. Inkster, who had been fired.

"This whole action exemplifies the fact that all proponents of a Canadian Union must be eliminated from office at all costs so as to stamp out for all time any opposition, howsoever born, to the dictatorial and dominating position of the international."

Lodges involved in the breakaway attempt are being sued for $100,000 on a charge of conspiracy to overthrow the brotherhood in Canada.

Naturalists Nearly Met Their Waterloo Filming White Pelicans From Canoe

By JIM WHELLY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

EDMONTON (CP) — During their fourth day on a lonely, wind-swept Island at Frog Lake, Alta., two marooned naturalists split their last dry crust of bread and listened to the roar of 10-foot-high waves which could split their tiny canoe.

At storm's end, Edgar T. Jones and Cyril Hampson paddled to the mainland with a cargo of some of the finest film records made of the white pelican.

The hardship involved in getting pictures means little to Edgar Jones, peripatetic naturalist, photographer, taxidermist, pilot, artist and lecturer, whose life is a habit to parallel whichever winged or furry thing he happens to be studying.

Recently he has been studying the American movie-goer at the invitation of the National Audubon Society of New York and found the breed thrives on his nature spectacular, Alberta Outdoors.

A silent color film of Alberta's wildlife and plant life, featuring a panoramic flight of 15,000 snow geese and the only existing studies of the seldom-seen great grey owl. The search for this owl alone led the Edmonton naturalist on a three-year chase of more than 20,000 miles.

FOURFOLD AIRLINE

It all began when 12-year-old Eddie took a taxidermy course. His growing interest in wildlife was interrupted in 1940 by what he calls "another kind of wildlife" when he became a bomber pilot in the RCAF and served overseas during the Second World War. He returned as a Flying Officer in 1945 with the Distinguished Flying Cross and Bar and founded northern Alberta's McMurray Air Services Limited.

It was then that he began filming northern flora and fauna while logging some 12,000 miles south between Fort McMurray and the arctic coast. Although he sold the tiny airline, he continued the filming while he worked in the raw fur business, ferried aircraft and became general manager of a west-coast arctic shipping company.

In 1960 he spent enough time at home with his wife, Jeanne, and their three children to edit more than three miles of north-ern film into a two-hour Mackenzie River and arctic island nature tour entitled Arctic Canada. It promises to be his best.

CLOSEUP ON WILDLIFE

It brings the audience eye-to-eye with the wary, 180-mile an hour peregrine falcon, takes them on an exciting hunt with Eskimos for the beluga while whale and across a frigid river on the back of 2,500-pound bull buffalo in Wood Buffalo National Park.

Arctic Canada already has brought the arctic island nesting ground of the snow geese to some 15,000 Albertans and now is being shown in British Columbia, it is to cross Canada by the end of 1962.

Meanwhile, Edgar Jones and University of Alberta professor Cyril Hampson, co-founders of the conservation-aimed Alberta Wildlife Foundation, plan their first showing of some of their thousands of wildlife color slides to bolster Foundation finances this fall.

"And," says Edgar Jones from among the stuffed onlookers in his den, "I have half a dozen more films under way which I must get to work on soon."

Japanese Dairy Herds Grow As People Clamor for Milk

By MASAJI ICHIKAWAM

TOKYO (Reuters) — The development of what is being called here a "dairy-type palate" by young Japanese is forcing the expansion of Japan's dairy herds.

Cheese, butter and milk, though not generally consumed in large quantities among the Japanese, are increasing in popularity. To meet this demand, Japan must be prepared to spend foreign currency to import the products or develop its own industries.

To make milk, considered a foreign drink, popular with Japanese, different flavors are introduced into it. Milk is sold flavored with chocolate, orange and coffee. For train travelers, eight stalls at wayside stations sell hot milk.

The ministry of agriculture reports that milk production, which had been decreasing since 1956, showed a slight increase last year. Estimated production for 1960 was 1,720,000 tons, compared with 1,500,000 tons in 1958. The ministry estimates that by 1965 production will be 1,980,000 tons.

Butter production last year was estimated at 11,000 tons, compared with the 1958 figure of 12,846 tons.

Better pastures, better herds and better farming techniques are needed by the Japanese to develop dairy farming into a substantial industry.

Despite the popular conception of Japan as overcrowded, there are large areas undeveloped where acres of fruitful countryside lie fallow. This especially so on the island of Hokkaido, in northern Japan, already recognized as the biggest dairy farming centre.

To fill these areas with dairy herds, Japan needs improved stock. At present, its dairy cattle total about 824,000, compared with 204,000 in 1950.

Pilot projects have been started under the ministry of agriculture. Farmers are being encouraged to turn to dairy farming and good quality animals have been imported.

WANT TO DRIVE S. AFRICA OUT OF UN

Katanga Threat Of War Averted But Tension High

Trenton Man Is Among 5 Held at Leopoldville

ELISABETHVILLE (AP) — President Moishe Tshombe of Katanga province, thwarted in a move to seize Elisabethville airport from United Nations forces, angrily called on his supporters today to get ready to fight the UN.

He ordered full mobilization in the Congolese province and warned this capital city into an armed camp.

He handed the UN forces an ultimatum to surrender the airport within two hours but then Tshombe announced he and UN officials had reached an agreement to avert an explosion.

Even as this was announced, frenzied Africans were milling about uniformed Swedish UN troops, striking them with stones and smashing their cars. Two Swedish drivers were rescued by new members of the Katanga army.

This army is commanded by Tshombe but many of its officers are Belgians retained by Tshombe.

PREVENT SEIZURE BID

A platoon of 24 Katanga troops, led by Belgian officers, tried to seize the airport before dawn. A dozen Swedish troops at the airport thwarted the attempt.

In a rage, Tshombe delivered his ultimatum. He told a screaming crowd of 10,000 that the Swedes and the rest of the airport within two hours or face attack by the capital's entire population.

"The Swedes may not leave the airport in two hours," the president shouted, "if not, I will unleash all you, together with the police and Katanga army, to march on the airport. You will fight, you will shoot, you will recapture the airport."

But before the ultimatum was to take effect, Tshombe announced he had reached the agreement.

UN officials said Tshombe had agreed that the airport should return to the joint control of Katanga authorities and the United Nations.

CARS ATTACKED

Hemmed in by almost crazed, African, UN correspondents watched attacks on two UN Swedish cars.

The crowd hailed the cars and threatened the Swedes with machetes. Others scampered to the roadside to gather stones. They began to stone the Swedes in their cars and within minutes the windows were smashed. The occupants were bleeding.

Some whites with the Katanga army forced their way through the mob to rescue the two Swedes. They forced the bleeding men to their cars and drove through the crowd, while Katanga troops clambered on the hoods.

Nearby a group of angry Africans slugged a white woman. Police went to her rescue, but not before she was hacked several times across the body.

Several thousand other Africans gathered around the deserted UN headquarters building in Elisabethville, chanting and screaming, while leaders exhorted them to tear the building down. Tshombe's forces earlier had cut off power and water to the building.

THE WEATHER

Synopsis: A mixture of cloud and sunshine is forecast for most of Ontario today and Wednesday with afternoon temperatures generally in the 40s.

LEOPOLDVILLE (Reuters)—Congolese troops set up roadblocks around Leopoldville Monday and detained five Canadian pilots before a flight to another nearby Thysville military camp before they were released unhurt.

The Canadians, who were not in uniform, comprised four sergeants and a private.

They were driving in a UN jeep when stopped at a roadblock about 16 miles outside Leopoldville. The jeep was on a plane trip. They were not injured, although one of the sergeants said a Congolese soldier tried to slap them and a large crowd gathered around but then outside the Thysville camp.

The Canadians were Sgt.-Maj. Ken Jarleton of Winnipeg, Sgt. Anthony Canle of Vancouver, Sgt. Jim Murdick of Moncton, N.B., Sgt. Jim Hodson of Trenton, Ont., and Gunner Kenneth Core of Rimbey, Alta.

Hodson said: "One Congolese soldier rushed over to us screaming, told us to get on our knees and tried to slap us. Sgt. Canle's glasses were broken."

Other Congolese troops told the attacker to stop.

The Canadians were then driven to Thysville where a message from Ottawa awaited them.

On their way out of the camp they stopped for gasoline and a Congolese officer's staff car acted as them. But their Congolese driver saved them.

"That was the worst part," Carleton said, "not knowing what the crowd would do."

The Canadians ran into several more roadblocks on the way to Leopoldville but there were no more incidents.

A Congolese officer's staff car escorted them the last, few miles into Leopoldville.

"Most of the Congolese treated us well," Carleton said. "At the last roadblock we even gave us soft drinks and rolls."

31 'BAN-BOMB' MARCHERS HELD AFTER RALLY

Obstructing Road Are Charges Laid

LONDON (Reuters) — Thirty-one men and women were scheduled to appear in London police courts today as a result of incidents after Monday's "ban-the-bomb" protest rally in Trafalgar Square.

Four persons were arrested in the square in the heart of London as the anti-nuclear rally broke up. An estimated 23,000 marchers and another 7,000 spectators were at the meeting.

For some of the marchers, the rally marked the end of four weary — and frequently wet — days of walking.

Two columns of marchers, one from the British government nuclear establishment at Aldermaston and the other from the United States Air Force base at Wetherefield—made the trek to London. Other protesters joined the columns on the way.

Two other demonstrators were arrested Monday close by the United States Embassy in Grosvenor Square.

HIT AIR FAIL

Twenty - five more anti - nuclearites were jailed near the police station at Saville Row, where the other arrested demonstrators had been taken.

Canon John Collins, a leader of the Trafalgar Square rally, said the sitdown protest in Grosvenor Square had nothing to do with the Aldermaston or Wetherefield marches.

As the Trafalgar Square meeting dispersed, a column of about 300 marchers, calling themselves the anti - Polaris group, headed toward the U.S. Embassy.

Police reinforcements were sent to Grosvenor Square to cordon off the embassy. A spokesman said:

Claim Russian Planes Drop 300 Chutists

VIENTIANE, (Reuters)—Russian transport aircraft have dropped more than 300 parachutists each in the villages of Vang Vieng, main stronghold of the right-wing government of Laos, and Nam Tha, between Vientiane and Luang Prabang, military sources claimed today.

The sources said the parachutists comprised an entire battalion (about 600 men) of Viet Namese) and were dropped on Monday by four Ilyushin while fifteen three sorties over the area.

No immediate confirmation of the reports was available.

If correct, it would indicate leftist forces had cut off the advance elements of government troops previously reported advancing slowly towards Muong Kasy, another 25 miles north.

Boom-Boom Geoffrion Cuts Cast From Knee With Harvey's Knife

CHICAGO (CP) — Bernie (Boom - Boom) Geoffrion, with an assist from team captain Doug Harvey, borrowed a knife from a train porter on the trip here from Montreal and carved a plaster cast from an injured knee. The hope is he will be able to play in tonight's Stanley Cup playoff game.

Doctors at Montreal's Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 in the best-of-seven semi-final series. Hawks could move into the final against Detroit with a victory tonight. Should the Canadiens win, the seventh game will be played in Montreal Thursday.

Geoffrion, spark-plug of the Canadiens since the retirement of Maurice Richard at the start of this season, decided Monday to accompany the team to Chicago even though he was told by doctors a shot would be needed to kill pain in the knee.

Harvey, who has been playing with a broken bone in his foot, said Geoffrion's knee was placed in a cast Friday and it was to remain on for a week.

Club officials said the Boomer was making the trip to provide moral support.

But Geoffrion had other ideas. During the long train ride, he plotted with Harvey, in a locked compartment they operated on the cast with the borrowed knife.

The operation completed, the Boomer confided to his teammates:

"There is no sense going to Chicago for 24 hours without at least making an effort to play."

Geoffrion said that perhaps injections would kill the pain enough to enable him to take at least an occasional turn on the ice.

Macmillan and Kennedy Start Talks on Wednesday

KINGSTON, Jamaica (Reuters) —Prime Minister Macmillan was scheduled to fly to Washington from this West Indies island today for talks with President Kennedy aimed at rallying the Western Allies and meeting the Russian Chinese challenge.

Talks between the two leaders open Wednesday.

An old cold war issues will be discussed in Washington, including Laos, Berlin, disarmament, the Congo nuclear test ban negotiations and recognition of Communist China.

Reports of the Macmillan-Kennedy conference at Key West, Fla., March 26 indicate the Anglo-American alliance is in good shape and that the two leaders established a close relationship based on mutual confidence and respect.

Observers here believed Macmillan will urge the Kennedy administration to co - operate on three main policies:

1. Britain and the United States must continue to insist that West Germany and other allies with large balance-of-payments surpluses assume more responsibility for defense and aid to poor countries.

2. Better use must be made of Western resources to combat the Russian - Chinese advance throughout the world.

3. Western defence policies must be streamlined, strategic planning reappraised and waste and duplication eliminated in the Allied military organization and in weapons research.

Observers here believe Macmillan will devote his speech at the Massachusetts Institute of

Castro Expected to Charge Ship Invaded Cuban Waters

HAVANA (CP) — The Associated Press reported today that Fidel Castro's regime is expected to charge that an American cabin cruiser ship intercepted by a Cuban gunboat Friday invaded Cuba's territorial waters.

Castro has scheduled a radio-television speech Sunday and may comment then, the AP said. So far there has been no comment by government officials or the controlled press.

U.S. Navy officials at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, said the 92-ton schooner Western Union and her crew of 23 men were intercepted in international waters, about five miles off the port of Baracoa, on the eastern Cuban coast, and released six hours later after a U.S. destroyer and jet planes appeared off Baracoa.

The Swiss Embassy, which has represented U.S. interests in Cuba since Havana and Washington broke diplomatic relations, Monday delivered to the Cuban Foreign ministry a U.S. note asking for an explanation.

The Western Union was due in Key West, Fla., sometime today.

The schooner had been en route to Key West after repairing her trawler damaged in U.S. Navy spokesman said, when attacked by the gunboat, which had an armed crew of 30 to 40 men. The spokesman gave this account.

Capt. R. T. Steadman of the trawler ship, though ordered by the gunboat to silence her radio, got off a message to the U.S. Navy when the vessels arrived. The message was picked up at Guantanamo Bay, that he had been intercepted.

U.S. jet planes sped to the scene and two hours later the U.S. destroyer John W. Weeks arrived to find the Western Union stopped two miles outside Baracoa. The American ship had not been boarded. Four hours after the Weeks arrived, the Western Union was freed.

Traditionally, territorial limits have been set at three miles offshore. But in recent years many nations have unilaterally extended their limits to 12 miles and more.

TV to Play Increasing Role In Teaching Methods Claim

TORONTO (CP)—Despite its limitations, television will play an increasing role in future teaching methods, Dr. A. B. Cosnon of the University of Western Ontario said today.

Dr. Conron, principal of Middlesex College, was speaking to the annual convention of the Ontario Educational Association.

Television teaching is not economical except as a mass medium which makes the achievement and attitude of students difficult to measure, Dr. Conron said.

"The attitude of teachers is another major deterrent to television teaching," he said. "There is a physical barrier between teacher and student and a serious loss of student participation and critical thinking."

E. S. Phiminster, Toronto Board of Education director, said facilities of Ontario universities will have to be doubled in the next 10 years to meet increased attendances.

"The present budget in the Ontario Legislature calls for an estimated $233,831,000 to be spent on education," he said. "If Canada were to keep pace with U.S. educational expenditures, some $550,000,000 would have to be spent in the next five years."

Payable to Firms Owned by Accused

BRANDON, Man. (CP)—Cancelled Brandon Packers Limited cheques totalling more than $230,000 and payable to firms named or controlled by Hugh Paton and D. Hubert Cox of Toronto have been produced at the preliminary hearing of the two men.

The Toronto businessmen are charged with conspiring to steal $460,000 in money and securities from the local meat packing firm between Jan. 1, 1956 and Nov. 30, 1960.

The cheques were produced Monday by RCMP Sgt. Nels Stavenjord. Most were endorsed as exhibits for identification.

Included in the total were nine cheques totalling $39,756 issued to Great West Saddlery Company Limited, controlled by Paton and Cox and parent firm of Brandon Packers. Some cheques were listed as "Fees for management services."

Sgt. Stavenjord testified that one cheque in the amount of $45,000 and issued April 6, 1956, was accompanied by a requisition saying it had been issued "to reimburse instructions from Mr. Cox."

INDICATES REDEMPTION

Correspondence read at the hearing indicated that Paton and Cox redeemed preferred stock held by J. C. Donaldson of Brandon, former owner of Brandon Packers, then had the packing firm reimburse them for this payment.

The correspondence said the redemption of the preferred stock was part of the sale agreement completed when Paton and Cox bought Brandon Packers from Donaldson.

Two cheques totalled $51,746 and were accompanied by requisitions saying they were to pay for redemption of preferred shares of Brandon Packers. The cheques were made out to holding companies of Paton and Cox, Paton Corporation Limited and Leomar Investments Corporation Limited.

Earlier Monday, Magistrate William Stordy granted a court order to permit the Crown to investigate bank records of Great West Saddlery, Paton Corporation and Leomar Corporations. The order permits examination of records held by the Bank of Montreal in Winnipeg and Toronto.

Special prosecutor A. S. Dewar of Winnipeg said the Crown wants to determine what banking arrangements were in effect among the three companies during the period covered specified in the conspiracy charge.

25 Countries Urge Sanctions Against Govt.

Will Debate Motion In Political Committee

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Twenty - five African countries lined up today in a campaign to isolate South Africa and drive her out of the United Nations.

They demanded sanctions so harsh that if approved by the 99 - member General Assembly the white - supremacy country would undoubtedly find it impossible to stay in the UN.

Some Negro African delegates suggested in speeches that South Africa should be kicked out of the UN because of apartheid policies its Nationalist government still is pursuing despite repeated pleas by the world body.

The question of racial strife caused by apartheid is being debated in the 99-member special political committee and various speakers have referred to South Africa's decision to withdraw from the Commonwealth because of criticism of apartheid.

ASK BOYCOTT

A resolution circulated by the 25 African nations Monday night called on all UN members to isolate South Africa in diplomatic and communications and to enforce an economic boycott unless there is a change of policy toward the 10,000,000 South African non-whites.

But a split among the anti-white countries was apparent from the outset and it was clear that many countries — while ready to join in deploring apartheid—would stop short of the drastic measures proposed by the 25.

India, Malaya and Ceylon later joined by the United Arab Republic introduced a much milder resolution, asking "all states to consider taking such steps and collective action as are open to them to bring about the abandonment" of apartheid.

Observers have noted that in the 15-country Afro - Asian bloc the older Asian countries have tried to exercise a restraining influence on newly-freed African countries eager to flex their diplomatic muscles.

WILD CLAIMS PORTS

The new draft demands that all countries: Break off diplomatic relations with South Africa; close their ports to South African ships; forbid their ships from entering South African ports; boycott all South African goods and refrain from exporting goods from there; and refuse landing and passenger facilities to South African aircraft.

These measures were first outlined in a speech by Ghana's Alex Quaison-Sackey and the Ghanaian delegate then in a formal resolution was also soon influenced by the more extrememinded new African states, such as Guinea and Mali. But

Red China Supports Russian Stand Calling for Early Laos Cease-Fire

PEKING (Reuters) — Communist China supports Russia's proposal for a peaceful solution in Laos made in a note last week to Britain, Chinese Vice-Premier Chen Yi Thagi said here tonight.

Chen, speaking at a Hungarian National Day reception here, said the proposal by the Soviet government was welcomed by the world peace as well as those of the Laotian people.

"The Soviet news agency Tass, meanwhile, reported the Soviet proposal had been approved by Prince Souphanouvong, leader of the pro-Communist Pathet Lao guerrillas in Laos, and his half-brother Prince Souvanna Phouma, the country's self-exiled former neutralist leader.

Tass said the proposals were approved at a meeting Monday of the Committee of Struggle for Peace, Neutrality, National Concord and the Unity of Laos," formed last November by the two half-brothers and paratroop represented at the new talks.

Capt. Kong Le who led the coup that made Souvanna premier for a period last year.

The Russians agreed Saturday to the need for an early cease-fire in the Indochina kingdom and suggested an international conference early this month in Phom Penh, Cambodia, to discuss the neutrality question.

It also agreed to a British proposal for a meeting outside of the three-power truce supervisory commission with Laos, saying that such a meeting was possible."

However, the Soviet reply to the British note did not specifically meet the West's proposal for a 14-nation conference on international conference.

Liu said the Chinese government and people actively supported the proposal by the Soviet Union and considered that the correct way to a peaceful solution of the Laotian question.

China took part in the 1954 Geneva conference and, under the Russian proposal, would be

Four Persons, All Related, Killed in Crash

LAMBETH, Ont. (CP)—Four persons, all related, were killed instantly when their car was crushed in a head-on collision with a tractor-trailer on Highway 2 about five miles west of here.

Dead are Neil Hanna Gillies, of Glencoe, Ont.; his wife Margaleta, her brother Malcolm Leitch, of Walkers, and his daughter Bonnie, 10.

Truck driver William Simpson, 31, of London, was reported in satisfactory condition in hospital with face cuts and a suspected broken arm.

Three of the victims were trapped inside the car as the gasoline, transmission and radiator were crushed back almost to the rear wheels. A fourth occupant was thrown clear.

The impact ripped the front wheels off the truck and twisted its motor sideways. The trailer, loaded with wooden planks, overturned, strewing its load on the highway.

The car stopped a hydro pole, leaving 30,000-volt wires dangling over the car. Police had to call Ontario Hydro to shut off power before they could safely extricate the bodies.

Dr. C. J. Powel-Smith, a Delaware physician who was one of the first to reach the scene, said the three persons trapped in the car were alive for several minutes, but he was unable to get at them to help them.

Job opportunities for the unskilled and untrained worker increase every day, Mr. Phillips insist said. Education has become available to train not only persons in the regular school system, but also to train adults to enable them to enter industry.

F. A. Hamilton, director of education for Ontario, said education is no longer a luxury, but is essential for our survival as a nation.

He predicted that future industrial growth will have to provide rooms large enough to accommodate two or three ordinary classes of desks and enabled lectures possible.

Increasing educational costs may require that the province authorize textbooks rather than let everyone buy their own.

"There is some evidence that the secondary student is suffering because of the freedom allowed in the choice of textbooks," he said.

Letter to Council Says Petitions Are Indicative Of Feeling in E. Trenton

TRENTON — Councillor Ross Burtt insisted that a letter which accompanied petitions to be presented to Council on the east side of the river be read at last night's council meeting.

The letter, from eastside resident James Brown, had been read before a council committee but Councillor Burtt thought it should be read while the press was present.

After a new discussion, the letter was read by the clerk. Mr. Brown said that 172 signatures on the petitions represented the thinking of practically the entire east side of town.

The letter was tabled for later consideration.

No action will be taken on a request from the retail merchants' committee of the Chamber of Commerce that the town bridge be opened to two-way traffic during weekends during repairs. The committee also suggested that an extra police constable be put on the repair job to hasten the opening of the bridge.

Mayor MacDonald said it had been established that Central Bridge, the contractor carrying out the repair program, would not appreciate opening the bridge to traffic before the repair job was completed. Mayor MacDonald said that the job should be completed in two weeks.

George Harvey, Crown Street, had written to council to complain "once again about the condition of neighborhood lots." He said that his neighbor was "a real eyesore" and that "he owned by the town, adjacent to his yard, to store such things as two pails of water and a couple of blocks." Mr. Harvey said that he would like to know if by-laws permitted such eyesores. At the time the by-laws were changed.

The householder will be notified to clear off the town-owned lot next to his yard or have it cleared by the town.

Mayor MacDonald said that the solicitor, R. S. Campbell, said that as long as the householder's own yard was not cluttered, a plan and to health, the town could not interfere.

HANDS TIED

The parks board had written to the clerk to comment on a suggestion by the Eastern Ontario Suburban Planning Board that the town should set aside sanitary land fill area south and west of the Community Gardens. The board said it would be willing to assume responsibility for the area, but could do nothing until the area was legally parks property.

Councillor Burtt said the matter over carefully before coming to a decision. He said there was "quite a substantial piece of land" involved, he told the board. He said that it would cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to develop the area and as the board received only one half section of the ferry out its operations it might well mean money from the town if it had jurisdiction of the area.

Mr. Larry said that the area had been designated as park land in the town's official plan and that it would eventually come under the board's jurisdiction.

Councillors Burtt and C. V. Graham said the matter should be discussed when the committee and council met.

Council decided to write to the parks board to ask it to consider developing the area.

Town Engineer Walter Murray will meet with representatives of the Cooke Development Company to discuss a request made by the company that sewers from 17 houses to be built in the sub-division west of the town be hooked into the town's main sewer. The company agreed to make sure that each house owner signed papers indicating he was willing to pay assessment and also pay an annual sum to the town which would be the difference between town taxes and the tax for Murray Township residents. Mr. Murray will investigate the proposed sewer system in the sub-division to assess whether it will conform with the town's official plan.

OKAY DELAY

The Lightfoot Construction Company had written to request that the reconstruction program on Division Street be delayed until repairs to the town bridge are completed. As the fill from excavations on the street will be trucked to the town dump across the bridge, council agreed to the delay.

It is expected that the repair program will be completed by April 17 and the street program should be completed by the end of June or early July.

Councillor D. R. Fraser moved that the clerk be instructed to prepare a by-law creating the position of clerk-comptroller on the by-laws for next council meeting. The motion was passed.

Trenton voters will be asked to vote on a resolution that the town itself, or in league with other municipalities, petition the provincial government to assume the entire cost of education in the province. The original suggestion for this move had come from the council of Richmond Hill.

Ambulance Problem Near A Solution

TRENTON — Town council last night received in principal an agreement between the town and an unidentified man to provide a 24-hour ambulance service.

According to the terms of the agreement, the operator would receive $3,800 a year from the town, paid in two equal half yearly installments. As the service would not become effective until April 15, at the end of June the operator would receive $1,900 this year only. The second installment would be paid in December. The agreement would be in effect for 1961 only. The operator would be required to post a bond, which Councillor N. J. McNair offered to guarantee.

As rent for the $5,600 ambulance town subsidy the operator would be free to charge a "reasonable fee."

Councillor Lloyd Worrall queried the "reasonable fee" clause. He said he would like to see the operator bonded to assure council that the service would be carried out for the entire year.

Councillor McNair, who made the agreement with the operator, said that the man currently was employed but would give his employer reasonable notice if council would approve the agreement, at least to the point where everything except the operator himself was approved.

Mayor James MacDonald and town Clerk O. W. Larry have met the operator and agreed with Councillor McNair that he was a "clean cut young man."

Councillor McNair said that the name of the operator would be revealed in two weeks when council meets again.

Plan Court Action Against Town Realtor

TRENTON — Town council last night passed a resolution authorizing the town solicitor to start court action against James P. Day, Trenton realtor, on behalf of the corporation.

Mr. Day has allegedly failed to comply to a council order to restore a lot at the base of Mount Pelion "to its original condition".

Mr. Day excavated at the rear of a lot he owned and cut into the mountain at a 90-degree angle. The town claims that Mr. Day has thus passed on its land at the side of the lot.

The excavation has also been a subject of controversy with the Public Utilities Commission which claims that the town's water tank on the mountain directly above the lot was endangered by the digging.

The parks board has also queried the location of the excavation in relation to a road which it owns on the mountain.

Mr. Day was notified to restore the lot to its original condition as a letter dated last week sent out by the notice before court action would be instigated has elapsed.

Grade 12 To Write Final Exams

TORONTO (CP) — Beginning in 1963 all Ontario Grade 13 students will be required to write final examinations, Deputy Education Minister C. W. Booth said Monday.

In the past Grade 12 students who maintained high marks in a subject during the term could be recommended to Grade 13 for the subject.

Mr. Booth told the Ontario Secondary School Headmasters Association the policy was the result of experimental Grade 13 tests given by the department in 1958-59-60.

The department had been encouraging principals to discard the recommendation system. Writing of final Grade 12 exams has been required in Toronto for the last five years.

He said the change will prepare students for more difficult departmental exams encountered in Grade 13.

BEST INDICATION

The headmasters were told by Dr. C. A. Brown, registrar of the Ontario department of education, that Grade 13 examinations are the best indication of how a student will do in university.

He told the association that universities are trying to blame their difficulties with increasing numbers of applications on the examinations and the marking procedure.

Dr. Brown said his department is taking steps to speed up the marking of papers. Because of difficulties involved it was unlikely results would be available any earlier.

the U.A.R. is co-sponsoring both resolutions.

During debate — some 25 speakers have been heard since it started March 25—ironic reference is sometimes made to the part that a South African played in the formation of the UN. A graduate of that country, the late Field Marshal Jan Christian Smuts, wrote the preamble to the UN charter.

CANADA TO BE HEARD

Another 25 speakers—including Canada—remain to be heard in the apartheid debate as it resumes today.

Although Prime Minister Diefenbaker was absent in the Commonwealth conference in London when South Africa decided to withdraw it is understood that the idea of sanction does not sit well in the Canadian view.

The Canadian delegation was ready to vote for a resolution condemning apartheid — it abstained on a similar measure last year—but did not plan on supporting further action, it was understood.

APPROVES CONGO

In other business Monday, the General Assembly approved a hand-to-mouth extension of Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold's emergency powers for the Congo operation.

A stop-gap resolution proposed by India was approved by a vote of 81 to 10 with 22 abstentions. It extends Hammarskjold's mandate to send at the rate of $400,000 a month for the military and civilian Congo force until April 21, the scheduled date of the latest extension agreement.

The Soviet bloc and Mali opposed the motion. Soviet delegate A. A. Roschin stated once again that only the Security Council—in which Russia has a veto—has authority to approve Congo expenditures. He charged that the entire Congo operation was in the interest of colonialists.

The assembly action merely postpones a showdown on the issue of Congo financing since the problem of how to meet the 1961 budget estimated at $120,000,000 has yet to be faced.

Bayside Boy Found Unharmed About 2 Miles From His Home

Object of an intensive search by up to 300 volunteers, a two-and-a-half-year-old Bayside boy was found unharmed just before dark last night three hours after he was reported missing from his home.

Gordon Drennan, son of LAC and Mrs. Ted Drennan, was found by two neighbors entangled in a wire fence near airport property, and about two miles from his home.

The boy was found by Norman Hazelwood, proprietor of the Bayside mobile trailer park, and Edward Harvel of Bayside.

The boy's parents live on Quinte Street, a small sub-division near the Quinte Drive-in Theatre, where they have built their own home.

A small black cocker spaniel was still with the boy when he was found.

PLAYING WITH SISTER

Mrs. Drennan told the Ontario Intelligencer today that the boy had been playing outside with his sister, Vlona, aged 3½, when the girl came in alone.

The father went outside to look for the boy and when a search of the area failed to locate his son, he called the provincial police at Belleville, who organized a search party.

An appeal for help over CJBQ radio brought dozens of volunteers to aid in the search.

Mrs. Drennan said Gordon had only a slight bruise on his leg where he got caught in the fence surrounding air station runway property and a few miles north of his home.

Included in the search party were Provincial Police, neighbors, and air force personnel. Militia members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment were being readied to join the search when the lad was found about 6.30.

The RCAF Search and Rescue assisted in the search for the boy sending up a helicopter with the boy's father to scour the area.

Site of the new apartment building is on two lots on the west side of George Street between Bridge and Dundas Sts. and across the street from the two other apartment house buildings.

FOLLOW PARISIAN STYLING

Suites in the new building will be of four and five rooms. There will be three floors—ground floor and two upper storeys.

Mr. William J. McCormick, representing the local realty firm of the same name, said that the designers of the new apartment building, Grierson and Walker, Toronto architects, have followed Parisian styling with large living rooms and dining rooms opening through French doors onto outside balconies.

"The entire decor has been chosen with modern styling being followed," Mr. McCormick said.

Pro-West Rightist Regime Appears to Be Losing Wind

By CARLMAN CUMMING
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The fighting in Laos bears an uncomfortable resemblance to a situation where two fathers watching their sons scrapping fall for a bait only when their own offsprings is taking a pummelling.

The pro - Western, right-wing regime in Laos now appears to be losing its wind and President Kennedy says the first need is "bring the present fighting in Laos to an end."

Premier Khrushchev, in his weekend reply to British peace-making efforts, left one thing clear: There will be little sentiment in Moscow if the Soviet-backed Pathet Lao forces use a period of protracted negotiations to throw a few rabbit punches at the right-wing regime.

Western officials say they will not talk while the fighting is going on. They have no desire to be faced in mid-conference with a fait accompli Communist victory.

The Anglo - Russian approach now being mulled would involve a call for a cease-fire; revising of the Canada - India-Poland control commission, and the simultaneous calling of a 14-nation conference to work out a political settlement.

U.S. SEES HITCH

The U.S. at Washington sees it, is the clear Soviet insistence that the 14 - nation conference be in session without waiting for firm assurance from the Communists that a cease-fire is in effect.

The U.S. view is not unreasonable. But there are many in the West who wish that the negotiations were taking place had occurred earlier.

In late December Russia and India were hopeful that the U.S. to agree to recalling the control commission. The U.S., under the urging of the Laotian rightists, was cool to the suggestion.

At that time the pro-Western forces, led by Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, had the initiative and the capital of Vientiane and the lethian were in full flight.

CHANCE MISSED

In retrospect it also appears the Eisenhower administration missed an opportunity to stabilize the situation in early September.

Paratroop Captain Kong Le had just invaded and seized a pro-Western government and a contrast regime had been set up with Souvanna Phouma, a pro-Western leader Phoumi was invited in as a vice-premier.

Instead, failing to win certain conditions, he marched on Vientiane and overthrew the Souvanna government.

This defeated a second attempt by Souvanna to establish a left - right coalition government. The mild, pipe-smoking diplomat still appears to be the only Laotian leader who stands a big enough following in both camps and he may well get a third opportunity.

The view appears to be shared with the rightists and the further strengthening of the leftist forces, all chances do not appear bright.

Chilean Liner With 25 Aboard Is Missing

SANTIAGO (AP)—A Chilean airliner was missing today with 25 persons aboard, including members of a professional Chilean soccer team.

The missing plane was due in Santiago Monday night. Its last message, from near Arica, 150 miles south of Santiago, gave no hint of trouble.

New Hydro Chairman

There was a time when the elevation of W. Ross Strike to the chairmanship of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission might have been interpreted as forecasting some changes in policy of the Commission. That day, though, would appear to have passed.

Mr. Strike was appointed to the Commission in 1944, at a time when it was a three-man body instead of the present five-man board. At the time of his appointment he was president of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association, composed of representatives of the various public utilities commissions and hydro commissions from Ontario cities, towns and villages. The Association, though by its very nature often a union of groups with opposing interests, had some bones of contention with Hydro. Not the least of these were the old wartime stabilization of rates fund and the question of the division of costs of the commercial of the 20-square foot area to the more satisfactory 60-cycle standard. The Eastern Ontario Municipal Electric Association, with Belleville playing a leading role, and the Georgian Bay Municipal Electric Association, of which Lt.-Col. A. A. Kennedy, wartime commanding officer of the Hasty Pees, was president, were formed in the fight against forcing municipalities with 60-cycle power to share so heavily in the cost of conversion of the 20-cycle area.

Col. Kennedy was later named to the HEPC as a representative of the Ontario Municipal Electric Association. The OMEA, however, does not now hold the balance of power in the Commission, because it has been enlarged to five members, with Hon. Robert Macaulay, a member of the Ontario Cabinet, being one of them.

It will be interesting to see who is appointed to the Commission to complete the complement of five members, now that James S. Duncan, chairman, has retired. One would not expect, however, that it would be another OMEA man. Nor, perhaps, ought it to be, in the best interests of Hydro and of the municipalities, too, in the long run.

Though both Mr. Strike and Col. Kennedy have been members of the HEPC long enough to make it porbable that they have divorced themselves from their earlier close association with the OMEA, it can be argued that the Commission should not have a majority of members who might, on occasion, look at problems primarily from the standpoint of the municipalities, whose short-term interests may not always coincide with what is best for Hydro itself, although from the long-range point of view the fortunes of both are inextricably interwoven one with the other.

Desertion

James Band, Ontario deputy minister of public welfare, has suggested in his annual report to his superior, Hon L. P. Cecile, that perhaps desertion should be considered a criminal offence.

The Canadian Press story added a qualifying phrase, "particularly where children are concerned."

Even with this qualification, though, caution is advisable. On the face of it, the man who deserts his wife and children and leaves them in need should be guilty of something. But things are not always as they appear. There have been reports in Toronto newspapers, which we have no reason to doubt, that there have been cases in which the father of a family has disappeared in a deliberate attempt to better the lot of his dependents—while he was at home the family did not qualify for welfare payments which they were eligible to receive as soon as he "deserted" them. A man like this is no criminal.

We suspect that the welfare department's interest in deserting husbands has been stimulated by rising welfare costs, as the result of the unemployment situation. It is certainly desirable that everything possible be done to force husbands who are employed to shoulder their legal responsibilities to provide for their families. It is, however equally desirable that the welfare department, through its regulations, should not be cast in the role of an accessory before the fact, as it would be if the reports of men leaving their families in order to aid them are correct.

Hazen Argue Had a Point

Ottawa Journal

In the Commons discussions of South Africa CCF Leader Hazen Argue has blundered on economic relations which should have been pursued further at once.

The Commonwealth association is not confined to sentimentality. It has hard sense. There are business connections represented in their simplest form by Commonwealth preferences.

Having heard the Prime Minister make his statement on the conference and Mr. Harkness' statement for the Opposition view on South Africa's withdrawal, Mr. Argue said he thought it would be a bad precedent, if a country leaving the Commonwealth had to enjoy Commonwealth trade preferences.

Mr. Speaker Michener intervened at this juncture to say he thought the CCF leader had introduced a new subject beyond the scope of the Prime Minister's statement.

Mr. Speaker has been alert to give Opposition members a proper break in Commons debate, but it seems to us he erred in this decision. Whether Mr. Argue's argument was sound is not the point here. It was certainly relevant comment.

Riches Breed Big Expenses Says Sydney

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

There is an ancient Greek saying that "Half is more than the whole"; his is what Hesiod said to his brother Perseus, when he wished him to settle a dispute without going to law

He meant that "half of the estate without the expenses of law will be better than the whole after the lawyers have had their pickings." This is a statement whose truth has not changed by time.

There is a much wider application of this Greek saying. Thus, to have what the French call "an embarrassment of riches" may be far less profitable than a decent sufficiency. As the British aristocracy, for instance, has bitterly learned, a large estate is one who cannot manage is impoverishing.

A man of modest income will be poorer with a large house and garden than he would be if he lived in a smaller residence; for increase of wealth, if expenditure is more in proportion makes for poverty.

This is why the middle-class people now are learning, after a dozen years of prosperity, is that an higher income goes in a arithmetical progression, but expenses in a geometrical progression.

More simply put, as we ascend the scale of income and affluence, the expenses become ly more and more for the symbols of such status. The junior executive lives in a suburb that is somewhat beyond his means, and belongs to a country club he can scarcely afford, in the classic instance of what we might call "conspicuous stupidity." His income may be wise to put it in a house but his expenses are two-and-a-half times as great.

The man who becomes also corporation that is trying to compete with the big boys in a new field is usually forced to spend more and more for a slightly larger share of the total business. A smaller company without the overhead could be surrounded by agents, lawyers, tax experts, bevies of attendants and all the appurtenances of fame and fortune.

The man who is making the fatuous suggestion that it is better to be poor than rich but simply unaware that he is an optimum point of income, beyond which the half, paradoxically, does become more than the whole.

California Style Soul?

Hamilton Spectator

'You can always tell the soul of a nation or a town by its housing", said a British M.P. some years ago.

This strikes us as a most perceptive remark. It seems to show the shape of a nation's ideals in each generation, what it has accomplished in daily life and its ideas of what makes a home both within and without.

In Canada we seem — since we have discovered we have remade a crass of architectural style that is all our own.

But if our national soul has been characterized by the ranch-style house, it must, oddly, be a California soul, for that is the ranch-style's fashional started. And California, as Fred Allen once remarked, is a fine place if you are an orange. Why its housing styles should be typical of Canada's architectural soul throughout a decade or so is a mystery.

When Frogs A-wooing Go

National Geographic Bulletin

Frogs play virtuoso parts in nature's spring music festival. When a frog would serenade or be selects a shady spot in pond or marsh, and starts his calls. Other males join in, and soon females are attracted by the concert.

Each of the 2,000 species of frogs has a distinctive call which identifies it from all the same kind.

Frogs utter their mating cries without opening their mouths. Air from the lungs is forced back and forth in the vocal cords, producing the sound. An air pouch under the chin serves as a resonator. The size of some species swell to half the size of the head and body.

A chorus of Brazilian frogs sounds like a regiment of bees beating tin pans. The common pickerel frog's voice suggests a snoring rooster.

The mink frog is said to have a voice closely resembling the noise produced by hammering a loose plank on a pier timber. The carpenter frog utters projects a hammering sound, and the bullfrog's voice roughly out a woody "took-took" which calls to mind pounding on a hollow log.

In describing the white-lipped frog's voice naturalist Ditmars of the New York Zoological Park uses the simile: "The call of the male resembles the plunging into water of a pail of water falling from a cave and into a quiet pool below."

Less pleasing is the voice of the giant tree frog which sounds like the grating of chains through an unoiled pulley."

During the mating calls, frogs emit warnings, fright screams and rain songs. The warning notes check off unwelcome visits of frogs in the breeding season. The fright screams, issued with the mouth open, is a spine-chilling, human-like shriek uttered when the frog is in peril. The rain song is apparently the frog's way of expressing of singing in the shower.

Chorusing frogs often are charged with disturbing the sleep of the countryside. A Missouri farmer has a more unusual complaint. He accused a large bullfrog of keeping his wife thin.

"Every time that blamed bullfrog gives out with a bellow," the farmer declared "the hogs think it's someone calling them to eat. They come running at the fat off their bones answering his call."

Urges Mental Calisthenics

Owen Sound Sun-Times

A daily habit of "mental calisthenics to flex the thinking muscles" is advocated by a Chicago insurance executive as a necessity for keeping up with the fast paced modern times. "Why shouldn't we exercise to keep from getting flabby in the head?" he asks.

For our "mental calisthenics or daily pushups for the mind," he prescribed the following exercises: Read at least one book each day, not only to keep the mind in trim, but also as pleasure and relaxation.

Make it a "must" to read thoroughly your local newspaper and a weekly news magazine to keep abreast of the times.

At the office, discussion groups should be created for daily sessions of at least a half hour. Such discussion panels could be patterned after the informative public affairs programs on television. Perhaps they could even take place at the coffee breaks! And a bit of sound advice. Avoid talking solely for the sake of arguing.

Everyone should make a practice of writing a letter a day as a "mental calisthenics." In addition, a person in sparse moments could practice writing a short article on any subject he knows something about. The late the article aside for a few days for examination later to determine how clear or well his thinking ability is operating.

Old Man Reveals New 'Secrets' for Longevity

By Joseph G. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Every year we go south we meet a friend who seems to have arrested the aging process. He is a man 88 years old, of rather delicate structure. He does not weight over 100 pounds and there is not an ounce of fat on him.

"He has blood pressure of 138-80. He looks and behaves like somebody not over 65. I saw him dance last year. He dresses neatly. This year he went on an extensive European trip.

"He takes 10 drops of Lugol and claims this prevents hardening of the arteries. Please let me have your opinion. — O.H."

My best wishes to the spry old guy. And I'll give you my opinion, unexpurgated.

I think he's a man who has had the foresight to choose good ancestors, who has not allowed that heritage to get fat, and has probably lived an active, useful life, and who has been endowed by nature with the kind of temperament that couldn't be helped.

At 70, 80 and 90 he has probably assumed (or kept) the attitude that life is interesting at any age as long as one remains interested. On top of all that, he has luck.

As to the medicine he takes, I'm an old and well-known drug, occasionally useful in small sort of way, and occasionally harmful in some unknown sort of way if used incorrectly and on somebody who happens to be sensitive to it.

From time to time people have been given this stuff over and over long periods of time without any indication that it prevented that arterial hardening, that hair from turning gray or their arms from getting too short for their eyes when they looked at a phone book without reading glasses.

Your friend is now 86. In five years newspaper reporters will be interviewing him and asking him the secret of living to 100.

We have had 100-year-olds say it was because they never smoked — or because they did. Because they ate a lot of exercise — or because they didn't. Because they drank a terrible thing but corn likker, or because they never drank anything but water.

Your obsolescent (fancy word for frisky) friend will doubtless tell 'em that he owes it all to taking 10 drops of his favorite medicine.

If we look hard enough, we'll doubtless find some old somebody else who says he got to be 100 because he never took any of that medicine.

Personally I don't expect to get to be 100 or anywhere near it. But if I do, and if some reporter hasn't thought up some new question listed of that "darnpholl" one about "To what do you attribute your great age?" I'm going to give him a new answer.

I'm going to say, "I haven't the slightest idea — except heredity, good luck, and living a good life."

"Dear Dr. Molner: My husband has what two doctors called an allergy. Once in two or three weeks his cheek and tongue on one side swell up overnight. During the day the swelling subsides. It started last summer. There is no pain or fever. We thought you might have some experience with such a case. — F. L."

Now you have a third doctor who thinks it sounds like an allergy. Keep watch of what he eats or, or what goes into his mouth. Start out for purpose — prior to one of these attacks. If you know what start at night. It could be something he nibbles some evenings. Nuts are a frequent source. Try mouthwash, or a toothpaste he occasionally uses, or —

"Dear Dr. Molner: My feet dry out and crack, especially in winter. My doctor suggested vaseline. — E. W."

It's not unusual for skin (including that of the feet) to become excessively dry in winter. Your doctor's suggestion is a good one.

Pat! My Pastime "The Lost Secret of Reducing," tells how to get rid of it the easy way. They may write to Dr. Molner in care of The Packsack, Sun-Times Syndicate, P.O. Box 250, Chicago Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope and a dime in coin to cover handling and postage.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

In a supermarket, a young lady in horn rims with a pad of questionnaires, stopped me to enquire into my shopping habits, my sales resistance and so on She checked what I had in my pushcart.

Was it the label that had influenced my choice of this can of beans? Why had I selected this bottle of pickles in preference to the others? Why did I had no instant coffee, she enquired if the coffee display had failed in some way to arrest me? Had the price of this article or that been a consideration? Why had I not taken one marked "3 cents off"?

"Look sister," I said, "I buy strictly on whim."

This is the larger part in human life than the merchandisers and all their surveys wot of. Why does a man fall in love with one girl and not one of a dozen others equally able at the same time? Whim. Why does a girl settle on a cop for the rest of fifty? Whim.

What suddenly suggests to a woman and wife that they want new curtains in the living room? The TV has been on the blink for two years. What suddenly puts it into our heads to go and buy a new one? Search me. Ma's women wear. Did they do a survey first? What makes a man think of a man or woman? What makes spendthrifts of them? Is it all reasoned out?

It's pure whim, thank heaven, or we'd all be the insufferable automatons the surveyors will eventually make of us.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

LOST

The best of life comes about through our efforts to find it.

We come into the world as dependents, and by the grace of our mettle, we leave it with people leaning on us and feeling the chance to lend of the strength we have developed.

People discover themselves within themselves! And many times after searching the world over.

To be lost in the midst of success is a terrible experience. Our vaunted bigness shrinks to a kind of littleness that merely fills in the air of infinity. We begin to look upon the periodicals of our day as old and envy their end shrouded in beauty and fragrance. We read about the stories of men who have told me of their feelings in the forests, and this is the picture imaged upon my mind.

But the most bitter experience of all is to be lost in the midst of the whirl and activity of everyday life.

Many of the complications that enter our life are caused by ourselves. And then, instead of sitting down and thinking things all out, we confuse everything by getting overwrought and overtired and just plain discouraged. Then we don't know where we are — for we are lost!

Let us begin each day with a simple plan and let it keep our eyes upon it — and go through to the finish.

Then when evening comes we shall know the way home!

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR EARL L. DOUGLASS

'GREATER LOVE'

Dr. Tom Dooley, who died some weeks ago, will have his name written on the minds of a whole generation and on humanity's role of honor. His companion, Lucy Kroll, noticed was a bright light shining in a dark world. He died young. He died of a disease from which he tried to shield others. His life appeared to have been cut short — yet was it?

God has measuring sticks and He keeps calendars which are far different from anything we know. A thousand years in God's sight is but as yesterday when it is past, and as a watch in the night. Methuselah lived 969 years and died — that was all. There are others who have been on particular significance to his living. Jesus lived 30 years and changed the course of human history. It is significant that Tom Dooley was almost the same age as the Master whose he served so well.

Length of years on our calendar is one thing. Length of years on God's calendar is something quite different. We measure and weigh. God measures — and the decision He makes on the basis of that measurement spell eternity with all its plus and minus values for us.

There is nothing more noble than a man who lives his life for his fellows. "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends."

Russia Has Lots of Oil

Milwaukee Journal

Western sources estimate that Russian petroleum exports in 1960 totaled 192,000 barrels, twice the 1959 figure. Soviet crude oil and petroleum products already have crept into such traditionally western markets as Britain, Italy, Greece, Ceylon, Pakistan, India and Brazil.

The Soviets have plenty of oil to pour into the world's market. Construction of pipe lines to western Europe and expansion of an already large tanker fleet indicate that Russia has ambitious plans to expand exports.

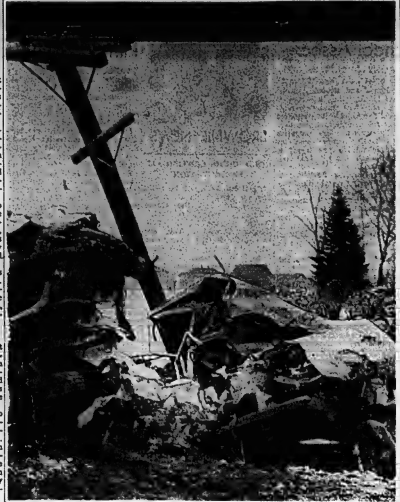
Special Defence Message Being Closely Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — President Kennedy's special defence message to Congress last week is being closely studied here by officials of the defence and defence production departments.

What interested the latter department most was the reference to an additional $192,000,000 being put into research on new types of non-nuclear weapons and equipment in the field of communications, transportation and anti-submarine warfare.

The U.S. president has also ordered procurement of more non-nuclear arms such as transport planes, helicopters, rifles, electronic and communications equipment, improved artillery and infantry ammunition and torpedoes.

As an example of how this might benefit Canada, the U.S. Army, which has bought 31 Caribou transport planes from de Havilland of Downsview, Ont., now may be in the financial position to buy some 240 more.



REDUCTION ORDERED

On the other hand, President Kennedy has ordered a reduction in the B-70 bomber research program. Orenda Engines Limited of Malton, Ont., had held out some hope that its Iroquois engine might be used as the power plant for the B-70.

Mr. Kennedy was opposed to any procurement now of components for the U.S. Army's Nike-Zeus counter - missile system. Canadian scientists have been playing a big part in development of this system and there is a possibility that Canadian companies may eventually share in production of components, too.

The president added $23,000,000 to the 1962 North American air defence budget.

The RCAF wants to get a new interceptor — specifically, the American F-101B — to replace the ancient CF-100 jet in five home air defence squadrons.

Manitoba Highway Program Used for Political Purposes Charge Made In Committee

WINNIPEG (CP) — Opposition Leader D. L. Campbell Monday started an attempt to prove to the public accounts committee of the Manitoba legislature that there were threats, bribery and patronage involved in the highway program of the Progressive Conservative government.

The former Liberal - Progressive premier said: "Our contention is that the road program of Manitoba has been used and still is being used for political purposes—that there were threats and bribes. We will try to establish these facts."

At the committee meeting opened, most members of the 57-seat legislature were on hand, including Progressive Conservative Premier Duff Roblin. The committee chairman is Education Minister Stewart McLean, generally considered to be one of the political strong men of the Roblin administration.

Mr. Campbell started to present his case under the glare of lights set up for television cameras.

M. M. Hryhorczuk (LP—Edmonton Plains), a former Liberal-Progressive attorney - general, said Mr. Campbell did not intend to charge any particular person but was levelling charges against "the government and a political party."

WANTS THE FACTS

Premier Roblin told the committee he was just interested in "nailing down the facts."

"In the legislature a person can say nothing without needing proof," he said. "As a result, a lot of loose statements of facts are made which can damage the names or reputations of individuals."

The committee voted to issue subpoenas to witnesses after Mr. Campbell asked for the issuing of such documents.

John Tanchak (LP — Ennesson), testifying under oath, said that 11 of 13 flagmen employed on one highway project were employed "unnecessarily."

EMPLOYED PREVIOUSLY

Attorney - General Sterling Lyon contended that many of the men in question also had employed while the former Liberal-Progressive government was in power. When Mr. Tanchak agreed that this employment under two governments was true in the case of one man, Mr. Lyon said:

"And yet, when he is employed by this government he is employed for political purposes."

Mr. Tanchak stuck to his statements that the men were employed unnecessarily.

Every bank can and does provide you with the same number of standard banking services.

These services range from different types of bank accounts, to loan plans, to safety deposit boxes and so on.

SEATO PLEASED

On the Laotian question, Macmillan said Monday Britain and other members of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization were "pleased by the tone and character" of the Russian reply to the British note asking for a cease-fire, reactivation of the three-nation control commission and an international meeting to solve the problem.

"There are certain points to be cleared, but I feel optimistic about the general conditions," Macmillan said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy, ending his Easter vacation in Florida, will fly back to Washington late today for his meeting with Prime Minister Macmillan, who is scheduled to arrive from The West Indies at 6 p.m. EST.

To save the prime minister from bucking the capital's rush-hour traffic, a helicopter will take him to the Naval Observatory grounds next door to the British Embassy. He will stay at the embassy during his five-day visit.

State Secretary Dean Rusk will extend an official welcome to Macmillan at the observatory. Rusk meets earlier in the day with Earl Home, the British foreign secretary.

Home arrived Monday night to start preliminary work with Rusk on a Western reply to Russia's note on Laos.

Thomas Hayden, 41-year-old Picton Collegiate English teacher, killed when his car crashed into the side of a CNR passenger train near Kingston, will be buried Thursday at Vancouver, B.C. Funeral services were held this morning (Tuesday) at St. Gregory's R.C. Church at Picton. Hayden is survived by his wife and one son, Mark Alexander, four. The boy was with his father at the time of the accident, but was thrown clear of the car and escaped serious injury. (Hodgson, Picton)

Real Rewards of Education Pleasures of Achievement President Tells Convention

TORONTO (CP) — Parents have been criticized for encouraging their children to better their education with the object of enjoying a softer life.

Harold A. Klinck, president of the Ontario school trustees and ratepayers division of the Ontario Educational Association, said Monday the real rewards of higher education, are the pleasures of achievement and improving mankind.

About 10,000 delegates are attending the annual Catholic Education Conference and the annual Ontario Educational Association meeting.

Many have expressed dissatisfaction with current mores and attitudes to education in Canada.

In his presidential address at a general session of the department, Mr. Klinck said: "Our young people are basically idealists. Their purpose is to get an education so they can do and more for their fellow men, more efficiently and in a much better fashion."

He criticized the parents' viewpoint as "narrow."

DEPLORES ACCEPTANCE

At the OEA convention, W. C. Lorimer, superintendent of Winnipeg schools, deplored the acceptance by teachers' training colleges of students who do not qualify for university entrance.

Rev. B. W. Harrigan of Hamilton, spiritual director of the 38,000-member federation of Catholic Parent-Teacher Associations of Ontario, told delegates at their convention that they should sympathize with those who hold to the value of religion in the public school system.

He said the problem of religion in public schools should lead to a greater appreciation of the advantages offered to children in separate schools.

Mrs. W. L. Jones, with the Toronto Teacher's College, told a religious education section of the OEA that teachers should present religious facts to make children think. It was not their job to set up prejudices or to indoctrinate.

When children ask about denominational matters, Mrs. Jones said, they should be referred to their parents.

"Teachers are teachers," she said, "not preachers."

Other speakers warned against the creation of "specialized ignoramuses."

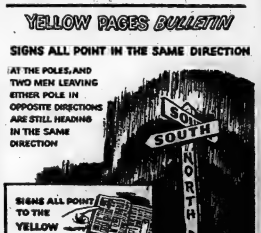
Dr. George Goth, minister of London's Metropolitan United Church, told the Ontario school inspectors the free world would do better in competition with the Soviet Union if it produced more cultivated persons with interior resources in philosophy and theology than by training more engineers and scientists. He suggested specialized university courses should be preceded by a basic two-year course in the humanities.

Gerald Hasse of Ottawa, deputy secretary of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, spoke to the Ontario Secondary School Headmasters Association and said Russian education has been overrated by untrained Western observers. Russia's methods and curricula are behind Canada's, he said.

J. W. E. Newberry of Sudbury's Laurentian University, speaking at the OEA convention, said recent educational expansion has increased the "know-how" of life rather than the "know why."

He said North American society has lost confidence in the church and is being destroyed through lack of true knowledge. He urged a return to the church because it is a place of discovery.

MUST RESPECT PARENTS



Most Rev. F. A. Marrocco, Auxiliary Roman Catholic Bishop of Toronto, told the CPTA that teachers must beware of considering themselves exclusive judges of how children should be educated and beware also of treating parents as interlopers and subvertives in school matters.

Parents should not regard teachers as baby-sitters, he said and teachers should not look at parents as mere taxpayers.

A resolution urging the CPTA to institute a program to encourage members to take an interest in separate school problems and to set as an early objective amendment of tax legislation so separate school boards get their fair share of corporation taxes was one of several passed.

Donald A. Cooper of Hamilton was elected president of the OEA. He succeeds D. M. Ritchie of Parry Sound.

R. H. Wallace was named first vice-president and Harold A. Klinck of Oshawa second vice-president.

The bride's mother chose a dress of navy blue organza over green and rust, flowered polished cotton and contrasting accessories. Her corsage was of white carnations.

The bridegroom's mother wore dusky-rose lace over taffeta with contrasting accessories and white tapers and bridal flowers.

For their honeymoon to Ottawa and Gaspe Peninsula, the bride wore a white embossed cotton sheath with necklace, a gift of the bridegroom, red topcoat with white accessories and a corsage of white baby mums.

Guests were present from Apsley, Brooklin, Hastings, Havelock, Norwood, Peterborough, Windsor, Springbrook and Marmora.

The young couple will reside in Norwood.

School Uniforms Advocated By Home and School Assoc.

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP)—The Saint John District Council of Home and School Associations is conducting a survey to find out how many parents would like to have their children wear school uniforms.

"Uniforms are less expensive than fussier clothes and the children wouldn't be trying to outdo each other," said one supporter.

Others are just beginning to wear colors and it's wonderful to have youngsters in bright shirts and sweaters," commented an opposept.

Heads of the two private schools in the area emphatically favor uniforms, traditional since each institution has one founded.

As far as we are concerned, a uniform is orderly and contributes to good discipline," said Dr. C. B. Bonnycastle, headmaster of Rothesay Collegiate School. "It has a unifying effect, promotes esprit de corps and the boys tend to live up to it. A uniform sets up a good dress standard and decent dress standards is good living habits and good teaching."

Mrs. J. C. Williams, head mistress of Netherwood School for Girls, stressed the economy of school uniforms and said Netherland's is pretty and practical.

"The girls wear it with pride and affection. It promotes a certain school spirit and the soft green shade is universally becoming. There has never been any criticism of the uniform dress. Some of our girls even have their graduation dress made dress. It is designed for games and gymnasium work as well as classroom, with a minimum of upkeep."

Fredi Murphy, president of the Saint John Teachers' Association, had no comment.

D. E. Marshall, president of the Saint John Board of Trade, said the board of trade has not "formally considered the question of uniforms for schools and therefore I am not able to say just what the board's action or policy would be.

"If there is sufficient interest, and if the need arose, the board would be pleased to consider and take what, in their opinion, is the appropriate action."

'Food Is Fun' Topic at 'Talks For Adults'

The fifth in the series of talks for adults was held at the Belleville General Hospital on the night of March 27. The speaker for the evening was Mrs. D. J. MacKinnon, who known as "Dorothy Batchelor," who chose as her topic for the evening, "Food is Fun".

One of the most important ingredients in cooking, she said, is imagination. This takes away the drudgery and makes interesting and good things can be developed. Many women become bored with getting "three meals a day" because they are afraid to try new things. For instance, almost any vegetable can be served raw, including turnip, cauliflower, cucumber, and cole, with or without a garnish and often in salads.

For many people the fun of eating is neglected in the modern world of "dieting". Teenagers particularly go in for "fads" which consist mainly of one or two foods, but they should realize that the same results would be obtained by consuming the same number of calories in a variety of interesting foods. Many of these fadds diets simply delighted in being "off" when normal eating habits are resumed, the weight is regained and the weight goes up again. The simplest method for reducing would be to eat only a little less of everything.

CHILDREN'S RULES

Mrs. MacKinnon reviewed Canada's Food Rules and suggested that homemakers keep a copy of these fastened to a cupboard door in the kitchen for reference. She also gave a wide variety of foods to ensure that we get everything the necessary nutrients for health or a "well-balanced" diet. She also stressed the importance of teaching children good food habits. Often, she said, when a mother dislikes a certain food the rest of the family is deprived of it also. Parents also pass on their likes and dislikes to their children, when they see their parents refuse something, they assume that it is not good. Mrs. MacKinnon also brought out the following points about likes and dislikes in food: "We may dislike a food because it is related to an unpleasant situation; if the food does not look appetizing we tend to pass it by; sometimes we dislike a food because it has a different texture, a sharp flavor.

"With regard to the cooking of vegetables, they should be cooked in a minimum of water until they are just tender-crisp; over-cooked vegetables are neither nutritious nor tasty. This important thing in meal planning are color, texture, temperature — hot, things hot and cold things cold.

Mrs. MacKinnon stressed the importance of eating a good breakfast. Many people go without breakfast with the idea of losing weight, but this can make up for it by eating more during the rest of the day. Going without breakfast can make you irritable, more prone to accidents and less efficient. Where cereals are concerned whole grain is recommended such as shredded wheat.

QUALITY IMPORTANT

Food is to some people the same as alcohol to an alcoholic and most cases of overweight are the result of emotional problems. Where health is concerned, it is not the quality that is important, but the quality.

The speaker concluded her talk by describing ways the homemaker can experiment in food choice to make eating instead of a chore. Too many women take a stand in favor of the ordinary and are depriving themselves and their families of the fun in food.

Following the talk, Mrs. MacKinnon passed out samples of a "pep-tale," the result of beating an egg into a glass of fruit juice, which everyone enjoyed. This also makes a quick breakfast for those in a hurry and makes a delicious disguise where people don't like the taste of eggs.

Mrs MacKinnon was introduced by Mrs. J. Reddick and thanked by Mrs. Z. Lind, following the question and answer period.

Two booklets entitled, "Canada's Chicken," and "Nature's Masterpiece Eggs," were handed out.

The next speaker will be Dr. Z. Scott, speaking on "Health and Marriage" on Monday, April 10th at 8.30 in the Education Hall of the B.C.H.

Harmony S.C. Holds Junior Night

The program featured "Junior Night" when pupils from grades one to four inclusive took part.

It included the following pupils played: Linda Noakes, "Oranges and Lemons" (D. Bertley); Frances Smith, "Dance" (D. G. Rosenthal); Heather Sutherland, Bourree (Handel); Susan Sweet, "Minuet" (Bach) and Bonnie Faulkner "On the River" (Kabelevsky).

Canadian Girl Studying Piano at Kiev Conservatory

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Soviet journalist, obviously pleased at the way a teen-aged Canadian girl wrapped her tongue around a handful of Russian musical sentences, wrote: "I could not refrain from praising her."

David Yarovslavky, in the March issue of Soviet Union Today, had an interesting subject for his two-page, illustrated article.

She is 15-year-old Andree Kraj of Vancouver, studying piano at the Kiev Music Conservatory in the Ukraine. Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kalaud, Andree went to Kiev on a five-year scholarship worth perhaps $25,000, awarded by the Russian Cultural Exchange in September, 1959.

STUDENTS KEEP BUSY

"When studies began," wrote Yarovslavky, "there was absolutely no time for feeling lonesome. In the morning when Andree set off for her studies, she always felt a sense of pride every time she approached the beautiful building of the conservatory.

Professor Arnold Vainkin, Andree's teacher in piano, is pleased with his pupil. After studying with her two hours, Andree, after a rest, would come to the conservatory again and study the scales until late in the evening."

Yarovslavky also traced a little of the Kalaul family history:

"Andree was born in a family of working people. Her father who had come from Yugoslavia, worked as a technician, and her mother worked in a store. Both loved music deeply. After work, the Kalaul home would turn into a sort of family philharmonic. The head of the family played the contrabass, and his wife the piano.

A RUSSIAN LESSON

Andree also studies Russian.

"I attended her Russian lesson," the article goes on. "Smiling shyly, Andree replied to the teacher's questions hesitatingly but distinctly. My ear caught the familiar sentences: 'I live in the Soviet Union. I study at the conservatory. I play the piano. Now am having a lesson. I study the Russian language.'"

It was here that Yarovslavky commented: "I could not refrain from praising her."

Andree will be one of the youngest students taking part in a concert soon at Kiev's Ocktober Palace of Culture.

Yarovslavky concluded: "She knows that age or nationality will have no bearing on how she is accepted. She will be judged on her playing, for music has no racial, religious or political barriers."

A Lobster Tale

By Mary Moore

More from Grand Cayman — our West Indian island paradise . . .

Our host has told us that a boat trip to Rum Point is a "must" so to Rum Point we went. And we were glad we did.

Our catch was a 5-pound barracuda reeled in by Peady, and nine lobsters (one of which weighed 4 pounds) speared by our guide Bob Soto. The next-murder of a 10-foot hammerhead shark added to the excitement. Later the barracuda and lobster were baked in an open beach fire. We ate our fill and looked the part, for, being in the sun for five hours, we were lobster-red.

Dinner Menus

by Mary Moore

TUESDAY

Spicy Ham Loaf with Pineapple Glaze (see Monday) or Baked Bananas; Brussels Sprouts; Turnip Dice; Apple and Celery Salad; Butter Tarts; Cheddar Cheese; Tea.

The "Celeste" with seven aboard, was out in the open Carribbean only a few minutes — just time enough to get half on our lines — when Peady had a strike! Two minutes and a girl-beats-fish struggle later, a 30-inch Barracuda was gaffed and landed and pictures were snapped.

Then an hour's cruising brought us to the coral reefs where the lobsters hide. Bob donned snorkel and flippers and slipped over the side.

Peady was fascinated and a bit alarmed for he would disappear for a full two minutes at a time. Then he would surface, blow through his tube and dive again. He came to the boat twice; once with six lobsters on a string attached to his spear and another time with three more — one of them outsize. After 45 minutes of diving, spearing and bringing in the catch, he came aboard. I asked him if he were tired. He said "Ma'm," "Aren't you tired?" I repeated. "Oh, I see! Yes, I am."

Bob Soto is built like Tarzan and the show he put on to provide our lunch was worthy of a Hollywood production. (By the way, Hollywood is after him.)

Just as we were landing at Rum Point jetty, Irvine, our alert boat boy, spied a shark. The boys baited a 6-inch hook and tried to catch him from the dig get their hook into him but he struggled and broke the line. (More of this later.)

Ralph Coatsworth, the proprietor of the Rum Point Club, received us. He could be a character in a Somerset Maugham novel. He is English but has headquarters in Montreal. So far there was a strong "Commonwealth" bond.

He quenched our thirst with his famous Rum Point Special, however, He stands, as do all the recipe is a secret. I only know it had lime juice in it and plenty of ice with nutmeg sprinkled over the top. (Decided to try nutmeg on limeades at home.)

While we were busy cooling off and getting acquainted, Bob and Irvine lit the fire and prepared the catch. Only the meaty tails of the lobster interested them. These they split, seasoned with salt and pepper and butter and wrapped in heavy foil. Fillets from the barracuda were given the same treatment. When the fire built up of white mangrove branches was reduced to coals, Bob hurried the packages of fish in it and watched with him while they baked for 20 minutes.

Then we laid to. I do not suppose I will ever have too much lobster again. I groaned inwardly thinking of what I could do with those leftovers at home. The barracuda to our surprise, was equally delicious.

If you want to get away goodly, from it all and still be comfortable, Ralph Coatsworth's isolated Point is for you. There, miles from nowhere, he has a modern club-hotel, beautifully equipped to accommodate 20 guests. Electric power, bathrooms with hot and cold running water, and himself a Paris-trained chef, are at your service. But there are no telephones, T.V., night life or bellhops. Ralph's staff — two native Caymanians — walk 5 miles along the beach to their work each morning.

This Robinson Crusoe lives in a thatched cottage while his club house retreat was being built. Materials and furnishings were transported bit by bit in a small boat. For me he picked a precious ripe papaya from a tree he had grown from seed.

It was late afternoon when, reluctantly, we said good-bye to Ralph and pushed off. Then Bob spotted that hungry shark again. Every swimmer hates a shark and our boys went after him. Irvine manoeuvered the boat while Bob balanced on the prow with his spear at the ready. Twice he speared him but twice the shark broke the line. Then he changed tactics, and attached to his spear several small fish, on a stout rope.

Through the crystal clear water we five landlubbers watched the shark watch with every movement of the deep sea man-eater. Then to our dismay, when Bob did thrust him, even the stout rope broke. That time he got away successfully. Anyway the shark bore the marks of battle. We didn't and thankfully headed home.

Your travel agent may not know much about the Cayman Islands but it is easy to find out if you would like to write to the Administrator's Office, Grand Cayman Island, British West Indies. (Air mail only).

MODERN MANNERS

QUESTION BOX

Question — My husband is to be best man at his brother's wedding next month. He will be offering a toast at the bachelor dinner and at the wedding breakfast. He is at a loss to know what he is supposed to say! Can you help us?

— Mrs. J. G., North Haven, Conn.

Answer — The best man does not usually propose a toast at the bachelor dinner. The bridegroom has the responsibility. Towards the end of the meal, he stands, holds a glass of champagne high, saying "To absent friends." Every man present stands, drinks the toast, and, according to old tradition, breaks the glass on his plate, so that it may "never serve a less honorable purpose."

The best man does offer a toast at the wedding breakfast, however. He stands, as do all the other guests (the bride and her new husband remain seated), and, raising his glass on high says words to this effect: "Many wishes for great happiness and good health in the years to come." Never, but never, should his toast be on the slightly silly, or vulgar, side. Just good wishes for the future is all that the toast should propose.

Question — What in the world do the initials "R. S. V. P." mean when they are placed on a calling card that is left at your door? This is a new one on me, and I would like to know why they were placed there. — Mrs. K. A. C., Scranton, Pa.

Answer — These initials, taken from the French for "pour prendre congé" — meaning "to take leave," present to you who left the card is telling you that he is leaving town for an extended absence, and was obviously calling to wish you goodby.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.

Louise F. — No matter how hard it is, I want to keep Joey in school.

Mrs. W. B. — He should go to work, not she. She has a new baby.

Louise F. — Such a wonderful son as Joey deserves whatever chance I can give him though my own life is a mess. I'll work my fingers to the bone to give Joey, and now the newborn one, a real start.

He's 15 and his father is dead. My present husband deserted me when I became pregnant a year ago. He's out west, living with another woman. He says her husband is a gangster and won't let my husband leave her! figure that out. Anyway, all during my pregnancy I held down a cleaning out rooms in a settlement-house. But in the ninth month, Joey took my place, getting up at 4 a.m. and working until it was time for school.

His teachers think a lot of him for the "Higher Horizons" plan. He's in the "Higher Horizons" program next term.

Mrs. W. B. — I'm Louise's aunt. I know the whole sorry story but I live in a city, too far away to help her. It's true Joey is a fine boy but he certainly isn't college material and, in her desperate circumstances Louise doesn't see the grave ideas in his head and making him promises she can't possibly keep.

I used to take care of Joey for her while she held a full time job — before her marriage to his father. Joey's teacher told me he had a low I.Q. But Louise won't believe it. She thinks of him as a genius.

Soon he'll be old enough to make some real money. So Louise won't have to work so hard. Now she leaves her infant daughter with the janitor's wife, to hold on to that cleaning position. She makes Joey stick to his books, though, instead of a good part-time job.

The Council — Leaving to the welfare authorities their unpleasant task of untangling Louise's marital and dependency problems, we hail her for her faith in Joey and her high hopes for his future.

While her aunt's advice is practical and expedient, it is defeatist and crushing for this optimistic mother. We trust that the social agency will help her find other ways of navigating, than by torpedoing Joey's education.

The "Higher Horizons" project, to which Joey has been referred, is an exciting program of the N.Y.C. Board of Education, for bringing out the most in children who have the least, that is teen-agers deeply underprivileged. Through individual tutoring, psychological counselling, and "enrichment trips" to concerts, museums, factories, and theatres, all sorts of "miracles" have come about. I.Q.'s have leaped upward, potential delinquent have swung to the straight and narrow, poor students have turned into bookworms! Joey, too, will have a chance to "beat the circumstances."

Louise prefers to cling to a belief that things will improve without the necessity for Joey to leave school. Perhaps her husband can be brought to book — "extradited" from the Other Woman and Hawaii! Also, Joey's program can be arranged to include time for a weekend job, without impinging on his class attendance or homework hours.

We can understand why Joey was recommended for the Horizons program. He has the one asset considered paramount for its success: a devoted parent. This fine parent-child relationship can make up for several of the handicaps in his life. The community and Louise's family must help overcome the others.

Instead of throwing cold water on Louise's dream of a better life for Joey, this aunt should cross the river from Brooklyn once in a while and help bathe the new baby.

SHOULD your children fall or be involved in any accident which offends their teeth, do take her to see the dentist promptly. This is an important for a toddler with baby teeth. Don't wait for another visit. Delay at this time may only add to the trouble.

Help Needed for Bashful Twin

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—I have twins, two boys, aged 4½. They look quite a bit alike but they are as different as day and night. John is friendly and full of activity, while Jim is quieter and more thoughtful. People like John and play with him; and the more he shows off, the more bashful Jim is. I tell Jim to talk right up and join in the fun, but he still pulls back.

I think they should share the spotlight, don't you? But how —MYSTIFIED MUMMY."

DEAR MUMMY:—It's a vicious circle. Jim is shy since he pulls back his gets little practice in sociability, so he stays shy.

One little girl in such a situation came into her own when she was given drawing materials. She proved to have exceptional ability at making pictures. This one accomplishment brought her out of her shell in a relatively short time. A boy was found to have a retentive memory and could recite well. So, in some ways his special skill outshone his more boisterous brother, and he won his own admiring audiences.

Telling Jim to "talk right up" will only terrify him more. Study his strong points and build on them. When he does want to take the floor or even just make a comment, have John subside a little (without making it obvious), so that you can hear him.

There is very helpful literature turned out by the Department of National Health and Welfare on common problems in raising children. Your local health department may be able to supply you with the helpful booklet called "Up the Years from One to Six." Also ask for the following pamphlets in the Child Training series: "Building Self-Confidence," "Fear", "Jealousy", "Play and Playmates", "Shyness," or write for them to: Information Services Division, Department of National Health and Welfare, Ottawa.

If you feel that you need more specific help than these give you, seek help from a child guidance expert or psychiatrist before behavior patterns get so firmly established that Jim becomes a recluse.

DEAR DORIS:—You say we should talk things out. How on earth can I tell my husband how I feel when I can't talk without crying about it? This disgusts him and he walks out on me. Thinks I am trying to pull something.

I only want to keep things straight, but so far I haven't even got to first base.—TEARS.

DEAR TEARS:—If you can't talk without getting upset, how about writing him a letter?

This is not as silly as it may sound. I know one couple who keep up a constant correspondence, even though they live together. Early in marriage this young bride found she was too self-conscious to bring up a certain serious problem, and hit on the idea of writing it down. Her husband was just understanding enough to respect her reticence, and replied also in writing.

This has been a fine way of keeping contact. Now that they have three children, their times together and alone are precious. They are not spent in argument, because the troublesome things have been threshed out by letter.

In a letter you can think through what you want to say better. Then the other fellow can read a letter more than once and get the point more clearly. Try it once, will you?

UN Report Shows Growth Is Astonishing

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The world's population is growing by 45,000,000 to 55,000,000 persons annually, the United Nations said Sunday night, and will pass the 3,000,000,000 some time this year.

Covering the years since 1953, the UN report also said people are making and spending more money in most industrialized countries.

The 125-page report, prepared by the UN bureau of social affairs, made their points:

In Latin America, per capita income fell by 1.3 per cent in 1960, after moving unevenly upward since 1953. The reverses were caused by falling export prices.

The net percentage gain in per capita income was small in Canada and the United States, larger in Europe.

The normal work week was cut to between 41 and 46 hours from 48 in West ermany, the Soviet Union and Europe generally, and still lower in Canada, Britain and the U.S. Overtime was common.

A two-week vacation for a year of service became a common standard, and the number of countries with laws on vacations topped 70.

Europeans bought more goods and services with which to occupy their increased leisure time. Half their consumer spending now goes for "new ways of using leisure time and reduce domestic drudgery."

In the Soviet Union, consumers became more selective, and television sets, refrigerators and washing machines remained in short supply despite fast production increases, while radios and clothing went begging.

Food consumption, sufficient in most places, is lower than before the Second World War in Africa and the Far East.

N. Z. Inquiring Into Why Scientists Leave Country

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND (CP)—The New Zealand government has ordered an inquiry into the reasons why scientists are leaving the country.

Scientists have been leaving New Zealand recently in such numbers that research vital to the country's welfare is endangered. Predictions of near disaster are being voiced.

The export of brains has always been a bugbear in New Zealand, he most brilliant students go abroad to complete their education with higher studies and find better opportunities elsewhere.

But the loss of scientists has lately reached alarming proportions, in many fields of research New Zealand can rely on studies made abroad. But in farming industries local studies are vital.

New Zealand depends for prosperity on exports of farm produce—dairy goods, meat and wool. And until now New Zealand has led the world in some branches of agricultural research, particularly in grassland farming and some aspects of animal husbandry.

PROJECTS AFFECTED

But key scientists have been successively lured abroad by higher salaries or wider opportunities. Lately men working on vital problems of local pests and diseases have also been lost and essential study projects have been slowing down.

Salaries were increased last year for scientists in the government service. Divisional directors were given salaries up to $7,800, senior principal scientific officers an average of $5,600 and senior scientific officers an average of $4,300.

Further increases are to be made for government scientists but they say rates will still be substantially below those for equivalent positions in Britain and Australia.

But scientific workers say the salary situation is only part of the trouble. They complain of lack of facilities, slow expansion of staff to deal with expanding problems, rigid budgets, lack of flexibility, unsatisfactory relationships between grading in government and university posts, and many other factors.

LOST WORLD LEAD

"Dwindling research output has already lost New Zealand the world lead it had 10 years ago in agricultural techniques," says the council of the New Zealand Association of Scientists.

"This lead provided the basis for the low costs of primary production that enabled New Zealand to compete successfully on world markets."

In ordering a review of the situation, W. B. Tennent, minister in charge of scientific and industrial research, said he was satisfied that such an inquiry could no longer be deferred.

In its election platform, the National Party, now in office, pledged to increase provision for research to attract suitable appointees.

Everyone Should Endeavor To Preserve Neutrality Of Laos, New U.S. Tack

By DAVID ROWNTREE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Within the last two months, the United States has taken a different tack on the civil war in Laos.

State department officials stopped talking about the need for a strongly pro-Western government in the Southeast Asian kingdom which has been buffeted even more than a buffer state should be.

In Washington recently, both President Kennedy and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko repeated the approved line: Everybody should work to preserve Laotian neutrality.

Laos was always meant to be neutral in the cold war after the 1954 Geneva conference ended the fighting in the old French possession of Indochina, but in practice it hasn't worked out that way.

By the Geneva agreement, the Indochina peninsula was split into four small states. On the east, bordering Communist China, is North Viet Nam. South of it on the east coast and sweeping across the southern end of the broad peninsula is South Viet Nam. Cambodia, a compact area between South Viet Nam and Thailand, faces west across the Gulf of Siam to the Malay peninsula.

RED INFILTRATION

Laos, bordering all these states and Burma and China as well, is a sliver of land down the centre of the peninsula.

North Viet Nam represents territory Communist rebels had been able to seize from the French but they had also infiltrated into the rest of Indochina.

In Cambodia, they were fairly quickly disarmed but in South Viet Nam and Laos, they are still able to be supplied across the borders from North Viet Nam and Communist China.

The Communist rebels in Laos are known as Pathet Lao. Even in 1954 they had sufficient strength to be the effective authority in the northern provinces of Phong Saly and Sam Neua.

And in the fighting of the last few months, they have extended their control south to a third province, Xieng Khouang.

The fighting proceeds at a leisurely pace in an isolated land. For most Laotians, the battle is simply a continuing palace revolution.

PHOUMI IN SOSS

The present premier, Prince Boun Oum, is a figurehead in a U.S. - supported regime. The man who makes the decisions is Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, backed by right-wing politicians.

The Boun-Phoumi government took office after chasing Prince Souvanna Phouma into exile in Cambodia late last year. The Souvanna regime proclaimed a policy of neutrality and is still recognized as the legitimate government by the Communist powers and other Asian countries such as India and Cambodia.

Another prince, Souphanouvong, heads the Pathet Lao rebels who aim to bring all of Laos into the Communist orbit.

None of these three groups of forces is strong enough of its own to dominate an area about as large as England, Scotland and Wales.

The Russians have airlifted large supplies of arms and equipment to Souphanouvong and his ally, Capt. Kong Le.

U.S. AID WASTED

Balancing this, the U.S. came to the aid of Boun and Phoumi to shore up an enormous foreign aid investment which many critics say has been largely dissipated by bribery and corruption.

Adding to the complications of the Laotian tangle, all three governments or would-be governments claim to be neutral.

Souvanna's group, in Asian eyes, is the only one that can legitimately support the claim. For the U.S. and Russia, it's a case of my ally being more neutral than yours.

Many observers feel that before a neutral government can be established, both Russia and the U.S. will have to agree to stop aiding their friends, although once established it should be able to accept financial assistance from both sides as India does.

One enormous difficulty still has to be faced: The demonstrated unwillingness of the Pathet Lao and their supporters to surrender territory where they at present exercise full control.

AREA OF TENSION

Communist Pathet Lao and pro-Western government forces have been fighting a sporadic, leisurely war for months in Laos. Efforts to create a truly national government are complicated by disagreement between East and West. Map locates the Southeast Asian kingdom, its capital, Vientiane and neighboring countries of the Indochina peninsula. (CP Newsmap.)

Check, Press, Hope, Wings' Formula

Habs, Hawks 'Allee Samee'

DETROIT (AP)—Detroit Red Wings plan no strategy changes, no matter what team they face in the Stanley Cup hockey finals.

"Our formula is simple," said general manager Jack Adams. "Check the daylights out of them and keep the pressure on—and hope your hard work pays off."

This strategy paid off when the underdog Red Wings beat Toronto Maple Leafs in five scenes of their best - of - seven semi - final series.

The Wings took four straight from Toronto after losing the series opener in overtime.

The Wings claim they don't care whether they meet Chicago Black Hawks or Montreal Canadiens in the final.

CHICAGO (AP) — Montreal Canadiens, champions of the National Hockey League and Stanley Cup winners the last five years, find themselves at the brink of a playoff elimination tonight.

The Canadiens take on the upstart Chicago Black Hawks in a win-or-lose contest in Chicago Stadium.

The Hawks grabbed a 3-2 edge in the best-of-seven semi-final series with a 3-0 victory in Montreal Saturday night.

If successful tonight, the Hawks will meet Detroit Red Wings in the opening of the championship best-of-seven series in Chicago Thursday night. It would be the first all-United States Stanley Cup championship playoff since 1950 when the Red Wings defeated New York Rangers.

GO THE LIMIT?

If the Canadiens win, the series goes back to Montreal Thursday night for a deciding seventh game.

Looking for their first Stanley Cup since 1938 and first appearance in the cup finals since 1954, the Hawks put in a lively hour-long workout Monday.

The Canadiens worked out for 45 minutes in Montreal. They were scheduled to arrive in Chicago today following a 22-hour train ride.

Peewee Hockey Tournament

Team captain Bryan Wilson paced Forest's win over Chesley with four goals, and shot two more in their next outing against Clinton.

Blenheim registered one of the upsets of the tournament by knocking off Sarnia Bureau, highly favored to win the C series. Five-after their 21-0 decision on Saturday over Harriston. In their second game Blenheim downed Kincardine.

ENTERED SEMI-FINALS

Ridgetown entered the semi-finals by beating Port Elgin 7-1 in their first game and defeating Ayr 6-3 in their second match.

In other C series games Clinton defeated Lambeth 8-3, Richardson tied Wiarton 3-3 but took the decision on a 16-15 marker on shots on goal, and Ayr blanked Mount Forest 8-0.

Memorial Cup Play

Reds Trounce Beavers

MONCTON, N.B. (CP)—Trois-Rivieres Reds defeated Moncton Beavers 7-4 Monday night in Memorial Cup eastern semi-final play, but neither team performed in a way that pleased the management.

The rough-and-tumble, get-at-qualified contest was the opener of a best-of-five series and drew 2,700 fans. The series winner will play the Ontario Hockey Association champion in the next round.

"We can beat this team," snapped Don Gauthier, manager of the defeated Beavers, after the game. "Our defence was horrible."

Trois - Rivieres manager Del Dugre was unhappy too.

"This club can play better hockey and will have to do so if it is going to win the next game Wednesday," he said.

Claude Bucher and Jean-Claude Jacques scored twice each for the Reds. Andre Boucher, Marc Dufour and Fernand Harvey tallied the others.

Phil Dolron scored twice for Beavers while Don Gordon and Oscar Gaudet potted singles.

Robot Does Think Work For Cubs

CHICAGO (AP)—Some time next August Chicago Cubs will be playing Milwaukee Braves and a Cub coach will have the task of guiding the batter in order to face the great Warren Spahn.

"Who will be in left field," wonders the coach, "Richie Ashburn or Billy Williams?"

He presses a button and out pops a card stating, "you'd better use so-and-so."

The Cubs do not have a manager. They have nine coaches and an IBM machine.

Every time a Cub batter hits the ball, the result will be logged by the machine.

Cubs are kept on every club who bats in a game and against the various pitchers used.

Under this system, there should no longer be any guesswork especially in sending in a pinch batter. A coach doesn't have to rely on his memory. He'll just press a button.

Says West Should Win Bowl Title

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Two bowling coaches from Winnipeg said Monday they expect Western Canada to win four of the five titles at the 32nd annual Canadian five pin bowling championships.

Coaches Bip Pusey and Tom Scott said they have a strong team entered in the tournament which started here today.

Last year at Calgary Ontario represented five sweep the men's, ladies' and mixed team event and the ladies' singles, leaving the West only the men's singles.

Teams from Winnipeg will compete in the men's, ladies' and mixed team events, while Dick Law of North Surrey, B.C. and Dorothy Annis of Vancouver will represent the West in the singles.

Ontario bowlers in the singles events are A. B. Collingwood of Hamilton and Lee McHeigh of Oshawa.

The Ontario teams are all star clubs formed from out standing bowlers from Kitchener, Hamilton, Welland, St. Catharines, Toronto, Goderich, Campbellford and Stratford.

Ties World Record for 100 Yards

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Northern California track coaches and officials Monday heaped praise on Dennis Johnson, San Jose State who last Saturday turned in his second 9.3 clocking for the 100-yard dash. Johnson tied the world record for the distance.

However, the officials had other sentiments for coach Chuck Coker of Occidental College.

"If a trophy were given for a guy who is the greatest track coach, Chuck Coker should win it," said Bud Winter, Johnson's coach at San Jose.

Coker told Los Angeles newspaper men that "Johnson creeps up to the set position after the others are up and waiting. It's not legal and he should be disqualified or taught a lesson with a few fast guns."

Winter wasn't the only man who disagreed with Coker. Referee Harold Berliner, chief official at Saturday's triangular meet between Occidental, San Jose State and Stanford, said: "I saw the start of the 100. It was a perfect start."

Winter said he had Johnson copy the starting technique of Armin Hary of West Germany, the sprinter who won the 100-metre dash at the 1960 Olympic Games.

"There's nothing illegal about it," Winter said.

Orchids Win Junior Hoop Crown

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal's University Settlement Orchids made a clean sweep of the best-of-five Canadian junior basketball final series by defeating Vancouver YMCA 70-54 Monday night.

The Orchids won the other two games 61-56 and 63-57. It was the team's first national championship victory since the juvenile Orchids won the Canadian title in 1954. Most of the players on this year's juniors were products of that team.

Forward Bob Habert and centre Danny Kasaboski spearheaded Montreal's attack by scoring 19 and 18 points respectively. Kasaboski was high scorer in the second game while Habert had 24 points as top man in the first encounter.

Despite the Orchids' great showing especially Monday night's game, coach Wally Maslowski said he was surprised the Vancouver team didn't win at least one of the games.

"When I heard they'd play us for the title, I thought we were in for a tough series," Maslowski said. "But when I found out they brought only eight players with them, that gave me a lift."

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

There may be executives of all kinds sprouting and flowering in the posh sports gardens of Western Ontario, but down in this eastern back-fifty we're specializing in presidents.

At the moment we have two in the flower of full bloom and another budding upward in healthy growth.

A short time ago the Ontario Baseball Association honored Belleville's Jack Graves with the head seat at the board of directors table.

DON LEE

This week in Hamilton the Ontario Amateur Softball Association will place the seal of presidential authority on the fair-haired noggin of one Donald Lee.

Out Stirling way (that's close enough for us to claim him) the OMHA's Doug Patterson is steadily mounting the vice-presidential ladder.

There is nothing of a Santa Claus nature about these presidential honors. Well-established sportsmen-citizens like those mentioned are not in the habit of picking out a member and handing him a top-spot assignment with the commentary "Okay buddy, you're it.

Like their predecessors these men have reached the heights by climbing the walls of hard work, researching effort and one-for-all desire aided and abetted by a natural quality of leadership.

Mr. Lee has the qualifications of a good president. The OASA executive and voting body knew this. A bright star in the Lee crown of award is the fact he attained the office by acclamation. The association in tribute to his capabilities saw fit to offer no opposition to his nomination as president.

He ably demonstrated his presidential timber last year. A personal tribute from President "Cy" Perkins for an outstanding job as chairman of the sub-committee, is evidence of it.

Don will need all his qualities for he follows a line of hard-working presidents, each of whom has done an outstanding job in helping to bring the OASA to the high status it enjoys in the sports life of the province.

Such men as Bill Jacko, John Brady, Roger Stewart and last year's president "Cy" Perkins, probably the most travelled amateur-sports executive in the province and a history line following in book, committed themselves ably and well during their tenure of presidential office.

And lest we forget, these men have been ably supported by executive members whose individual and collective efforts have been no small factors in the marked resurgence of softball over the passing years.

By strange coincidence Don Lee will be given the highest official award the OASA can bestow in Hamilton, his first city as an OASA delegate sixteen years ago.

He was named to the executive body in 1954, and by dint of hard work, ability and earnest desire to further Juvenile sport was named third vice-president a year later. He served two years in that capacity and rose steadily up the ladder via the second and first vice-presidential chairs.

City and district-wise Lee has worked hard for softball. He helped reorganize the Belleville and District League and served three terms as its president. He was instrumental in the organization of minor softball here.

His motto be "played the game a little" but was never approached by international interests. He is sincere and by virtue of study and experience possesses a wealth of softball knowledge.

Down in this neck of the woods, sportsmen concur with the consensus of provincial softballers: that the OASA will be in excellent hands during the Lee presidential regime.

An close at elbow to wish him well and perhaps offer a few words of advice (few?) will be that pert-arsh of all, Harry (Genuine Chaphorn) Rollins, who has been honored with an honorary presidency by the OASA these past years.

President-elect Lee will be named to the "first chair" at the association's annual convention scheduled for Hamilton this weekend.

President Bill Hurst of the "City and District League, has been nominated to the slate of candidates for the executive committee.

BARRIE TOOK SERIES

BARRIE (CP)—Barrie Lakeviews scored four unanswered goals in the final two periods Monday night to defeat George-town Raiders 6-2 and win the central Ontario Intermediate A hockey champion ship. Barrie won the best-of-seven series 3-2 with two ties. Lakeviews will play the winner of the Oshawa-Napanee series.

SELL STADIUM

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Cincinnati Mack Stadium, home of the Philadelphia Phillies baseball team, was sold Monday to J. Schleifer Properties, Incorporated of New York City. It will be torn down. George F. Harrison, Phillies treasurer, said the sale price was "less than a million." The Phillies will build a new stadium.

Beats Yankees 3-2 in 16

Roberts' Scoreless Streak Ended

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Robin Roberts, who has only one winning season in the last four after ranking for years as the National League's top righthander, pushed his string of scoreless exhibition innings to 22 1-3 Monday.

Roberts, 34, pitched 6 1-3 scoreless innings to give Philadelphia Phillies a 3-2, 16-inning victory over New York Yankees —then wobbled off the field at St. Petersburg, Fla., when a one-hop smash off the bat of the Yanks' Clete Boyer struck him on the ear.

The injury isn't considered serious enough to prevent him starting against Pittsburgh Pirates in an exhibition game Friday.

Back-to-back doubles by Tony Taylor and Johnny Callison broke up the game against the Yanks. In other exhibition games, Curt Simmons pitched St. Louis to a 4-3 victory over Chicago White Sox; Pittsburgh whipped Cincinnati 3 - 2; Los Angeles Angels crushed San Francisco 13 - 8; Washington edged Baltimore 2-1 in 12 innings; Minnesota walloped Detroit 11-4 and Cleveland outlasted Boston 10-9.

Simmons, who helped Roberts and Jim Konstanty pitch the Phillie whiz kids to the National League pennant in 1950, allowed two runs and six hits in eight innings for the Cardinals. St. Louis scored all its runs in the sixth, three on Jon Cunningham's bases loaded triple.

Bob Friend allowed but three hits in seven innings against the Reds in his second successive strong performance for Pittsburgh.

The Angels used homers by Del Rice, Ken Hunt and Joe Throneberry to whip Juan Marichal and the Giants, Marichal was limited for seven runs and 11 hits in five innings. Felipe Alou homered for the Giants.

Catcher Frank Zupo's bad throw on Marty Kuzik's bust enabled Jim Mahoney to score from second with the 16-inning run that beat the Orioles. Rookie Joe McClain, looking bigger every day in the Senators' plans, worked nine innings and allowed one run and seven hits.

Minnesota Twins counted 10 of their 21 runs on two circuit shots by Harmon Killebrew and one apiece by Don Mincher, Don Dobbek and Elmer Valo. Chuck Stobbs gave the Tigers their three hits in seven innings.

Boston's injury list, already including outfielders Carl Yastrzemski, added an 11 star third baseman Frank Malzone, who sprained an ankle sliding into second base. He'll probably be sidelined a few days.

Crawfords Nip Trenton In Playoff

A high-scoring performance by league scoring champ Ted-dy Batchelor paced Belleville Crawford Medals to an 83-73 win over Trenton Wilsons here last night in the first game of the Bay of Quinte Basketball League finals.

The second game in the three-of-five finalist series will be played at Trenton on Wednesday, April 12, with the third game back at Sirtis Secondary School here on April 17. Both games will start at 8.00 p.m.

Crawford Medals jumped into a 43-39 half-time lead last night and were never in serious trouble, although outnumbered in manpower 8-8 by the visiting Trenton crew.

Batchelor sparked the Hallsville attack with 33 big scoring points but a strong team effort, with all players sharing the points, was a chief factor in the final outcome.

Bert Faulkner hit for 18, Bill Green had 14 and Ross Walmsley ten to back the sharp-shooting Batchelor.

Warren Whitley starred for the Wilsons with a 24-point effort while Wilf Borden collected 16 and Bob Burleigh 15.

The Crawfords hit pay dirt on 13 of 20 foul shots with Trenton making 10 of 16 attempts.

Referees for the game were Fred Bradley and Jack Perry.

The teams:

Trenton Wilsons (72): H. Burleigh 15, Burke 4, Borden 16, Theriault 2; Crewe 3, Whitley 24, M. Jeffery 2, Summers, T. Jeffery 6.

Crawford Medals (83): Walmsley 10, Ablarde 4, Faulkner 18, Green 14, Batchelor 33, Bennett 4.

Services Dart League Results

The Skyliners scored a 10-1 victory over Atchesons last night to wrap up the Belleville Services Dart League championship.

The regular schedule will be completed next week and on April 17 the 12 remaining league teams, not including the Skyliners, will commence two-of-three game playoff series in "A" and "B" sections.

Other scores from last night's games were: Wilkinsons 6, LaPalms 5; El Rancho 3, ANAF 8; Legion 5, McBrine's Tavern 6; OPP 7; Northern Electric 9, Lucky Lews 2. RCAF had a bye.

Stirling, Bracebridge Series

OMHA Orders Replay

By GEO. H. CARVER
Sports Editor

Stirling and Bracebridge juveniles will play a new playdown series, washing out two previous games, it was announced last night by Ontario Minor Hockey Association headquarters.

The first game of the goals-to-count series will be played in Marmora tonight with the second scheduled for Bracebridge Thursday night.

In previous games Bracebridge won the first 14-3, with Stirling taking the second here 7-3.

A sequence of misunderstandings, mis i nterpretations and wholsot on the part of all parties concerned led to a controversial situation, it is stated.

According to information received here from neutral parties the Bracebridge club, population-wise over the Juvenile "C" classification, was told it could remain in the category if it used local players.

It could have been a misinterpretation of the OMHA ruling, or for other reasons, the Bracebridge used players living some miles out of the town. With these in action, it defeated Stirling 14-2 in the first game of the series.

Stirling "protested" the second game under protest. The OMHA ordered a replay of the first game in Bracebridge but, according to information received here Stirling refused to accede to the request.

The Hastings county team later claimed Bracebridge used an ineligible player in the Bellerville game and, this newspaper's information states, annulled the series based on that and Stirling declared the winner.

However the OMHA has ordered a new two-game series, as has been noted, and this, it is hoped will clear the situation.

It looks from here as though the OMHA rules committee "goofed" on the matter, but the blame should not be laid at the door of one man.

This newspaper was not notified of the new series with Bracebridge although it is understood other news outlets were furnished with the information.

Bracebridge although it is understood other news outlets were furnished with the information. A check with Toronto this morning verified both dates.

HONORED BY ATHLETES — Phyllis Lea, for 23 years secretary to Warren Sinclair, athletic director at the University of Toronto, is presented with a gift during a game between a team of players from the 1960-61 Varsity Blues hockey team. Making the presentation is D. H. (Red) Stephen former Varsity hockey captain. At right is J. C. Porter, a member of the 1938 Varsity Grads team. University Students Who Play Sports Are Generally Found to Be Intelligent

By DEIRDRE MUNGOVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — As far as Phyllis Lea is concerned, there is no such thing as a dumb athlete at the University of Toronto.

For 26 years as secretary to Warren Sievens, university athletic director, she has played an important role in making the athletic program go.

She is quick to take issue with the stereotype of the college athlete as an individual with plenty of brawn but little brains.

Aside from the fact that they must pass their Christmas exams or drop out of organized sport at the university, Miss Lea has found the students who engage in athletics a generally intelligent lot.

After checking the department's records, she says she discovered that most of those who played intermediate and senior sports graduated with at least second-class honors.

A tall, slender, handsome woman with steel-gray hair, a warm smile and a gracious manner, Miss Lea modestly denies that she is the confidante of the university's athletes. But others insist she is just that.

LISTENS TO PROBLEMS

"Since I'm here all the time and listen to their problems, they use me as a go-between," she says. "They usually want something, perhaps some information or to know if the coach is in good humor."

A measure of the affection athletes, both past and present, have for her was their decision to hold a hockey game in her honor. The current Varsity Blues played the U of T Old-Timers and at half time Miss Lea was lowered on the ice along with members of the Varsity Grads of 1936, world amateur champions, and was presented with gifts.

Born in Concord, near Picton, Ont., Miss Lea joined the department's staff in 1937. When her sister Vivian left to get married a year later, she replaced her as secretary to the athletic director.

Since then, in her tiny office in Hart House, the hallowed sanctuary of male students, she meets some 300 athletes a year involved in the 30 intercollegiate activities at senior and intermediate levels.

Besides handling the director's correspondence, she keeps in touch with pre-season training camps, interviews players, checks their eligibility, certifications, medical examinations and prepares material for the newspapers, radio and television.

She handles a travelling team's transportation and accommodation, arranges for meals, helps with elections for athletic groups, banquets and club meetings and is the force behind the university's athletic awards.

Miss Lea has never participated in sports but she's an enthusiastic spectator who spends her spare time the same way she does during the school year — watching hockey and football.

2 WORLDS OF GULLIVER HELD OVER
(Superdynamation)

There are many marvelous literary works which have cried out for film presentation but their fanciful elements or fairytale qualities heretofore could only be brought to the screen in cartoon or puppet form; sets and live action were impossible. Now, this is all past history. The magic of Superdynamation, first used successfully in "The 7th Voyage of Sinbad," has enabled Columbia Pictures and producer Charles H. Schneer to bring to the screen Jonathan Swift's classic, "Gulliver's Travels." Entitled "The 3 Worlds of Gulliver" and starring Kerwin Mathews as Gulliver, Jo Morrow and June Thorburn in Superdynamation process, Eastman Color, the new Columbia film is at the Park Theatre until Thursday.

The Superdynamation process transforms fantasy into reality giving the screen a new dimension and opening new and wonderful worlds for motion pictures and their audiences. The technical genius behind this new process is Ray Harryhausen a, native of Hollywood who has been good in his own home town. In "The 3 Worlds of Gulliver," he reduces as many as 300 actors and other props into 6-foot giants. Gulliver is a giant in Lilliput, a miniature house, held "pet" in Brobdingnag.

"Gulliver" reportedly is the most complicated film ever made, using more than 200 trick photographic shots in the most ever attempted in a single film, and one of the most remarkable of all time.

On the same program Robert Taylor in "Killers of Kilimanjaro" in Technicolor. Special matinee Wednesday at 1.30 p.m. Doors open 12.30 p.m.

BATHGATE BAITS THEM

Though Andy Bathgate of the New York Rangers had a poor start in the 1960-61 season he has played excellent hockey in the latter part of the schedule. Always a tough man for goalkeepers to handle the Ranger star has many good scoring tricks the young player can learn and use to advantage.

Perhaps the most effective "doke" Bathgate uses when going in on goal or a clear break-in is a cleverly executed delay or drag shot. Andy uses this play usually when he is cutting in from the wing and he cannot get in front of the net. He comes in Bathgate, when he gets about 10 ft. out will fake a shot to the far corner. The goalkeeper moves to cover, the Ranger scoring ace will drag the puck into the spot left open by the goalkeeper — on what had been the shot side. This is a tough play for a netminder to handle since it doesn't move with the fake he might be left standing if Bathgate actually shoots.

Because he does mix up this delayed shot trick with an actual shot at the open side, Bathgate keeps the goalkeepers guessing and this gives him a further edge. The play must be started far enough away from the goalkeeper so that he cannot move out and into the shot, covering all angles. Night-Time Drama Close To Stage Play Says Writer

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard Stadd, who wrote the NBC daytime serial From These Roots, finds every time he reads or hears of any evening dramatic show on television referred to as "soap opera."

"The night - time drama is close to the stage play and related to the short story in its use of a tight, closely knit format.

Furthermore, he insisted, even today's TV day - time serial, as far away from the old radio soap operas, although few are without "women's realm", the "daily" serials existed in a world of their own," he theorized. "They are stylized time and reality. They would have a wedding ceremony, for instance, going on for a solid month of programs.

WOULDN'T DARE

Today's viewers are a good deal more sophisticated, and we would never dare go for more than two days at the outside for one event, and we usually try to put it into one episode."

Stadd said that by using this "novelist's technique," the serial unfolds at a rate that is the equivalent of a chapter a day.

As the sole writer of the serial, Stadd is a one - man word factory. He turns out five half-hour scripts a week. Each script runs around 5,000 words, which means that Stadd's "day" put every two weeks or so involves enough writing for a decent - sized book.

BUSY BURTON

Richard Burton will star in the movie by Rich Boy, adaptation of a story by F. Scott Fitzgerald, while still working in Camelot on Broadway.

Sport Snapshots

By BOB TEMBE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Soccer Football Association has decided to strike out boldly on all fronts in a determined effort to stake the financial albatross that has kept it in the shadows of football and hockey.

Delegates to the association's annual meeting here Sunday put punches in their self-appraisal of soccer's future.

They rejected the ultra unusual conservative and methodical approach CSFA slashed schedule. Always a tough man for goalkeepers to handle the Ranger star has many good scoring tricks the young player can learn and use to advantage.

They adopted the most effective "doke" Bathgate uses when going in on goal or a clear break-in is a cleverly executed delay or drag shot. Andy uses this play usually when he is cutting in from the wing and he cannot get in front of the net. He comes in Bathgate, when he gets about 10 ft. out will fake a shot to the far corner. The goalkeeper moves to cover, the Ranger scoring ace will drag the puck into the spot left open by the goalkeeper — on what had been the shot side. This is a tough play for a netminder to handle since it doesn't move with the fake he might be left standing if Bathgate actually shoots.

Because he does mix up this delayed shot trick with an actual shot at the open side, Bathgate keeps the goalkeepers guessing and this gives him a further edge. The play must be started far enough away from the goalkeeper so that he cannot move out and into the shot, covering all angles. For more hints get my bulletin "Gordie Howe, Magic On Skates" by sending a stamped, self addressing envelope and 10c to Hockey Hints, 80 King W., Toronto.

Also under study are plans to reorganize tours of United Kingdom clubs visiting Canada. The CSFA, through its council, will study the entire problem with an eye to bringing over better clubs for shorter tours.

The new playoff system, which will see the B.C. champion represent the West and the EPSL and National Soccer winner, will be reviewed next year.

If the 1961 final is a financial success—something that hasn't happened in almost 30 years—there's little doubt the system will be retained. If it is not, other plans will be tried.

Two other professional leagues are developed and watch the welfare of the competing teams, they will be allowed to challenge for the title.

While the drive to improve at the top has just been accelerated, the move at the bottom has been in motion several years.

Eddie Draffin of Winnipeg has been named CSFA Juniors' executive director. It's hoped he can help other centres repeat the success he has had in helping in having soccer developed as part of the regular public school physical education curriculum.

Under this set up more than 16,000 Winnipeg youngsters will be taking an active part in soccer programs at the school level.

Star and Creator of TV's 'The Rebel' Now a Tycoon

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Nick Adams has conquered the South and vice versa.

Nick has had one of Hollywood's most meteoric rises to fame and fortune since he joined a few years ago with the cause of the confederacy. He's the star and creator of TV's The Rebel.

A few years ago Nick owned one suit. Now he's a Hollywood tycoon with his own television company and own movie production company.

"I owe it all to the South," he says. "As far as I'm concerned, they should have won the war between the states. I'm a rebel by adoption.

"My family were all immigrants to this country so I had no family ties to the Civil war. I chose the South."

And the South apparently has chosen him.

WRITES FOR HIM

Novelist Maggie Davis is currently writing a novel with Nick in mind, much like the late Margaret Mitchell wrote Gone With the Wind with Clark Gable the model for Rhett Butler.

The novel has an arresting title — The Naked Lovers but Nick thinks that will have to be changed for movies.

"It's a good title for the book," says Nick, "because it's the story of 1 boy, 22, who is a private in the Confederate Army of Tennessee. Two of the bloodiest battles of the war were fought by the Army of Tennessee — at Chickamauga and Franklin, Tenn.

"The boy comes home on leave and marries his lovely sweetheart of 17 but Sherman's march to Atlanta turns the honeymoon into a disaster. The young couple are stripped of everything in their search for immediate love; hence the title."

MOVIE VERSION

Robert Preston has arrived in Hollywood to begin rehearsals for the movie The Music Man, in which he will re-create his Broadway role.

Astrological Forecast

By CARROLL RIGHTER

Wednesday, April 5, 1961

General Tendencies: This is the day when your judgment is much clearer as to just how your hopes and wishes can please your friends as well. But to accomplish this purpose it is necessary for you to refrain from making some smart-alec remarks that may seem brilliant but which would only alienate others from you. Be kind.

Aries (March 21 to April 19) It is all right for you to do something nice for good friends, but be diplomatic or you anger close ties who are somewhat jealous because they have problems that keep them in a constant turmoil. Lend a hand there, also.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) You are fortunate in having one who is influential open up the door to greater success for you now. Later, contact that good advisor who can assist you with emotional problems, but be sure you are generous and considerate.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) Take that unbeing partner out to some charming place where you can come to a far better understanding, especially after a charming, well-prepared meal, and then make plans for the future that will be lucrative. Be alert, wise.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 21) You will find that if you use new systems, even though it requires that you put in hard hours of work, you can make considerable headway today. Evening is then fine for getting along much better with the one you love. Be kind.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) Refrain from fretting over the inevitable and get out early with a good friend to the sports and recreations that most please. You will then find there are excellent opportunities open to you that can mean advancement as well.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 23) If you want to get ahead as you wish, it is wise you listen to the fine ideas which a clever member of your family will proffer. Become more efficient, make your abode more charming. P.M. Take treatments to increase vitality.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Be careful you do not irk one in power who can take away from your abundance and prestige. Take it easy. Dress nicely and be at your best. Then off to the sports or social pleasures you enjoy.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) If you heed the suggestions of one who is close to you, you can command a greater income and thereby avoid a higher-up who has power over your affairs, since this individual is apt to be far too demanding. Expand.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) This is the right day to shop for the items and gadgets that you need to make your life easier and work more efficiently. Also, contact good friends for whatever you have in mind. P.M. Don't permit over-emotionalism on part of close attachment.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) If you permit, an upset partner will cause you to lose own equilibrium. Get together with financial or business experts so that you can put ideas of worth to work immediately to your benefit. Think and grow rich.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Avoid that co-worker who has a persecution complex. Get out and see the individuals who can be helpful to you in your career instead. P.M. Fine for making new and worthwhile contacts socially. Grow.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) Not a good day at all for gambling in any way or you lose present security and good will. Tag along with higher-up who has feet on the ground and you will make headway instead. Accept plan presented and be conservative.

If your child is born today ... it is important you early become interested in the newest trends so that you can go along with your child in such interests, since the mentality here is slanted toward the inventive and quickly learns what is new in science or other arts, particularly in the field of entertainment. Give as fine an education as possible, plus sound spiritual training and encourage any desire to become connected with the government too.

TROUBLED PLANE — Here's Trans-Canada Air Lines Vickers Vanguard after it made a safe belly landing at Montreal's International Airport Sunday night. Cubans Appeal Canadian Order For Deportation

MONTREAL (CP) — The Canadian immigration department Monday ordered the deportation of nine Cubans who arrived here Sunday aboard a British Overseas Airways Corporation flight from Kingston, Jamaica.

The Cubans appealed immediately, delaying execution of the order. The case now will be considered by the immigration department's appeal board in Ottawa.

They were released pending the board's decision, but must report daily to immigration authorities here.

The nine, including two families among a group of 25 Cubans who boarded a BOAC airliner in Jamaica Saturday, say the aircraft was to fly to Montreal after stops in Montego Bay, Jamaica and Nassau, in the Bahamas, but was diverted to New York because of a storm here.

When the flight resumed Sunday, 16 refused to board the aircraft and were detained by agents of the United States immigration and naturalization service.

The nine did not seek asylum and were refused entry to the U.S.

They want visas to enter the U.S. to visit relatives and plan to return to Cuba, they say.

Canadians Show Less Taste for Poultry Meat

OTTAWA (CP) — The average Canadian ate 24 dozen eggs in 1960 but showed less taste for poultry meat.

The Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimated today that consumption of eggs per capita rose to 426,800,000 dozen from 418,925,000 dozen in the previous year.

Per capita consumption of chicken, turkey, goose and duck fell to 27.8 pounds from 30.4 pounds. Chicken dropped to 20.9 pounds per capita from 22 and turkey was down to 6.4 pounds from 6.9.

Total production of poultry meat was estimated at 472,800,000 pounds, excluding Newfoundland, a drop of six per cent from 1959's 503,000,000 pounds. Production of eggs was down sharply at 22,529,000 pounds, compared with 3,233,000 pounds.

Egg exports were also sharply down at 10,911,000 dozen compared with 29,952,000 dozen a year earlier.

Science Now Shrinks Piles Without Pain Or Discomfort

Finds Healing Substance That Relieves Pain And Itching As It Shrinks Hemorrhoids

Toronto, Ont. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to relieve pain and itching. Thousands have been relieved with this marvelous substance right in the privacy of their own home without any discomfort or inconvenience.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' examinations.

Pain was promptly relieved. And while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

The most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in many cases over a period of months.

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among those sufferers were a very large number who previously considered operations, some of even 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne)—the discovery of a famous scientific institute. Already, Bio-Dyne is a wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

This new healing substance is offered in suppository or ointment form called Preparation H. Ask for individually sealed containers of Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment with special applicator. Preparation H is sold at all drug counters. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

Big Vanguards Again in Air After Check-Up

MONTREAL (CP) — Trans-Canada Air Lines has sent its big Vickers Vanguards into the air again after a thorough check of the landing gear systems on the 118,000-pound turbo-props.

The eight Vanguards were grounded Monday as a result of a drama over Montreal Sunday night that ended in a smooth belly-landing for a craft with 42 passengers and seven crew members aboard. No one was hurt.

The Vanguard arrived over Montreal from Tampa, Florida, to discover its left landing-gear would not lower. Attempts to shake the wheel free failed. Finally, the pilot brought his craft in for a perfect landing.

TCA said early checks showed the tire on the left wheel had jammed against the entry door. Engineers were trying to find out why.

FLIGHTS CANCELLED

Meanwhile, two TCA jet Vanguard flights cancelled Monday were to take place today to Nassau and Bermuda.

Super-Constellations took over the Vanguard runs when the airline grounded the planes as a "sensible precaution."

The Vanguards are used on Montreal-Vancouver flights and routes to the Caribbean and southern United States.

Charges China Is Eliminating Third of People

TAIPEI, Formosa (Reuters)— Chinese Nationalist President Chen Cheng today accused Communist China of "systematically eliminating" about one-third of its population because of famine sweeping the country.

He said the province was designed to eliminate "reactionaries, the disabled and sick and the old."

Chen made this accusation at a meeting of the Free China Police Association, a civic organization.

Under the new Communist policy, Chen asserted, productive persons are being encouraged while "old and unproductive" ones are being eliminated.

The new policy also called for migration of 140,000,000 people from the seaboard provinces to border regions in the wake of "unprecedented famine disaster," he said.

He said the "colonization" project was a human tragedy as many had died of starvation and hardship on their way.

British Agents Step up Effort To Catch Spies

DUNOON, Scotland (Reuters) — The United States submarine Patrick Henry docked in Holy Loch here today as British security officers redoubled their efforts to smash a spy ring apparently operating in the area.

The spies are alleged to be seeking information about the Polaris-equipped Patrick Henry and her mother ship Proteus to help Soviet warships and submarines in the Scottish three - mile territorial limit.

The Patrick Henry had been away from her anchorage in the loch since Saturday night, with her movements kept secret by British and American naval authorities.

Officers of both navies refused to comment on press reports that the submarine might have had a close look at the "spy" trawlers.

For days there have been persistent reports of a secret radio station in the Glasgow area sending signals to the trawlers which the American naval movements in Holy Loch.

AWARE OF SIGNALS

George Brown, deputy leader of the British parliamentary Labor party, said Sunday night after a visit to the Proteus that the American knew signals were being passed to the Soviet vessels but were not perturbed.

But Sir Stanley Holmes, who was said the navy had always known of the existence of the Soviet trawlers outside the three-mile limit and that they were tending to congregate in Holy Loch before the arrival of the Polaris boat.

He would not comment when asked whether U.S. Navy men were monitoring any radio messages. Nor would he say whether security arrangements in Holy Loch had been increased.

U.S. President In Canada From May 16-18

OTTAWA (CP)—Canada and the United States will get a chance to look at each other when President John Fitzgerald Kennedy May 16-18 when the youthful U.S. president pays his first official visit to Ottawa.

The trip, arranged Feb. 20 when Mr. Diefenbaker held three-hour talks in the White House with Mr. Kennedy, was confirmed by the prime minister's office Monday.

After their February meeting the prime ministers said the visit would take place before the end of the current sitting which will likely go on into early summer.

It was generally believed that the visit would take place in June rather than May.

The only other visits of the president's four-day stay in Ottawa will be an address to the combined membership of the Senate and House of Commons, a practice followed on visits by former presidents Truman and Eisenhower.

WILL TALK PROBLEMS

It is also expected Mr. Kennedy will then advantage of the first Canadian visit to meet and discuss problems with a cross section of Canadian officials.

It was also speculated after the Washington talks that the two heads of state would tackle the general problem of Canada U.S. relations and the strengthening of continental aid defence agreements to better this country's share in production of common defence materials.

New Vessels and Plants Stimulate Nfld. Fisheries

By JAMES H. HUBERT
Canadian Press Correspondent

BURIN, Nfld. (CP) — New fishing vessels and new processing plants are helping stimulate the lagging economy of the Newfoundland south coast.

The fourth such ship built at nearby Marystown since 1958 is the longliner Cape Ballard. It was launched recently and now is being outfitted for the fishery.

The Cape Ballard and three other ships, the Cape LaHune, Cape Anguille and Matthew, will supply fish to a salt fish plant at Harbor Breton and a plant at Rose Blanche on Newfoundland's southwest coast.

The vessels, approximately 65 tons, are being equipped with the latest fishing and navigational equipment. They will be powered with 180 - horsepower diesel engines.

The fleet of vessels—10 are to be built—and the new fish plants at Rose Blanche and Harbor Breton were recommended by the Southwest Coast Commission set up by the provincial government a few years ago to investigate the economically depressed south coast area of Newfoundland.

REVIVE COD FISHING

Both plants will be in operation next summer.

Harbor Breton and Rose Blanche were chosen as sites for the new plants because the settlements and others nearby are the homes of the largest number of deep sea fishermen in North America. The longliner fleet and the plants will give impetus to the salt-cod fishery, once a thriving industry in the area but practically non-existent for the last decade.

Despite gale force winds and low temperatures the skippers and crews of six draggers operating from Burin's fresh-fish processing plant have been carrying on since mid-January supplying the fish that keep the machinery humming. It puts into circulation thousands of dollars that help bolster the economy of 10 or 12 settlements in the area.

The weather since the beginning of the year has been the worst for many winters. There have been days when fishing was almost impossible. Despite this, most draggers have been returning from the Grand Banks with good catches, especially in recent weeks.

The Burin plant was started almost 20 years ago and now is operated on a year-round basis. The modern draggers and the winter fishery have been playing an important part in the economy of the Burin Peninsula for the last 15 years.

Hundreds of fishermen and plant workers are steadily employed and earn good money when conditions are favorable.

The crews who man the modern draggers, although not subjected to the hardships that were the lot of the schooner fishermen of yesteryear, still have to be men of mettle and courage, capable of performing their tasks under trying circumstances when the North Atlantic, the stormiest of oceans, is their place of work.

May Transmit '72 Olympics On 'Live' TV With Assistance Of Satellites in Space

By ALEXANDER FARRELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

MONTREAL (CP)—You may see the 1972 Olympic Games on live television transmitted with the aid of satellites in space.

Scientists and engineers tackling the problems of space communications consider this a firm possibility and, in an interview, Thomas W. Eadie, president of the Bell Telephone Company of Canada, said the Bell system hopes to put an "active" satellite into orbit within 12 months.

The active satellite—equipped to amplify, store and relay radio signals with power generated from the sun—will be the key to sending television programs and telephone calls through space.

Actual operations will require a train of satellites, so that one will always be in the right place to maintain contact with transmitting and receiving stations on the ground.

Mr. Eadie said the Bell system, operator of a majority of the telephones in Canada and the United States, believes that commercial space communications should be handled by private enterprise.

It was developing and building its own satellites and was prepared to build ground stations. Negotiations were under way with the U.S. government for launching and tracking services for its first experimental communications satellite.

Mr. Eadie said space communications will probably be developed first between Europe and North America.Similar research is going on in Germany, Britain and France.

"Exactly what the Russians are doing, we are not in a position to say. There seems little doubt, however, that they are well into this field."

The major problems in satellite communications were to amplify signals travelling thousands of miles and to reduce the "noise barrier" or interference generated by the heat of the earth and its atmosphere. These were well on the way to solution.

To provide world-wide communications, Bell scientists and engineers estimate that 50 satellites will be needed, circling the globe in polar orbits at 2,000 to 12,000 miles above the earth. Twenty of them would be used to link Europe and North America.

The estimated cost of the satellites, presuming each will be large enough to provide 600 telephone circuits and one television channel in each direction, is $100,000,000.

Illustrating the difference in capacity, an underwater cable carries between 60 and 136 telephone circuits and cannot carry the wide-frequency band needed for live television transmission across the oceans.

If space communications were initiated between Europe and North America rather than on a world-wide basis, the total cost of the satellites would be $40,000,000.

Ground stations, each capable of sending and receiving, would cost $2,500,000 apiece.

The Bell system proposes to build four in North America for contact with Europe — near Montreal, Boston, New York-Philadelphia and Baltimore-Washington.

For a global network, others would be added near Miami and New Orleans in the south, and Vancouver - Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles in the west.

Each sender would have to be beamed at a different satellite and paired with a receiver on another continent. By careful assignment, it is hoped that stations in different parts of the world could use the same frequencies.

Counting on the collaboration of the appropriate agencies in other countries, the Bell system proposes that Montreal be the terminel for communications with Russia, Boston for Britain, New York for Germany and Washington for France.

The Bell system has ventured into this field on the assumption that demand for overseas telephone calls to and from North America will jump to 100,000,000 in 1980 from 4,000 in 1960.

The first step into space communications was taken Aug. 12, 1960, by the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration when it launched the Echo 1 satellite, through which telephone calls were relayed between New Jersey and California.

Unlike the proposed active satellites, the Echo did not store messages to await a signal from a ground receiver nor did it have an amplifier. The signal literally bounced off the satellite.

Irish Battalion Flies To Katanga To Guard Airport

Takes Place of Swedes Until Gurkhas Available

ELISABETHVILLE (AP)—An advance guard of a battalion of Irish UN troops on duty in The Congo flew into riot-torn Elisabethville today and occupied the airport at once. They met with no resistance from Katanga President Moise Tshombe's army or police.

A reliable UN source said the Irish had been sent to hold the airport until the arrival of Indian Gurkhas in Elisabethville—a move violently opposed by Tshombe.

The airport's guard of Swedish UN troops, who were attacked Tuesday by a rampaging mob incited by Tshombe, retired to camp on the outskirts of Elisabethville.

The Irish vanguard numbered about 150 troops, heavily armed in full battle dress.

Another 500 were expected in a few hours.

Katanga government officials apparently were unaware of the arrival of the Irish. They were too late to try to prevent their landing, as the first Skymasters and C-119 Flying Boxcars roared in from the United Nations airlift center in Accra, in western Katanga, Tshombe was in conference in Elisabethville on Gen. Sean McKeown of Ireland, the UN military commander in the Congo.

McKeown flew from Leopoldville Tuesday for talks with Tshombe about the mob rampage Tuesday against the UN troops in Elisabethville. The Katanga radio and Elisabethville's morning newspaper claimed today—before the Irish arrived — that Tshombe and his government have had a great victory over the UN.

"The United Nations is shattered," a broadcast said. "They should go home now."

No Starvation In Toronto Says Mayor

LONDON (Reuters) — Mayor Nathan Phillips of Toronto hit back Tuesday at reports of hunger and need in his city as a result of unemployment there.

"There is no starvation in Toronto," he said. "There cannot be any and there will not be any. No one will go hungry."

A London Sunday newspaper, The People, has been running a series of articles recently on the hardships being faced by Canadians as a result of unemployment.

The 68-year-old mayor conceded in an interview there was unemployment in Toronto but said that "every case of hardship is taken care of."

"There are some families who are suffering hardship but there are no cases of dire need.

"There is no need for any person, man, woman or child, to go hungry in Toronto."

Phillips arrived here Monday night from Paris accompanied by his wife. They leave Thursday for Vienna to complete a European vacation.

He said that in January and February only 1,000 families were found running short of money with which to buy food and they received "immediate attention."

Besides the civic, provincial and federal plans, nearly $10,000,000 was raised by 40,000 voluntary workers in the city's family welfare and various charities in mid-winter, he said.

"We are very proud of our city and we dislike to read reports here and in the United States about starving children in Toronto when it is not true."

Folk Singer Given Year For Contempt

NEW YORK (AP)—Pete Seeger, 42, folk singer, was sentenced to one year's imprisonment for contempt of Congress by refusing to answer questions about his possible Communist affiliations. He was convicted last week on 10 contempt charges.

As he entered the courtroom with a bang over a broken left shoulder, he waved cheerily to more than 100 spectators who returned his greeting.

Before being sentenced, Seeger asked for permission to "sing a song which I think is appropriate."

"You may not," replied federal Judge Thomas Murphy.

Later, the U.S. Court of Appeals, Seeger won the right to go free in $2,000 bail pending an appeal of his sentence.

Seeger appeared before the house un-American activities committee on un - American activities in 1955 when it was investigating possible Communist infiltration of the entertainment field. He refused to answer any questions about political beliefs and associations, saying such questions were "improper and immoral to be asked of any American."

The government had said there was evidence Seeger had used his talents as an entertainer to promote Communist activities.

Seeger is married and has a teen - age daughter and a younger son.

OTTAWA (CP)—The 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, takes over today from the 3rd Battalion, Royal Canadian Regiment, as Canada's standby force for United Nations duty.

Thus the home base for Canada's standby battalion moves from Wolseley Barracks, London, Ont., to Camp Valcartier, Que.

The RCR Battalion has been in a constant state of readiness to meet any United Nations commitment since it was designated for this role by the government in January, 1958.

The state of readiness means that the 800 members of the designated battalion must be ready to move by air on short notice to any spot in the world, arctic or tropic. They are inoculated against tropical and jungle diseases and fitted with clothing for any time. They are ready for a quick move.

ONLY KOREA CALLED

Despite such preparations, the UN has never called on Canada for combat troops except in the case of Korea.

In the Middle East in 1956 and again in 1958 Canada supplied the UN wanted—and got—Canadian administrative and technical personnel.

For this reason, the army late last year proposed that the standby unit for UN duty be composed of technicians rather than infantry.

Defence Minister Harkness in effect turned down the proposal. He designated the 1st Battalion, Royal 22nd Regiment, as the standby force.

In recent weeks, civilian personnel and 24 army officers have been taken by helicopter across the Laos truce commission headquarters.

In recent years, the 1st Battalion Van Doos have been stationed at Camp Petawawa, Ont., in 1952-53 and in West Germany in 1956-57.

American Held Incommunicado In Cuba Since March 24 Released

TORONTO (CP)—Mrs. Donald Swenson said today her husband telephoned her Tuesday night from Cuba and said he arrived that day after being held incommunicado with a U.S. pilot friend in Havana since March 24.

"I'm in Miami," he told her. "I'm fine. I'll be home tomorrow."

Mrs. Swenson said it was the first time she had been convinced of her husband's safety since the plane carrying him and Linden Blue, 26, of Denver, Colo., was reported forced down over Cuba en route from Florida to Nicaragua.

Mr. Swenson, a technical director for the International Nickel Company, is president of a Montreal public relations firm handling production for foreign bases.

He left Toronto March 21. A week later Mrs. Swenson was told by an executive in Fremont that the plane had disappeared.

Mr. Swenson is a United States citizen.

"I think the fact that I'm a Canadian and my two children are Canadian got them out a lot sooner than they might," Mrs. Swenson said.

Mr. Swenson until 1950 was manager of Gerber's plant in Niagara Falls, Ont.

MACMILLAN LEAVES HELICOPTER — British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan leaves a helicopter after a flight from Andrews Air Force Base to the U.S. Naval Observatory. The prime minister flew by U.S. Marine helicopter to Washington and seeking new ways of stopping the Communist threat against the free world.

What Macmillan describes as "all the great issues of the day" are likely to be discussed in economic blocs, Berlin and the prospects of a nuclear test ban treaty—all to be discussed in a series of talks which end Sunday when Macmillan flies to Ottawa for a three-day stay.

But the continuing Laotian crisis will be their first concern, diplomatic officials said.

As the two leaders prepared to meet, British negotiations with Russia gave rise to reports that a new spirit in Laos now might be speedily arranged.

Kennedy, leaving a strategy conference on the state department Tuesday night, said that the cease-fire in Laos was the most serious to have, and we are hopeful that . . . we'll have peace."

MacMillan will take time out Friday to fly to Glen Falls to deliver what his aides describe as a "major speech" at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

At 67, Macmillan is almost 25 years older than Kennedy. But he is fast-moving man. Ac-

Grandmother Treasurer Of Town Charged With Theft

EASTVIEW (CP)—Mrs. Adrienne Laroche, a grandmother in her 50s, will appear in police court today to answer a charge she took $20,000 in municipal funds while she was town treasurer during the years 1956 to 1960.

She was charged with the theft Tuesday and released on $5,000 cash bail.

The charge culminates an OPP investigation that began after an inquiry by Ontario municipal affairs officials into financial affairs in this suburban Ottawa municipality.

The provincial investigation held last summer found incompetence in the handling of town funds and recommended that Mrs. Laroche, employed as treasurer since 1952, be replaced.

It also recommended that a "further and complete" investigation be taken over by the bureau of the OPP began this investigation in January and the charge followed a conference Tuesday between him and Ottawa Crown Attorney Lucien Mercier.

Cuba Appears Reluctant To Press Charges Against U.S.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (CP)—Cuba today appeared reluctant to press charges against her perennial charge that the United States is planning aggression against Fidel Castro's regime.

The assembly's main political committee is marking time during a lull in its sid-to-Africa debate and the Cuban complaint is next on the agenda. But the Cuban delegation made no move to air the issue.

Informed sources said Cuba's enthusiasm for a debate cooled after the Soviet Union hinted it was not anxious to get embroiled in such a wrangle at this time.

Ever since the assembly cleanup session began March 7, both Russia and the Western powers have been urging their colleagues to keep the agenda free of inflammatory issues.

With this in mind, the United States and Russia agreed to thread off disarmament debate until fall. The assembly is also expected to give only token consideration—or hold over until the fall session—such cold war items as Hungary, Tibet and Communist repression in East Germany.

Cuba's complaint is also expected to be shelved.

France rejected proposals for helping pay the $120,000,000 bill for the 1961 UN Congo operation. She proposed to the budget committee an overhaul of the entire UN budget procedure and appointment of a bill collector for the UN who would shuttle from capital to capital to negotiate on contributions for UN funds.

In the assembly Cuba pleased with member states to give the UN Congo operation financial support. Failure to cover the Congo bill, said Canada's Wallace B. Nesbitt, would place in jeopardy the ability of this organization to take effective action in other situations in the future."

House Session May Be Late One This Year

Heavy Agenda Awaits Members

OTTAWA (CP)—The current parliamentary session has begun to give the impression of a distance runner who burns up the track on the first lap and then staggers or crawls the rest of the way to the wire.

When MPs return to their desks Monday following the Easter recess, they will still face most of the big legislative items that stared at them when they returned from their Christmas adjournment.

A June prorogation is regarded as out of the question. One responsible Commons source, who admitted he was optimist in such matters, predicted Parliament will sit at least through the third week of July. A government source says it may be the longest August before the session ends.

The present session started well. In 25 action-filled days last fall, it passed five major pieces of legislation, enacted them designed to alleviate unemployment, and heard Prime Minister Fleming's "baby boom" speech.

JOBS ONLY TWO

But between Jan. 16, when the House resassembled following the Christmas adjournment, and Wednesday when it adjourned over the Easter recess, only two pieces of government legislation were passed. These were bills touching on pensions and giving effect to the baby bonus announced in the budget.

For the rest, much time was taken up with debate on unemployment and the government's program of dealing with it and the business recession generally.

Bills now on the order paper but not dismissed by the government include one providing a sweeping program of assistance to education and another to tighten up the unemployment insurance act to widen coverage.

Also in view are action to revise the Columbia River treaty; the bill to revise the customs tariff, and the bill to revise the Canada Pension Plan

TORONTO (CP) — George Templeton, charged with the murder of his estranged wife, had her tattooed name erased from his arm a few hours before she was killed, a witness testified at his preliminary hearing Tuesday.

Irving Lapolice, a shopkeeper and tattooist, said Templeton bought a .303 rifle and some shells and asked Lapolice to show him how to operate the weapon and then inquired about having the name on his arm covered.

"I showed him a few designs and he picked a floral one," Lapolice said. "I deleted the name Margaret and put in the name George."

Name Committee Chairmen For Children's Aid Society

The regular monthly meeting of the Children's Aid Society was held with Mrs. Jas. H. Forrester, 1st vice-president, in the chair. Mrs. Forrester welcomed the board members and expressed hope that 1961 would be a successful year for the Society and the children and families it serves.

The following chairmen of committees were then appointed: executive—Mrs. Forrester; finance — Bernard Hurley; service on Dr. S. C. Rose; public relations — Mrs. S. S. Lewis; personnel — George Wishart. Each member will serve on two committees. Mrs. A. S. Lewis was appointed to represent Belleville on the publicity committee of the United Appeal.

Mrs. Forrester and the secretary, Mrs. G. S. Wonnacott, will represent the Society at the annual conference of the Ontario Association of Children's Aid Societies at Toronto in May. Mr. Harleigh Hamilton, Warden of Hastings County was named as an alternate delegate.

SCROLL PRESENTED

A scroll expressing appreciation of the efforts of Mr. D. C. Stirling who, for the past six years has been an active member of the Board, was presented to Mr. Stirling by the president. Mr. Stirling retired from the board in March having served the maximum period permitted by the Society's by-laws.

Considerable time was devoted to the study of a new method of assessing the cost of protection services against the municipality in which the service is given. This new procedure, which was suggested by the Indian Affairs Branch, of the Department of Citizenship and Immigration has proven to be satisfactory to both the Government of Canada and the Children's Aid Societies.

On the recommendation of the finance committee it was given unanimous approval by the Board. It will now be passed on to the local municipalities for their consideration.

REPORT PRESENTED

Mr. Bruce Kerr, the local director, presented his report, saying that at the end of February there were 178 children in the care of the Society. Although this represented a considerable increase from the beginning of the year, Mr. Kerr said that he did not feel that it was a matter for concern as there was nothing to indicate that the trend will continue. During the month of February the Society provided 4,286 days care approximately 1,000 fewer days than in February of 1960. Mr. Kerr said that looking at this from the financial standpoint alone, this constitutes a saving to the taxpayer of approximately $2,500.

Mr. Kerr said that it should be obvious to all that the hospital insurance benefits as provided by the Ontario Hospital Insurance Commission are of benefit to many people. He cited the case of a little girl in the care of the Society who is living at the Home for Incurable Children in Toronto. During the year 1960 the sum of $5,304.76 was paid out by the OHSC for her hospitalization. If such benefits had not been available the cost would have been borne by the local community.

HOME INSPECTED

Mr. Kerr informed the Board that the Society's receiving home at 75 Highland Avenue had been inspected by the Belleville Fire Department on March 9 and "the building found to be in very good condition with good housekeeping and good fire prevention."

Following the meeting the president invited the Board and staff to an informal tea at her home, 65 Bridge Street East.

Infanticide Charge Large Against Student

TORONTO (CP) — Patricia Ann MacDonald, 24, was charged Tuesday night with infanticide in the death of a newborn baby whose body was found the thirteen weeks ago to a Halifax man.

The man, still unidentified by the RCMP, turned over the package containing the body to the Halifax RCMP detachment. An autopsy was conducted but no results have been disclosed.

The police search for the sender shifted from Nova Scotia last week and investigators arrived in Toronto Tuesday and Miss MacDonald was arrested by the Toronto homicide squad.

Police said Miss MacDonald, a second-year physical and occupational therapy student at the University of Toronto, is from Nova Scotia. The University student directory lists her as from Sydney, N.S.

$15,000 Loss In Barn Fire Near Picton

PICTON — A barn on the Lower Hennessy farm, one mile north of here, burned to the ground late Tuesday afternoon with a loss estimated at $15,000. Destroyed in the fire were several valuable items of farm-equipment owned by Mr. Hennessy's son, Peter. These included an irrigation system valued at $8,000, tractor, pea harvester and a large quantity of fertilizer. The Hennessys were in Brockville at the time of the fire. They reside on an adjoining farm property.

The blaze was discovered by Chester Sheppard, who with his wife and four children, occupy a house on the farm less than 100 feet from the barn. One corner of the house was scorched by heat from the fire and a transformer on a nearby hydro pole exploded, but no one was injured.

Fire trucks from Picton Army Camp and Bloomfield village answered calls for help, but confined their efforts to preventing spread of the fire and wetting down the rubble.

Funds Collected Point of Issue Says Paper

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Sun said Tuesday a fight has developed between federal and provincial Progressive Conservatives over fund-raising and rejected jointly during the September British Columbia election.

The Sun said the provincial party has debts of $50,000 and expects writs for collection of about $15,000. Fund-raising agencies will be issued by the end of the month. The remainder of the money goes to the candidates.

The federal Conservative organization is withholding funds collected jointly because it wants them for a federal election, the paper said.

Figures issued during the last session of the legislature show that the party's grant $106,633 without electing a single member in the provincial election.

Kiwanis Club Holds Father And Son Day

Yesterday was father and son day at the local Kiwanis Club meeting. The Wing Commander Harold Lisson of RCAF Trenton as guest speaker. The Air Force officer spoke on the role of the Air Transport Command in today's RCAF, its responsibilities and the modern equipment with which it is equipped.

Within the organization the RCAF Air Transport Command is one of six commands, the other five being Air Defence Command, Maritime Air Command, Training Command, Air Material Command and No. One Air Division, the speaker explained.

The Air Transport Command, under Air Commodore F. S. Carpenter, with its headquarters in Trenton, has a number of responsibilities under the current defence policy for Canada. These include: air search, and rescue operations for all of Canada; survival and rescue training for all RCAF personnel; air reconnaissance and photography which duty has included the recent project of photographing all of Canada for the drawing up of new and accurate maps; and the duty of transporting the Governor General, Ministers of the Department of National Defence, servicing the Royal Canadian Navy and the Army as well as RCAF requirements.

Under the latter responsibility is the additional chore of providing "firm" air doctrine, training and operations. The latter covers the responsibility for air transport flying standards.

At Ontario the Air Transport Command is the official unit which controls and supervises the activities of the 62 Air Cadet Squadrons in Ontario, Wing Commander Lisson remarked.

PHOTOS USED

The lesson proved were especially intrigued with the guest speaker's presentation and descriptive talk, through the use of aircraft which the RCAF command is using today. Assisted by large photographs of the planes involved, he gave facts on the specific aspects and performance of the new Dorbiyo, built by the Dellavilland plant in Toronto, the Convair Canadian Jet and the CC 106, both of which are built by Canadair in Montreal. The Hercules aircraft, built in the U.S., was also discussed.

In concluding, the speaker, who has served in the RCAF since 1940, cautioned the younger members of the audience to be sure to get a good education first rather than thinking of joining the RCAF as soon as they were of age. He emphasized the point that the better a boy's education the greater are the opportunities which will be available to him when he selects his occupation and the better his chance for advancement in his job in later years.

Kiwanian Ron Godden thanked the speaker and club president Bob Brain presented him with a token of appreciation. Kiwanian Ron Keet urged club members to make a test effort to ensure a capacity crowd at the Kiwanis Dance being held this evening at the Club, Commodore.

Cocker Spaniel Meets Master In Police Dog

The odds were too heavily stacked yesterday for a small cocker spaniel who roused the ire of a big police dog in West Belleville.

The big police dog broke his chain when the small spaniel trespassed across his yard and following a brief fight against insurmountable odds, the smaller dog lay dead in the dust.

City dog catcher Charles Thorn was called by alarmed neighborhood women on Wright Ave. The police dog was taken into custody and lodged in the city pound to await his owner.

The Start of an End?

It was not too long ago that South Africa's prime minister announced his country's withdrawal from the Commonwealth marked the beginning of the end of the Commonwealth.

More recently we have noted that the four-year trial of a number of persons arrested for treason against the South African government has concluded with the three trial judges acquitting the 28 defendants. Various people are interpreting this action as an anti-Verwoerd move, in effect suggesting that if anyone receives justice at the hands of the courts in South Africa they are going directly against the government's interests and policies.

This is a very dark outlook on the conditions within South Africa although we have reason to suspect it is justified. Perhaps the withdrawal from membership in the Commonwealth has struck deep in the South African citizens' hearts than may have been suspected by other Commonwealth members In fact closer than Mr. Verwoerd ever expected.

Although the voting rights in South Africa have been reduced to allow only a small number of the actual population to vote it may still be possible that the current government's policies are beginning to lose it the support. In fact quite practical there is no sense in having control of something which will not produce any benefit for you. It may well be that the Boers will lose their political war for supremacy in 1960 just as they lost the Boer war at the turn of the century.

Their party and leaders have openly expressed admiration for the tactics and policies of Hitler and the Nazis. The latter have been proved wrong and it is but a matter of time before their admirers sink to the same level.

We do not believe that just because the 28 persons charged with treason for the political purposes of the Nationalist party have been exonerated in the courts of South Africa there will be a sudden reversal of the apartheid policy in that country. We actually expect to see Mr. Verwoerd instigate some sort of "reform" in the courts first, which his party has done before.

Whatever is done, however, there will be a stalling off of the end which is inevitably in view for the "apartheid" party. About the only consolation is that the sooner this end arrives the easier it will be on all concerned, including the Verwoerd government. Its delay, however, will but serve to increase the intensity and force of the end when it arrives.

Whenever it does come, however, many believe it has started or been assisted by the recent decision in the South African courts.

Kennedy Will Be Busy

Prime Minister Macmillan of British is holding conferences with President John Kennedy of the United States this week. Laos is expected to occupy much of their attention, but they will also discuss other problems.

When he took office, President Kennedy made it clear that he did not favor the trend towards "personal" diplomacy by heads of state which had been growing in recent years. Nevertheless, it is evident that he still wishes to confer personally, from time to time, with his opposite numbers in nations with which the U.S. is allied.

In this connection it is interesting to note that Kennedy will meet with President Charles de Gaulle of France at the end of May and that for three days Kennedy will be in Paris. He is going to de Gaulle, rather than de Gaulle coming to him. This may have no special significance, or may, perhaps, indicate that Kennedy is more anxious about obtaining the co-operation of the French with regard to some problems than de Gaulle and his government are concerned about influencing U.S. policies. Possibly Kennedy is anxious to persuade de Gaulle to place greater trust in the United Nations and to pay more attention to world public opinion, as expressed in the debates in the General Assembly of that body.

The visit to France, though, will not be Kennedy's first trip outside his own country since assuming the presidency. He will visit Ottawa before crossing the Atlantic. This may be no more than a "good neighbor" gesture, or may possibly indicate that the Kennedy administration is anxious to eliminate the growing tensions, or, a variety of problems, which have crept into Canadian-U.S. relations in the past couple of years.

It is necessary to the happiness of man that he be mentally faithful to himself.—Thomas Paine.

Washington Thinks Again

By James Morris in the Manchester Guardian

Today's Washington is like a woman who has switched from horn-rims to contact lenses: there is a new gleam in her eye, but whether it is piety or glee only the optician can say.

How lasting? How genuine? Only an oaf or a professional spokesman would proclaim this a nation rejuvenated overnight.

The absurd snobbery and self-congratulation of the Americans will still make you squirm, as you wade through the idolatory gossip columns, observe the Jacqueline hair-dos following each other down sidewalk, or hear yet again about dinner with the president up at Joe's house.

The national streak of the corny and corrupt will still wrinkle your nose when they whisper the secret love lives of the newly great. The bluster and flag-waggling of the American way seems more tiresome and old fashioned than ever at this moment of national catharsis.

Yet even the world-weary European can hardly escape some prods of stimulation upon Kennedy's New Frontiers.

Today the miseries of American thought feel loosened again, the springs of innovation are released.

There is tolerance and flexibility in the air.

You can talk without a qualm about state medicine, the recognition of China, Chiang Kai-shek, homosexuality, the Germans—all subjects which, a year or two ago, were all too often armored in taboo and bigotry.

The egg-head, Mr. Stevenson's forlorn underdog, has come striding into his own again, wiping the steam from his spectacles, so that nearly every new official seems to be a kind of Ivy League Existentialist or a statesman from Harvard Law School.

It is not, I suspect, an administration of style. The president is extremely intelligent, highly intelligent, very ambitious, probably rather ruthless, with a chip on his shoulder and a comforting touch, or perhaps affectation, of cynicism.

He does not in the least express, for all his hatless informality, the homespun simplicity of America that was reflected so exactly, and sometimes so pathetically, in Eisenhower's good but groping personality. Nor has the ghost of a Roosevelt, the command of a de Gaulle, the earth of a Churchill.

He seems to me like a shrewd technician, a plumber come to stop the leaks, with his cap and open minded company of eggs, his electrician, his engineer, and his persuasive eyes; but instinct tells me that the stamp upon the American history, though it will unquestionably be of honor and value, will not be ineffaceable.

This is, though, an imperfect quickie.

A personal or a visionary is not what the presidency needs just at the moment. What is needed is a clear head and a fresh start, and these John Kennedy and his colleagues have.

Whatever you may think of the new administration's profundity, you can actually never patronize or snigger at it, as the world has obviously enjoyed at Mr. Eisenhower and his Hagerties.

There will be few governments on earth to equal it in sophistication and intelligence, indeed with its new sense of serious dedication, its preoccupation with the arts and culture, its sudden spate of intellectuals and cocktail party portraits, Washington today reminds me disconcertingly of a brighter and brassier Athens, though even the irreverent young Russians would surely object to a proposed national shrine, as the Washington wits have dubbed the monolithic design for a Roosevelt memorial, "Instant Stonehenge.")

It is Mr. Kennedy's first, and brilliant inaugural administration that is a few short weeks of office he has already done much to revive the sense of American mission.

I do not know who writes his speeches, but since his inaugurations have had a quality to discernible inspiration with their clear calls to duty, comradeship, and generosity.

I do not know how long his new New Frontier will last, for one sceptical allen at least, John Kennedy has restored sense of decency to patriotism, regenerated some warmth in our constant alliance, and, above all, for all our poor sakes, revived a little of the romance of America.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

PROUD PARENTHOOD

Recently I talked with a father whose son, at the age of twenty-three, had just had a novel published by a prominent publishing house and has almost completed his second novel.

You can imagine the pride of this parent and the sense of hopefulness and light which he conveyed to the friends with whom he talked. Here was a youngster of remarkable promise. Writing is a gift of the gods and the present needs them especially in order to forestall the influence of a lot of trash and garbage which litter the tables of the modern book store. Youth and its hope constitute a bright light shining in a dark and frustrated world.

Parental pride is one of the great legacies God has left with His human brood. Our children do something of satisfaction perhaps only of very slight distinction, but the achievement thrills us and we speak about it to others with flashing eyes and sparkling voice. God gave us these youngsters, and now they are out in the world making something of a mark. It may be a very little mark, but at least it is a good mark and they are making it.

Listen to the proud parent. Encouraged to keep on talking. Spread around the good word about what somebody's youngster has done. And if once in a while what such a youngster has done is a little tongue-tied and indisposed to talk. Let him get his first. Give him another chance.

Strictly Personal

Beauty Only Skin Deep Says Sydney

BY SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Purely Personal Prejudices: Hating is what you love costs something: this is why the generality of mankind has, in every crisis, gravitated toward hate.

One of the most common, and fatal, of diseases is self-digestion. I was reminded of a doctor who died of stomach cancer he had dismissed as gas pains.

It takes imagination to make a cold fact flower into a living truth.

What attracts a man to a woman is rarely what holds him to her; thus, women who "constantly" are attracted to harms usually find that when the mystery and glamor have been penetrated, the man is quickly bored.

The first disillusionment of the young consists in perceiving, as Pascal said, "the enormous difference between piety and goodness." Nothing can spoil a youngster for religion so effectively as finding a parent who are devout but not humane.

Intelligence must tend to make us help people on the basis of their need, not on the basis of their merits, for the merits will overboard, we must not inquire into his character or his credit rating.

Progress of civilization: from the world's holiday to a modern day.

Rest-suffer lists continue to confirm the melancholy observation of Robert Lynd, who said: "The ordinary man would rather read the life of the cruellest pirate that ever lived than of the wisest philosopher."

The best and briefest prayer I have ever heard is the old Spanish proverb: "God defend me from myself."

To be accurate and concise at the same time is a task for a genius; most of those who attempt to be vaguely concise or wildly accurate.

In Europe, that citadel of custom and tradition, all the little towns have their own unique personalities; in America, that bastion of individualism, all the little towns look and behave exactly alike.

The trouble with those who call themselves "realists" is that they think their hard-heartedness is a form of hard-headedness; while the trouble with those who call themselves "idealists" is that their concern with humanity at large exempts them from kindness or concern with those closest to them. (The classic example of the latter is Voltaire, who scribbled for the downtrodden peasants, and who treated his own wife and children with characteristic neglect.)

"In the final analysis" is a phrase glibly used by those who are impatient of making a first analysis.

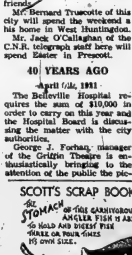
Overstress Drunk Driver

Vancouver Sun

Two Chicago research psychologists have produced some impressive evidence of the dangers of blaming too many traffic smashes on liquor.

Psychiatrists Irving S. White and David Ben-Zeo examined in depth members of 400 families before and after they had seen a television film aimed at preventing traffic accidents. They were surprised to find that pictures of accident horrors had made the viewers less tolerant about having accidents, rather than more anxious.



The result turned out to be one shot of two slobbering drunks who were stopped by police in the film. Viewers immediately shifted the blame for accidents to drunk and teenagers, the researchers found. Accidents just couldn't be caused by nice people like themselves, the viewers rationalized.

Yet U.S. National Safety Council figures show drinking drivers involved in only seven out 100 fatal smashes, and teenagers in 11 out of 100 accidents.

Obviously a lot of people who are neither drunks nor teenagers get into the worst highway smashes. The danger is in peril in allowing them to delude themselves that they are immune — thus encouraging them to be less cautious on the road than they should be.

To Your Good Health

In Order to Treat Asthma, Must First Learn Cause

By Joseph C. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: My wife, aged 55, has suffered with asthma for many years. They said her sinus causes us trouble with it," as there is no cure.

"She has had temporary relief, using codeine and patent medicines which only helped, and after-effects. The worst spells are during dry, dusty weather. She says she feels better when it rains. Several years ago we noticed this on a trip near some lakes. Is there any point that a damp climate would make an asthmatic person have better health? — A.H."

There are many causes for chronic asthma, an irritant, perhaps something inhaled, as pollen, dust and molds, or it may be a food or certain drugs. Emotions may be involved — a sense of hostility, guilty, apprehension or frustration sometimes a severe emotional storm precedes an attack of asthma. Sometimes we are unable to identify any specific cause physical or emotional.

For the allergies, or sensitivities, sometimes when the substances or foods are isolated, it is possible to desensitize the patient — and relieve them of the asthma.

I am wondering how carefully the lady's case has been studied. The resort to codeine is not a measure that can be recommended, and the reference to "patent medicines" indicates, I am afraid, a scattergun effort to find a cure without finding out what causes the asthma.

Good results from medicine cannot be promised unless the cause is determined first. Otherwise the results are just luck, good or bad.

The difference to rainy weather, and climate, may or may not be significant. Some people find relief in a warm, dry climate. Some — in cooler areas and some in a moist climate. Yet even in these cases, the important thing is not necessarily the dryness or moistness.

"A change of climate" can be deceptive. Sometimes it may only mean that pollen, dust, mold or whatever causes the conflicts of everyday life. This most definitely can be a factor in asthma.

Asthma you see, is a fairly prevalent ailment in nearly all areas. No climate is universally good or bad for asthma. I will not say that occasionally one climate or another may not be beneficial, but this is probably only in particular cases.

Do not go to the effort and expense of moving without a thorough and conclusive try-out first.

Even if a temporary change helps, the gain may be from a temporary emotional "lift". A few days, or a few weeks, are not enough. A longer trial may be required before you can distinguish between the brief and temporary benefits. Don't depend on a change of climate without first asking the advice of your doctor. If he recommends it, it's worth a try. If he is pessimistic, go slowly.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Occasionally when I rub my eyes or get a little pressure on them, I see spots. Is this serious? — A. B."

No. But why don't you rub more gently?

Mrs. C. S.: No, I did not write the article about ocean water for arthritis, nor have I ever recommended it.

"Don't Quit Because Of Arthritis" is the title of my booklet designed to help all who suffer the aches and pains of arthritis. For a copy write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Tribune Syndicate, P. O. Box 158 Dundee Ill., enclosing a long, self-addressed, unstamped envelope, and a dime to coin to cover handling and postage.

Russia Loans To Britons

Toronto Globe and Mail

The next time Metro Chairman F. G. Gardiner finds difficulty in borrowing capital for public works in Toronto or New York, he might try Moscow. A recent British report says that several municipalities there are financing housing programs with loans from the London branch of the Moscow Narodni Bank.

Dawley Urban District Council, in Shropshire, for example has borrowed more than $600,000 in eight months. The British Government's Public Works Loans Board offers 60-year loans at 6 per cent; the Moscow Bank offers 5 per cent loans from which a municipality can withdraw in seven days.

In addition to these attractive terms, there is the question of security. We would persuade Moscow to take mortgages on some of our property if they would never be able to afford to drop bombs on us.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

The gourmets of art — you know, those $2 cliche type of intellectuals who go for those odd-tasting dishes in a-one-a-person restaurants — are raving over a sculpture and unintentional music — were alarmed recently by when the janitor cleaned the history of the Toronto Art Gallery turned out the several weeks to see an exhibition of the paintings of van Gogh. The public came at the rate of 1,000 a day. Many of them were busloads of pupils from schools. Busloads of pupils from historical clubs on their afternoon.

Van Gogh, of course, is not a modern in the sense that he painted nothing. But he is decidedly like the modern. He was a forerunner. Our gourmets were startled. What price eating truffles?

Thankfully, the art gallery put a question box in the lobby for visitors to write down and requested to drop a questionnaire indicating their favorite painters in addition to Rembrandt and van Gogha. By a large margin they voted for Rembrandt, coming in just a pair of old boots, done as realistically as in a photograph. The second favorite monochrome paint by van Gogh in his earliest period. The artists invited in the exhibition just to show how far van Gogh had progressed, but in the light of them he was doing his masterpieces. Everyone seemed to relax and cuddle torrefier. The public still prefers home cooking.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE DIFFICULT THING

It's our difficult problems that make us all that we are.

Even the easy things which we now do, were once difficult for us. Else it would be a very discouraging world in which to live.

It is hard for us to remain quiet and patient in the face of hurts — but that is the wisest way.

There is little intentional desire in the hearts of people to hurt. So what is that we dwell so long upon them? And why is it that the good turn, the thoughtful act on the part of someone who loves us, passes so quickly?

When things run smoothly we laugh and are light in heart, but when the difficult thing comes to our door, we worry.

Yet there are those who have formed the habit of being happiest when they are tackling the most difficult things.

Once knew of a contractor who advertised that he made a specialty of difficult foundations.

I see no reason why we shouldn't all make a specialty of difficult foundations. Surely our ideals should be worth the building.

I once read in a newspaper of a famous American whose story was summed up as follows: Born in the rate of 3,000 he started with, forty failures, forty billionaire!

If we do the difficult thing first, too, then we may be assured in advance that we can finish the rest.

And this is assurance sufficient to start anything, isn't it?

Many 'Canadians' Serve U.S. in President Kennedy's Administrative Apparatus

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON (CP) — Elements of a "little Canada" are evident in President John F. Kennedy's administrative apparatus.

Though his appointees are all Americans, either natural born or naturalized—as required by U.S. law—some of these he has chosen for their ties with people in Canada or have backgrounds with a Canadian flavor.

Some are products of Canadian cities and farms who migrated to the United States in search of jobs. Others were born in Canada of American parents and spent their early years there.

The Canadian touch shows up in several places—in the White House, defence department, treasury and the diplomatic corps.

Perhaps most prominent of all is John Kenneth Galbraith, 52-year-old Harvard economist and Kennedy brain-trusster who now takes on the influential appointment of U.S. ambassador to India.

The lanky Galbraith, whose six feet, eight inches, makes him the tallest man on the Kennedy team, is a native of Iona Station, Ont., with what he "spread across Canada."

He came to the United States for more postgraduate work and a job in 1931 and became a U.S. citizen seven years later.

STILL LIKES CANADA

"I'm still a close and beloved friend of Canada," he has said. Whether other young Canadians should attempt to follow his steps should be matters of their own choice.

"They should follow their own healthy inclinations," he says. "They shouldn't desert Canada as a matter of principle."

Montreal seems to have made the biggest Canadian contribution the Kennedy team. At least three of his appointees were born there. They are: While House aides Frank D. Reeves and Clifton Wharton, and treasury aide Henry Mc. Elmstead Fowler whose signature now appears on all new American paper currency.

Mrs. Reeves' parents were Americans. Her father established the Reeves Realty Company at Montreal. A brother, John, still lives there. Mrs. Reeves left there in 1921 and got some of her early schooling in Montreal. She graduated from the University of Michigan and made California her home.

The 46-year-old Reeves is the son of a 1901 graduate of McGill. After young Frank would get Pullman holiday rides to the Canadian National Railways resorts. The Reeves finally moved to the United States and Frank came to Washington where in 1939 he received a law degree.

FIRST NEGRO IN JOB

He is the first Negro to be appointed a special assistant to the president. He deals with Negro and other minority rights. His wife is a faculty member of the District of Columbia Teachers College. Reeves was a sergeant in 1943.

Deraniyla, 40, still has close roots in Montreal. Born of an American father and a Canadian mother, he got most of his schooling there but decided during the Second World War to take up American citizenship. He got a job with a congressman in post-war years and later came acquainted with the legislator who had the office next door: John F. Kennedy.

Deraniyla started doing a bit of campaign work in Massachusetts for Kennedy and remained on the Kennedy team. He's now on Kennedy's liaison team that does special toasting with Congress.

"Occasionally I run into Reeves. Since we're both from Montreal we greet each other with 'Bonjours.'"

Others in the White House with a bit of Canadian background include Kennedy's press secretary, Pierre Salinger, and one of the president's military aides, Brig.-Gen. Chester V. Clifton, Jr.

Salinger was in Toronto at a "and the doctor says she is making fantastic strides."

MACMILLAN

companied by his wife, Lady Dorothy, he's just completed a tour of The West Indies which, he said on arrival Tuesday night, may soon take its full place as a Commonwealth member.

Macmillan goes into the meeting with Kennedy—the second in 61 days—with apparently more optimism over world conditions than Kennedy harbors.

Kennedy feels the East-West nuclear ban treaty negotiations at Geneva are not going well and that Russia is not showing much encouragement for treaty prospects. But he will keep his negotiations there for a little while longer.

He also is concerned that the royal Laotian army isn't showing much vigor in defending Laos against the attacking pro-Red Pathet Lao.

But Kennedy is ready to try a conference - table deal with Russia, figuring a military showdown in Laos may be too great a risk for the United States.

Macmillan goes into the White House meeting with some feeling of optimism that Russia will agree to a Laotian cease-fire as a special prerequisite to a 14-country conference to settle Laos' future.

WANTS FAST START

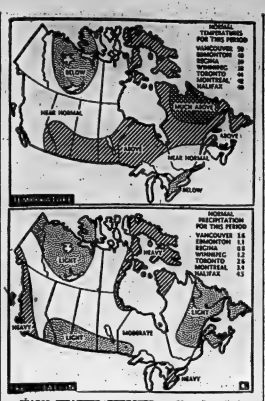
Britain wants to get the conference started quickly, feeling the sooner the U.S. and Russia are brought to the negotiations table the greater the likelihood that Laos won't explode into a major war.

The president had gone to the state department to speak and answer questions off the record at a meeting of 500 radio and television news editors and executives.

State Secretary Dean Rusk welcomed the prime minister Tuesday night.

While a dry Dorothy was driven 15 miles to the city, the prime minister flew into Washington aboard a U.S. Army helicopter which landed on the lawn of the U.S. naval observatory a block from the British Embassy.

Howard Green Says Canada's Prestige Rises



VERNON, B.C. (CP) — Canada now will be in a better position to provide leadership in world councils because of the stand taken by Prime Minister Diefenbaker at the recent Commonwealth Conference in London, External Affairs Minister Green said here Tuesday.

He told the Vernon Chamber of Commerce that because of that stand, which resulted in the withdrawal of South Africa from the Commonwealth, this country now has the respect and confidence of the Afro-Asian nations.

Mr. Green gave no hint when Red China will be recognized but said it is the Chinese are not making it easy for Canada to enter into normal relations with those countries who recognized her some years ago.

FOUR DIE IN CRASH

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Four men died Tuesday when two light planes collided southwest of Riverside, then crashed and burned in a residential area.

WARM WEATHER EXPECTED — Normal and above-normal temperatures are expected for most of Canada in the 30-day outlook of the United States weather bureau for April

The outlook is based on long-range predictions and is not a specific forecast. A change in weather pattern may produce major errors.

Light to normal precipitation is expected during the month with the exception of heavy precipitation along the west and in Southern Ontario. Normal precipitation is given in inches of rain. One inch of rain equals 10 inches of snow. (CP Newsmap.)

Revival of Bestial Mau Mau Slows Kenya's Independence

By ROBERT N. LINDSAY

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—Kenya now has a legislature with an African elected majority, but the country's progress toward promised independence is being slowed by a revival of the bestial Mau Mau.

For eight years, 1952-60, this British East African colony battled against the Mau Mau rebellion. This was spearheaded by the Kikuyu tribe, though by no means all the million-odd Kikuyu were involved.

Thousands of Africans were slaughtered. Contrary to a common impression that a main aim was to oust the whites from the colony, fewer than a hundred Europeans were killed. More than a division of British troops, with thousands of African soldiers, were tied down for years helping to quell the revolt. During the worst stage it cost the Kenya government more than $3,000,000 a month.

About 90,000 Kikuyu were detained for years as a risk to security. A few still are held.

There are signs now that the whole tragic mess may be starting again. Police and security men have been cracking down on a new secret society known as the African Land Freedom Army, modelled on Mau Mau lines but with a more selective system of recruiting members.

SEEK FANATICS

The organizers are looking for hard-core members of the old Mau Mau, preferably those who have "executed an enemy"—the Mau Mau euphemism for murder—or served in one of the detention camps reserved for the worst Mau Mau thugs.

Security men say the organization seeks to get together a colony - wide corps of proven anti - government fanatics who will try to take over power "from the politicians," presumably Africans by then, when independence comes.

The Freedom Army contends the only real patriots in Kenya were Mau Mau and that present African political parties, such as Tom Mboya's Kenya African National Union, are a waste of time.

The Freedom Army holds secret meetings to administer oaths exactly like those of Mau Mau. Practically every week cases of Mau Mau oathing, a criminal offence, are before the Kenya courts.

Senior police officers say communism is not behind this revival of Mau Mau though the cell system of organization is patterned on Soviet lines. They say Chinese Communists may be trying to infiltrate East Africa generally.

Kenya is much better placed today to meet the Mau Mau threat than in 1952. It has a large efficient police force, with a highly-trained intelligence department.

African political leaders, including Mboya, have publicly denounced Mau Mau and evidence.

WILL REPRESENT CANADA

OTTAWA (CP)—Appointment of Richard P. Bower as Canadian ambassador to Uruguay was announced Tuesday by External Affairs Minister Green. Mr. Bower, 55, now is Canadian ambassador to Argentina and will be accredited to governments of both countries.

Behan May Be Released to Face Charges

TORONTO (CP) — Brendan Behan may be released temporarily from Sunnybrook Private Hospital to face charges of assaulting from a hotel fracas two years ago.

Eamonn Martin, a close friend of the Irish playwright, said Tuesday Behan's doctor approved an early court appearance for the author on the patient's mind.

Mr. Martin said the convalescent playwright has seen some visitors but becomes very tired and Dr. Tabershaw has ordered he must return to bed.

A warrant was issued March 17 for Behan's arrest after he failed to appear in court and forfeited $500 bail. The warrant, bushing Irishman is charged with creating a disturbance and assaulting police and hotel security officers. The warrant hasn't been served yet as he has been ill.

Infant Makes Rapid Recovery From Operation

TORONTO (CP) — The infant daughter of a suburban Willowdale couple, who underwent a rare heart operation when she was only eight days old, has made a startling recovery.

Mary Pamela Cowling, now 13 months, was born with a heart in which the arteries were on the wrong sides. All but a small percentage of the impure blood brought to her heart failed to reach the lungs for purification.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cowling, were told the only operation that could save Mary's life had never been performed on anyone under three months of age.

In the operation at Chicago the infant's circulation was given a 60-per-cent switch so that much of her blood now reaches her lungs.

A second operation, for which techniques have not yet been perfected will be required by Mary next year.

But Mary's recovery has eased her parents' fears.

"We've taken her back for a checkup," said Mrs. Cowling,

Whites Becoming Alarmed As Blacks of Kenya Look Forward to Independence

By ROBERT N. LINDSAY

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP)—From the point of view of the white people, the situation is beginning to look alarming in this part of Africa. Britain's decision as it moves toward independence.

There is a feeling here similar to that which prevailed in the Congo before Belgium gave that country its freedom.

Kenya is a country of 6,500,000. The 65,000 whites are mostly of British stock. They and 185,000 Asians have shaped the backbone of Kenya's economy.

Today the whites and Asians are scared about the future. They are getting their capital out at the rate of $3,000,000 a month. Not many have so far quit the country, but they are preparing to go if African violence on a large scale is turned loose as it did in The Congo soon after independence.

Unless farming fear's violence and that an independent government may expropriate their farms. Many are trying to get rid of properties on a declining market. Thirty-seven farms recently were offered for sale in a $3,000,000 package. Kenya's lease again in national politics. Real sovereign and of Kenyatta. "I care for Kenya too much to contemplate his stepping from restriction to the seat of authority."

Even the governor is in violent collision with African leaders. They have all refused to take office in a new government until Kenyatta is released.

Michael Blundell, at one time acknowledged leader of Kenya's Europeans (whites), led the fight against Mau Mau in the worst days of the rebellion. He has said he would like to see Kenyatta released before independence "so that we may see what sort of a man he is while we still have adequate means of dealing with him if he is an evil force."

FOREIGN INVESTMENT

Trading in stocks and bonds between Canada and other countries last year resulted in a net capital inflow of $218,000,000.

against Mrs. Laroche was the only one being contemplated at present.

The original investigation had been prompted by demands from the St. Joseph's Citizens' League, an organization which subsequently presented its own list of candidates in the Dec. 5 municipal elections.

League candidates replaced the ex-Mrs. former councl headed by Gordon Lavergne who also is Progressive Conservative MLA for Russel County.

Since that time the group has pressed continuously for the laying charges against any of the previous aldermen who might be guilty of indictable offences.

China, Past and Present Topic At Bridge St. Afternoon WMS

The Easter thank offering meeting of the Afternoon Auxiliary of W.M.S. united with the Evening Auxiliary and C.G.I.T. of Bridge St. United Church for the regular "Family Party" gathering. This always was a supper meeting held at 6 p.m. The group leaders in charge this year were, for the W.M.S.: Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Tugwell; for the Evening Auxiliary: Mrs. Quickert and her group.

The head table was centred with a beautiful floral arrangement of daffodils and heather flanked by yellow candles in crystal holders. Yellow candles in the crystal holders also decorated the long tables.

GUEST SPEAKER

After a delicious meal, the meeting proper was opened by the president of W.M.S. Afternoon Auxiliary, Mrs. Davis, who introduced the head table officers and welcomed the guest speaker, Mrs. Mullett, and Mrs. Hicks of Wellington, who is secretary for C.G.I.T. of Presbyterial.

The business was dispensed with as quickly as possible. Mrs. Golden, president of the Evening Auxiliary, called for the payment of that group being able to meet at this gathering. The leader of the C.G.I.T. voiced her thanks on behalf of her group.

The candlelight service, conducted by members of the C.G.I.T. following a pleasing part were: Joan Leslie; Sheila Casey, with their counsellor, Miss Farnsworth. Mrs. Howie and Mrs. Hicks, who presented the "Cross". The service closed by the entire C.G.I.T. group singing their theme song.

Mrs. Moore took charge. After a few short introductory remarks on the "Easter Theme," she called on Mrs. Finkle, who read in the devotional. Printed pamphlets bearing the service heading, "The Crown Jewels of the Lord of Life".

Following this, Miss Helen Cook accompanied on the piano by Mrs. Demeza, rendered an Easter solo.

Mrs. Moore now introduced the guest speaker, Mrs. Mullett, with whom her husband, a dentist spent 35 years as missionaries in China, Mrs. Mullett taught in the Foreign Language School. They stayed in China two years after the Communists had had taken power.

Mrs. Mullett chose as her subject "China, Past and Present." She opened her address with the question: Have you ever thought what it would be like to live in a country before Christianity had reached it? Great idols of stone, of stone are worshipped. No doctors or hospitals; sick people are thought to be possessed by evil spirit. The witch doctors endeavor to drive these evil spirits out of them, she noted. Mrs. Mullett told of the great suffering this caused to the poor sick person. No schools, hospitals or orphanages; misery beyond description exists.

CHRISTIANITY BRINGS CHANGE

What a change when Christianity, carried by such messengers as Dr. and Mrs. Mullett, takes place! The best gift the West has ever given the East is "Christian Leadership." The great disaster is not enough leaders have been sent in the last years past, hence Communism has swept China.

Christianity uplifted the status of women; girls used to be considered of no value; in fact, Mrs. Mullett said, often when a boy baby was born the parents would give it a girl's name, thinking to trick the evil spirits so they wouldn't enter it.

Christianity did away with the former terrible custom of foot-binding. It is almost gone, except in distant mountain regions. She showed a shoe, about two and one-half inches in length that was worn when the custom was practised.

Many patients came to Dr. Mullett and were treated in dentistry and given relief, the "Good News" spread. Patients learned the missionary doctor not only told the "Good News" but healed them as well.

China has 12,000 graduates in medicine and 400 in dentistry. They are still carrying on under the Communist regime, but must be very careful what they say. They carry the Christian teaching they learned in their hearts and minds but, as Mrs. Mullett said, if you have a gun at your head, you keep silent. However, she said, the mission work in China has not been started. The message still lives.

WORD PICTURE

She gave a word picture of the duties of Dr. Mullett, as assumed by Dr. Mullett and herself during the two years they remained under Communism.

All liberty is lost; you never know when a government official is at your door, enters, and searches everywhere in the house seeking to find something to charge you with breaking the law.

If you want to go anywhere you must first go to the police station to ask permission. If you are to have a visitor police must be asked about their coming and again must receive permission from police before leaving.

All gatherings are under governmental order.

There is no justice in their hearings of people condemned to the firing squad. Many are brought to trial for something they've never done. Mrs. Mullett said a many Chinese in the population of Ontario have been condemned to death and killed.

The method took of stopping religious teaching was holding Communists political meetings at same time as religious services. Everyone is forced to attend political meetings, even children, so of course, there were none to attend church. Personally dies under Communism. The Government thinks orders, and you act.

Mrs. Mullett warned her hearers to be on guard and hold fast to Canada's way of life, for there are those even in this country working to take it away.

Mrs. Lyons thanked Mrs. Mullett for her first hand informative address.

Mrs. Davis voiced her thanks on behalf of all present and presented Mrs. Mullett with a corsage.

Mr. MacDonald, the supply secretary had prepared a poster and a box, in which all were asked for a small donation toward buying blankets for overseas relief. A goodly sum of over $20. was realized. Since such blanket costs only $2.25 quite a number will be made available.

Support for Polygamy Feature of Recent Debate

By HORACE GAMTELL

ACCRA, Ghana (Reuters)—How many wives should a Ghanaian have?

Most Ghanaians would like to have, and, more often than not have, more than one wife, though only the ambitious or the wealthy have more than two or three wives.

On a farm, more than one pair of wifely arms is an obvious asset. In towns, too, where 80 per cent of petty retail trading is done by women, the more wives a man has, the larger his total income, at least, theoretically.

Under customary laws, working wives must keep themselves, and the husband by tradition is required only to pay for the education of the children. In addition, it is not unusual for the wives to keep their joint husband in pocket money.

Most women's groups insist that the man should be forced by law to contribute at least something toward the upkeep of his children, over and above educational costs.

Proposed new laws on marriage are expected to recognize and meet this demand.

Polygamy under customary laws rarely produces any household problems in Ghana. Villages, towns and cities, the several wives of a man often live happily together, sharing the farm or household chores and also recognize only one marriage—the one contract under civil law and consecrated in church.

Ghanaian men, supported by the women, are essentially polygamous.

Under present laws, they can choose between two forms of marriage. Customary or tribal laws allow them any number of wives. Civil law limits them to one wife.

Women Not Sole Victims Says Member

TORONTO (C) — Wives-nagging, demanding and foolishly romantic — are to blame for many divorces in Canada, a Toronto member of arliament said Tuesday night.

They expect too much and are misled by romantic ideals perpetuated by love magazines and novels, said Douglas Fisher, member for ort Arthur. He spoke at a public affairs forum to explore divorce in Canada. He complained that fellow panelists depicted women as the sole victims of divorce and regarded men as tough, "almost bestial."

All four p a n e l ists favored more liberal divorce legislation to relieve the burden on women.

Mr. Fisher got in with: "I think we need it for men too, and their burdens."

Mrs. Alan Grabb, Toronto freelance writer and broadcaster, said women stand to lose more in divorce. The ex-wife is in a difficult position in terms of remarriage if she has children.

"Men don't want a ready-made family," she said.

helping to look after all the children. The more educated girls usually insist on having their own house, even if they cannot have their husband all to themselves.

Sidney W. — My aunt has young children of her own It's a better home.

Mrs. K. W. — I raised three children. My youngest, Sidney, lost his wife two years ago and gave his two-year-old son to my young sister, his aunt, to take care of. I assumed this was temporarily and that when Sidney married again, my little grandchild would return to his home.

However, the child is now 4 and will be left in my sister's home indefinitely even though Sidney has remarried. I've protested that since Sidney isn't bringing the child up, he should let me, the boy's own grandmother do so. I'm lonely and Cary would make me young again.

The boy is my own flesh and blood, closer to me than to my sister. Why can't I have him?

Sidney W. — I love my mother, but I must do what's best for my son. My aunt is 18 years younger than my mother and has two young children of her own. In addition, she went to college and hopes to return to her studies some day when the children are all in school.

Even though Cary is her son and only grandchild, my mother must realize he's a handful. She hasn't told you that she still must keep house for herself, my father, and my older brother. How she thinks she'd keep up with Cary, too, I don't know! All he wants at this stage is someone to play "catch" with him.

Besides, with her, he'd be an only child. At Aunt Jenny's, he has a ready-made family.

The Council — With three possible homes available for Cary, a half-orphan, the one where he is now sounds best, and we agree with Sidney, the boy's father, that he should be left there.

This is not to say that the college trained great-aunt can necessarily do a better mothering job than the warm hearted grandma. This father's decision is evidently swayed in Aunt Jenny's direction for other reasons. One is that Cary is already ensconced there after one uprooting from his own home. Another is that he's made an adjustment as a sort of "kid brother" in a lively household, with little danger of being lonely or spoiled as he might well be in a houseful of adults.

Certainly the grandparents can visit Cary and be visited. And in the natural course of things, there'll be other grandchildren to dote upon and lead. No slight has been perpetrated by Sidney on his mother. With Cary's best interests in mind, he voted for Aunt Jenny's as the home "most likely to succeed."

While it's possible, we add for Mrs. W., that a child in the home might make you "young again," he can also — in bringing back loads in his pockets or hanging from rickety tree tops — make you old before your time.

No, Grandma, be glad this energetic child is being well cared for and that you don't have to be the one in charge. Sit back and enjoy all your roles, those of wife, mother, and sister, as well as grandmother.

Banana Cream Pie And Cream Pie Variations

By Mary Moore

BANANA CREAM PIE:

(For 9" pie shell).

Filling: One-half cup white (or light brown) sugar, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 2 1-2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 tablespoon flour, 1 1-4 cups hot milk, 1-3 cup cold milk, 3 large egg yolks, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 medium large bananas.

Meringue: Two egg whites (or 4 if you want a high meringue for which you would have to add another 1-4 cup sugar), 1-4 cup sugar, 1-2 teaspoon cream of tartar.

To make the filling heat the 1 3-4 cups amount of milk in top of double boiler. Mix together dry the sugar, salt, cornstarch, flour, then stir in the cold milk until smooth. Pour into hot milk in top of double boiler, stirring until thick. Cover and cook 15 minutes, stirring twice. Beat the yolks, mix a little of the hot filling with them, and return to double boiler, stirring for 2 minutes. Remove from heat, add butter and vanilla. Slice one of the bananas into a baked pie shell. Add 1-3 of the hot filling. Continue until the 3 bananas and all of the filling are used. Cover with meringue made by adding the cream of tartar to whites and beating until peaks form, then the sugar and beat until very stiff. Cover filling with meringue, sealing it to edge of pastry shell. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. (or very hot oven) until delicately tinged with gold.

COCONUT CREAM PIE:

Use the same filling as above. When filling is cooked and still hot add 1 1-3 cups coconut. Cool pie. Cover with whipped cream. Sprinkle with coconut. To make the pie a little more glamorous toast the coconut which is to be sprinkled on top by spreading in a shallow pan and toasting it in the oven, until it is tinged with gold.

(c) Coffee Cream Pie: Make filling same as above for Banana Cream Pie but substitute 1 cup strong coffee for one of the cups of milk. When filling is cooked and melted add 1 cup of chopped walnuts or pecans. If you like a strong coffee flavor, 1 teaspoon instant powdered coffee may be added to the filling. Cover with meringue as above for Banana Cream Pie.

Successful Living

Wary Bachelor Fears Single Fate

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—How does a fellow know when he is in love? I have been so wrong so often, that I am getting wary.

At high school I fell for every pretty face at college I got cheesier. Later I nearly married a girl before it dawned on me that she planned to make me over just as soon as I slipped the wedding ring on her finger.

Now I think I am in danger of bachelorhood and the prospect is horrible. My pals, friends are married and having families.—LEFT OVER.

DEAR LEFT OVER:—How do you know when you are in love. Well, if it is the real thing, it just gets better all the time.

There is such a thing as love at first sight, but more often the love that lasts a lifetime grows gradually, from the first attraction between the sexes, into a closer companionship, then into a love which there is no mistaking.

Have you been looking for perfection? You won't find it. Remember that you aren't perfect yourself, either. Look, instead, for warmth and for a girl who is interested in the same things you are. Probably some you have ruled out would bore knowing better.

Don't let physical attraction alone enamare you. Don't marry in haste for fear of being left behind. But do keep circulating. Keep sociable, and one of these days you will get to know the friend whom you will want for your own very dear one for life.

DEAR DORIS:—Your advice to Disillusioned to get his wife to put up her hair in the mornings after he gets out to work is all very well, but what about us wives who work? We have to turn ourselves out looking nifty first thing in the morning.—WORKING WIFE.

DEAR WORKING WIFE—You're right. It is a different problem entirely.

For some, the answer is a good permanent and a regular appointment with the hairdresser. Then all that is needed at night is enough bobbie pins to hold an invisible—or nearly invisible—net in place, to keep the hair do lovely.

For others, it is worth hunting for a pretty ribbon or hanky which will cover up the pincurls and can be anchored with some hidden hairpins. The main thing is to make it important to be pleasing to the eye even when you are at home—with only your nearest and dearest.

DEAR DORIS:—I can't figure my son out. On the one hand he argues with me to take money from him instead of working while I can. On the other he seems horrified that I want to move to his city and be near him now that my husband is dead.

He says that I will miss all my friends and not be at all happy. I have a wide circle of acquaintances but I don't care two hoots about them in comparison with my son, My daughter-in-law and I are the best of friends. But I think he is really rejecting me.—MRS. O.

DEAR MRS. O.:—Do you want to play second fiddle in the life of your son's family?

No!

Don't kid yourself about your friends. You are a different generation from the young people and to be able to keep in close touch with your contemporaries is precious.

Be thankful you have a son who offers you money and is thoughtful enough to want you not to work. This is not rejection. But keep your distance and your friends—and make it a joyful special event when Granny comes to town.

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

XI Alpha Mu Names 1961 Officers

"Xi Alpha Mu Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, held two meetings in March. The first meeting took the form of an auction sale with several former members present. The sale was most enjoyable and also profitable under auctioneer Mrs. J. Wonnacott. Mrs. J. Lennox and Mrs. W. O. Cochrane acted as treasurers.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. R. Smith, Mrs. S. Wonnacott, Mrs. A. Cunningham and the hostess, Mrs. J. Sisson.

The March business meeting took place at the home of Mrs. J. L. Acton, with the president, Mrs. J. Joblin, in the chair. Many reports were given and committees heard from. The Chapter decided to celebrate Founder's Day in Belleville with the other city chapters.

PUPPET MATERIAL NEEDED

The president appealed for remnants of new material for the Hospital Auxiliary puppets. Mrs. R. Smith asked for contributions for a rummage sale to be sponsored by the Quinte Skating and Tennis Club. The members decided to act as part of a telephone committee in the forthcoming campaign for a new Y.M.C.A.

The final item of business was the presentation of a new slate of officers for the coming year. The following officers were elected: president, Mrs. J. Sisson; vice-president, Mrs. S. Wonnacott; recording secretary, Mrs. G. Hornsby, corresponding secretary, Mrs. W. O. Cochrane; treasurer, Mrs. J. C. McDonald.

Following the business, a most interesting talk on "The Education of A Child," was given by Mrs. J. Sisson, who outlined the pre-school educational influences in the home, citing the example of the child's parents as most important. This was followed by a comparison of methods used in the academic side of education.

The speaker was thanked by Mrs. V. MacLean.

At the end of the evening, refreshments were served by the hostess, Mrs. Acton, and Mrs. G. Badgley.

The Experts Say

'Chiffon Look' Has Invaded The World of Cosmetics

By DEIRDRE MUNGOVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO (CP) — A soft, natural look has invaded the cosmetic world, supplanting last year's "movie star look" and Paris' "white look."

Marc Laurent calls it the "chiffon look" but no matter what it is labelled it definitely complements the latest hot colors in fabrics and the easy flowing lines of this season's fashions.

As one of Paris' prominent cosmetologists, Mr. Laurent is on a two-month tour of Canada to advise women on co-ordinating make-up with their clothes, complexion and color of eyes and hair. Mr. Laurent says make-up can be gayer for special evening occasions but always must be discreet and soft. This lighter look includes everything from eye make-up to lipstick.

With practice, any woman should be able to apply all her cosmetics within 10 minutes, he says.

CREAM NECESSARY

A model's face was cleaned with a cream which, Mr. Laurent insists, is an absolute necessity as a foundation. He doiled her face with a pale, beige-toned base which he blended smoothly, to give a "definition to the cheek bones," with a touch of light rouge.

"The make - up must match her complexion," he said. "If it is too ruddy, then use a base which is lighter. A paler complexion needs a darker base."

Mr. Laurent, in an interview following the demonstration, said he prefers a grey or light blue eye shadow which will suit almost any woman.

"The pastel tones accentuate the color of the eyes and make them sparkle. But gold is the most natural of all eye shadows, giving eye lids a light sheen. But be careful of going to extremes."

By using liquid eye liner and mascara in the same shades as the model's hair, Mr. Laurent showed how the eyes are widened and made more interesting. The brows were penciled lightly and brushed along the natural brow line.

DARKER OUTLINE

With a lipstick brush of soft pink, he filled in the shape of the mouth and outlined it in a slightly darker pink to give emphasis.

"As long as the make-up is discreet, you can wear a little of everything during the day-time. But you can do anything you want with cosmetics for the evening as long as they are used softly."

"The most common mistake older women make is with heavy make-up in colors which are too bright, sparkling and sharp. They think this will help hide the wrinkles and sallow complexion. However, they appear years older and look ridiculous. They should use the soft pastel shades."

Here's a trick he says should help women who must wear glasses while applying makeup: Stand beside a sunny window and use one hand to hold a magnifying mirror and the other to apply eye make-up. Another solution would be to place the glasses on the end of the nose and look through them into the mirror.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

Now that Easter itself is over and with the Easter school holidays more than half gone, the prospect for students is the completing of the year's work, the review and consolidation of work. To senior students who intend to study further it is also a time for decision. What does he want to do; where does he want to go; how best to accomplish these?

This is where student, family and guidance officer can work together, this is the time to find out what various universities and other schools offer. It is also a time to find out what is available in the way of financial assistance for the student continuing his education — scholarships for top students, bursaries and other aid for the good, serious worker. It has been shown that in many areas students are not aware of facilities which are there to help him.

It is not too soon to look ahead for scholarships and opportunities for further study after university or specialized study. With the whole world open to young people of today, the outlook is exciting. The various agencies of the United Nations offer many advantages in this sort. The twelfth annual edition of "Study Abroad," published by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization (UNESCO), this year lists over 100,000 opportunities to international study and travel in 1960-61 and 1961-62.

The scholarships and fellowships are offered in a wide range of studies by more than 1,700 international and national agencies in 115 countries and territories. The grants vary in duration from two weeks to eight years.

The UNESCO publication lists opportunities country by country and gives the following information for each listing: the source of the scholarship — government, department, nongovernmental organization, etc.; the subject; where the student may apply; to whom the grant is available; the language requirement, if any; amount of scholarship and the duration and number of awards.

The book, in English, French or Spanish, is available at National Distributors of UNESCO Publications of which there is at least one in almost every country. UNESCO Publications in Canada may be obtained by writing to the Queen's Printer, Ottawa. Canada is a member country of the UNESCO organization.

Information of all sorts can be obtained from the United Nations Association in Canada, a voluntary organization of Canadian citizens. The above mentioned scholarships and opportunities may find special interest for those students who have been members of United Nations Clubs in our schools. There are hundreds of these clubs as well as Student United Association extending into 35 universities and 40 French-speaking classical colleges. These groups conduct seminars on the UN for high school students every summer on university campuses from coast to coast.

Last summer at Carleton College during the first week of July there was a conference for teachers on United Nations work; there were lectures, many discussion groups and workshops. It was sponsored by the National Office, United Nations Association, 324 Bloor W., Toronto 5, Ontario. This summer Vancouver is to have a similar conference for teachers. The above Toronto address will supply any information which the interested person wishes to write for.

Wife Playing Vital Role For Tourist

MONTREAL (C) — The lovely wife of Indian surrealist painter Satish Gujral is playing a vital role in his current Canadian tour, sponsored by the Canada Council.

The new Delhi artist is deaf and 24-year-old Kiran's graceful hands interpret the rest of the world to him when it talks too fast to be lip-read.

Since this is especially likely with artists encountered "en masse," Mrs. Gujral is accompanying him on the six-month cultural exchange tour of Canada, to include visits to Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina and Vancouver.

The dark-eyed mother of two is an artist in her own right and specializes in batik — designs on silk. When interviewed in Montreal, she was wearing a scarlet and ivory silk sari that she had designed herself.

Owner of a studio with a staff of four, she also makes designs for lamps and other home furnishings. Folk art, some of it African, provides her inspiration.

Yet she feels her work is secondary to that of her bearded husband.

"Mine is an entirely decorative point of view," she said. "Painting is a much more serious art."

FLOUR TYPES

When all-purpose or bread flour is used in place of pastry flour, two tablespoons less per cup are required.

Colorful Cotton Knit

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Cotton knit gets better year after year, as evidenced by this pretty number which would be perfect for wear either on a cruise or ashore and should do duty right through the summer.

The cotton knit background of beige serves as a fine foil for a parade of contrasting brightly-colored squares down one side. One of the squares is a pocket. A separate tie sash conceals the elasticized waist.

The squares are green, yellow and burnt orange and are the same against a black background.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Hagner Shaw

RUDENESS IN PUBLIC ON THE RISE

It's beginning to look as though there are more and more people who take the "couldn't care less" attitude about what others think or their actions when in public!

Probably because of my job, I am super-sensitive about the way people conduct themselves. On the streets, in restaurants, or any other public place, my ears are always alert for those who err, and I single out those who are rude and thoughtless towards others.

Frankly, I become more appalled every day! Gracious manners — consideration for others, whether friend or stranger — would seem to be a thing of the past. The "I for myself" approach, regardless of whose toes get stepped on, both figuratively and literally, seems to be taking over in an alarming way. What's wrong with everybody? I hate that "everybody" back! There are still many, many folks who make every effort to think of others, but it seems that the majority don't.

The above tirade is not just my idea, I receive hundreds of letters from those who do try to follow the rules of courteous behavior. They just don't understand what is happening to so many people these days, any more than I can!

To my way of thinking, all of this thoughtless rudeness is caused by one thing — an utter lack of a person's regard for the small, everyday courtesies that mean so much. Here are a few of the so-called "little" courtesies that I think are being neglected, with the result that we are becoming generally known as one of the rudest nations on earth!

The "thank you's," the "pleases," the "excuse me's" are all too few and far between.

If you accidentally bump into someone in a crowd (or if you step on someone's foot) is your apology a quick and sincere one, or is your reaction a grunt and a dirty look? Is your attitude one of "Why don't you look where you're going?" towards the person you bumped into? What about you looking where you are going! Did you ever think of that?

When you refuse to move back in the bus when the driver asks you politely to do, do you realize that you are helping along with other selfish people, to make it impossible for others to get on the vehicle? Are you snippy and rude to those who try to serve you, taking the attitude that you are above them, because they are serving you? I mean the drugstore clerk, the newsboy, the taxi driver, the waiter, the sales-person, etc?

I could go on and on listing the ways we can be rude in our daily contacts. It all boils down to one question. Do you want to be known as that "nice person" or that thoughtless-not one?" It would seem to be up to you.

Diefenbaker Says Tories Intend to Extoll Record Of Party to the Country

By GRAHAM TROTTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP)—John Diefenbaker, in his exuberant speech to the Progressive Conservative convention that elected him national leader in December, 1956, declared "we have an appointment with destiny."

The Conservatives kept that appointment. Six months later they scored a narrow victory over the Liberals and on June 21, 1957, formed the first Conservative government in 22 years, albeit a minority one.

Three years ago—March 31, 1958—they followed up, with a smashing triumph, winning 208 of 265 Commons seats, the greatest parliamentary majority ever.

Now, with an eye to the next election, Mr. Diefenbaker has exhorted his party to keep another date with destiny.

"There never was a time when the Conservative party had an appointment with destiny as it has today and we will assure that that appointment is kept," he told the party's national meeting here in March.

"We intend to go across this country and carry to every part of it in the months ahead the record of what we have done."

POWER DEVELOPMENTS

What is that record? Accomplishments claimed by the Conservatives include signing of a treaty with the U.S. for Columbia River power development; groundwork for a start to be made soon on the Great Slave Lake Railway to open up a rich mineral area; the South Saskatchewan River dam becoming a reality; a big atomic energy development under way in Manitoba; a stepped-up program of harbor and airport development; the Beechwood power project in New Brunswick; the roads-to-resources program with 4,000 miles of access roads and 2,000 miles of development roads being built, and a major increase in oil and gas activity in the north.

There is the matter of "social justice," a term used increasingly by the government to describe a wide range of federal payments from old age pensions to hospital insurance which the Conservatives say have increased by more than 30 per cent since they took office.

At the same time, they say, more than 80 per cent of personal income tax payers are paying less now than under the former Liberal government.

BASIC RIGHTS BILL

A Bill of Rights has been enacted. A national energy board, the Board of Broadcast Governors, a national parks board and national productivity council all have been created.

The provinces were given a bigger share of the tax pie. The special economic situation in the Atlantic provinces was recognized with a $25,000,000-a-year adjustment grant.

Exports reached a record in 1960 and the trade imbalance was the lowest since 1954.

The Conservatives made a $1,000,000,000 available for home building—compared with $900,000,000 loaned by the Liberals—under the National Housing Act. Cash advances for farm-stored grain, special acreage payments totalling more than $80,000,000 and a crop insurance plan were agricultural firsts.

Federal relations with Quebec improved. The provinces received university grants and entered shared - cost programs such as the Trans-Canada Highway. Progress was made on constitutional reform.

UNEMPLOYMENT ROSE

But the opposition parties see the government's record in a different light.

Liberal Leader Lester Pearson says: "The dominant and overriding characteristic of the government's three years in office has been its failure effectively to deal with our No. 1 national problem, namely, unemployment and recession."

Says CCF Leader Hazen Argue: "I can only describe its three years of office as a colossal failure. The prime minister's vision of three years ago has turned into Canada's nightmare."

Mr. Diefenbaker has said the issue in the next election will be whether Canada is to go socialist or remain a free enterprise nation. But at the moment both the Liberals and CCF indicate they regard the government's record on unemployment as the chief issue.

At mid-February 719,000 Canadians were out of jobs, a post-war record. The unemployment insurance fund had shrunk to $283,742,000 at Jan. 31 from $916,429,000 at that date in 1957.

CREATED JOBS

The government's prime weapon against unemployment has been the municipal winter works incentive program which it says has exceeded expectations in its third winter, providing 210,000 jobs. And Labor Minister Starr says the government's record on unemployment is more comprehensive than action so far taken in the United States."

Besides unemployment, Mr. Pearson says the government's other notable "failures" have been "refusal to take responsibility for monetary policy and failure to define a coherent defence policy suitable to the demands of the nuclear age.

"Moreover, the vacillation, indecision and delays of this government have been particularly politicable and disturbing, giving rise in the country to an atmosphere of uncertainty and confusion."

Mr. Argue says: "The list of failures is staggering—failure to solve unemployment, failure to increase old age pensions, failure to provide parity prices for farm products, failure to lower interest rates."

The Canadian voter will have the final say on the government's record. The next election is expected in 1962.

AIR SERVICE EXPANDED — R. D. (Ron) Turner, president of TransAir Limited of Winnipeg, points to DEW-line radar site his airline will service from Winnipeg as a result of a United States Air Force decision to have supplies flown through Winnipeg and Churchill, Man. The DEW-line supply business will probably make TransAir Canada's third largest airline. The TransAir routes were chosen over supply lines through Montreal and Edmonton. (CP Photo).

USAF DEW Line Decision Supply May Make TransAir Canada's 3rd Largest Airline

By STAN McCABE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

WINNIPEG (CP) — The U.S. Air Force may have unknowingly decided who will be the next leader of the Liberal-Progressive party in Manitoba.

It was the USAF that ruled supplies for the Distant Early Warning (DEW) line will be flown north through Winnipeg and Churchill, Man., starting July 1 rather than through Montreal and Edmonton.

The decision was an economic vitamin pill for TransAir Limited of Winnipeg which has the rights to fly through Winnipeg to Churchill, 610 miles north on Hudson Bay.

With DEW line supply business, it is expected to become Canada's third largest airline behind Trans-Canada and Canadian Pacific.

R. D. (Ron) Turner, president of TransAir and a former Liberal - Progressive provincial treasurer who has long been regarded as heir-apparent to D. L. Campbell, apparently had his immediate future determined by the USAF decision.

Until it came, he had not committed himself on whether he would try for the leadership when it comes up at a convention this month. Now it appears he will stay in the airline business.

Mr. Campbell, leader since 1948, is in the running-for the leadership but it was commonly speculated that if he thought Mr. Turner would give up the airline business and return to politics, Mr. Campbell would step aside.

The DEW line contract moved Mr. Turner to announce he would not be a candidate for the leadership. Mr. Campbell now is conferred a sure bet to be returned.

Ron Turner's decision is a disappointment to those who regarded him as the only prospective leader with a chance of beating Progressive Conservative Premier Duff Roblin in the next election.

Now 41, Mr. Turner has already had a varied career. A native of Carman, Man., his family moved to Winnipeg when he was a boy. He graduated in law from the University of Manitoba.

While at college he came to know George H. Sellers who now controls TransAir and it was to influence him in his choice of business over politics.

HELD THREE PORTFOLIOS

After a wartime RCAF career during which he rose to the rank of wing commander, Mr. Turner entered politics as an air force representative in the Manitoba legislature. In 1951 he was given a cabinet post in Mr. Campbell's government.

In 1956 he was carrying three portfolios, working night and day and carrying on a battle with newspapers over revamping Manitoba liquor laws. Mr. Sellers offered him the job of president of TransAir and he quit politics.

The airline leaped to prosperity on flights that helped build the DEW line but when it failed to get a share of subsequent DEW line supply contracts, it began losing money.

About the same time, it was hit by a series of accidents.

"They were even running into one another on the ground," Mr. Turner recalls ruefully.

Development of the company's Montreal - Churchill - Winnipeg route kept TransAir alive even though there was no real use for its $750,000 base at Churchill.

Mr. Turner put on a campaign to convince the USAF and its contractor for DEW line operation, Federal Electric, that the U.S. government could save $1,000,000 a year by flying supplies through Manitoba rather than Montreal and Edmonton.

The provincial government also claims some credit for the contract switch. It says the change means $3,600,000 a year in new business. It will enable TransAir to acquire new planes and staff.

TransAir is bidding for new commercial air routes in the north and is seeking to consolidate its services in Northwestern Ontario and northern Manitoba.

And Mr. Turner — the man who might have made good in politics—apparently is aiming at being in at the birth of a central Canada air empire.

Many Centres Establishing Junior High Schools to Change to Tri-Level System

TORONTO (CP)—Large centres in Ontario are gradually establishing junior high schools and changing to the tri-level school system, David L. Tough, secondary school superintendent for suburban North York, township said Tuesday night.

Mr. Tough was addressing some 200 teacher members of the Ontario Industrial Art Association, a section of the Ontario Educational Association.

Some 10,000 delegates are attending the Ontario Educational Association Convention and the annual Catholic Education Conference.

Advantages of the junior high school system include better employment of teachers' talents, better physical facilities for the narrowed - down age group and a better chance for the younger student to take part in activities.

Dr. Gerald H. Reed, treasurer of the International Comparative Education Society, told a group of science teachers that school systems are increasingly being geared to turning out little nationalists.

"I don't know of any country that doesn't teach slanted history," said Mr. Reed who has toured schools in Europe, South America, Russia and Japan.

His comments came in answer to questions after he showed a Soviet-produced movie on Russian education.

In another conference session, teachers were urged to unshackle the imaginations of children from the chains of punctuation, grammar and spelling.

W. C. McMaster, assistant supervisor-head of curriculum for the Ontario Department of Education, told the elementary school conference of the Ontario Educational Association that children should be encouraged to write composition in "the white heat of creativity."

Primary purpose of teaching English is to help the pupil acquire the symbols with which to law him to explore his experiences and learn what life is all about, Mr. McMaster said.

The annual banquet of the Ontario English Catholic Teachers' Association was told by M. Gratian O'Leary that the western world's crisis is not a lack of scientists or experts, but a lack of men of moral greatness.

Mr. O'Leary, president of the Ottawa Journal, said Canadians need a "greater reverence for education."

Canadians should give their teachers the same veneration as they now give hockeyplayers, millionaires and movie stars, Mr. O'Leary said.

Donald Stevens, a construction company executive said in a panel discussion that government retraining programs cannot ease unemployment because of negotiating "some bargain as a slogan to maintain differentials in relative wages between trades.

Mr. Stevens, personnel manager of Pigott Construction Company Limited, was a member of a panel of businessmen and vocational studies teachers at the Ontario Industrial Education Council meeting.

Also on the panel discussing retraining were Deputy Minister Thomas Phelps of Cornwall, A. R. Lockington, of Peterborough, both vocational training teachers, and G. A. Lapsley, coordinator of apprenticeship training for Chrysler Corporation of Windsor.

Canadian historian Frank Underhill told the history section of the Ontario Educational Association that Canada has a new government in the 1960's but nations are being asked to swallow the same pill.

"The myth of progressive Conservative administration is governing the same as the myth of previous administrations, he said. The country is still run by the same old economic system rather than a truly democratic one.

Teachers of Indian pupils were warned not to anger band councils if they want college students to go into the white standards on the tribal community as a preparing at high schools in Ontario.

B. F. Davey, chief of the education branch of the Canadian Indian affairs branch said a number of teachers have been related to community reform. Teachers should try to understand the difference between criticize them, he said.

A University of Toronto professor told Canadians discrimination against people because of their colors fought police the night of March 26-27.

Rioting led to wholesale arrests on charges ranging from disorderly conduct to inciting to riot.

While Graham addressed the students, an unidentified youth told police he wanted a warrant for the minister's arrest.

Sgt. Fred Dietrich said the youth, who did not identify himself, said he wanted a warrant accusing Graham of "disorderly conduct by inciting a riot."

The officer sent the student to Howard R. Stock, clerk of the court, who advised him to see a lawyer and refused to issue the warrant.

Graham told the students on the beach: "I'm not going to preach to you. The older generation forgets sometimes that they were young people once, too."

The evangelist asked the students to "just believe in Jesus."

"Everyone is searching for a life to live, a song to sing, a slogan to repeat," he said. "I say what we are looking for is Christ. Now we find something quickly, we may not have a world to live in."

Don't Make Sudden Move When Near JFK in Ottawa

OTTAWA (C)—A good rule of - thumb for strangers who might find themselves in close proximity to President John F. Kennedy in the May 16-18 visit here is: Don't make any sudden move.

A Canadian reporter nearly got plugged by a United States Secret Service man during President Eisenhower's visit three years ago when he lurched himself quickly out of an alcove in a corridor of the arliament Buildings to ask the president a question.

The reporter's sudden move had a nearby secret service agent reaching a hand for his pistol under the jacket of his dapper suit. Though the pistol was not drawn, the reporter had a mild heart flutter when informed later of the result of his quick move.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker's office has already announced the dates of President Kennedy's visit but by Tuesday, the RCMP still had not officially notified and no official action on security measures had therefore been taken. The RCMP will work in close co-operation with the U.S. Secret Service that guards the president.

Before the visit, secret service agents will come to Ottawa to study carefully every inch of the ground on the route of the president.

Reporters in the parliamentary press gallery during Mr. Eisenhower's address to Parliament were slightly taken aback to find secret service agents standing right behind them.

The U.S. has lost more than one president by assassination.

Taxi Driver Takes a Chance, Jumps From Cab

TORONTO (CP) — A cab driver took a chance Tuesday night when he hurled himself from his taxi while being held up at gunpoint.

William Severnuk told police that after he pulled up a fare on a downtown street, the man produced a gun, held it to the driver's head and told him to keep driving.

Mr. Severnuk slowed at an intersection and jumped from the car when he saw a police-man.

Police arrested Timothy Peden, 20, of no address, and charged him with attempted armed robbery.

Billy Graham Says Students Are 'Rebels'

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Evangelist Billy Graham told 20,000 United States college students Tuesday they are "rebels without a cause" and said they are "searching for a flag to follow."

Graham addressed the students at a section of the beach. Thousands of college students fought police the night of March 26-27.

Graham said the students are "rebels" because they are searching for the ultimate.

Graham told the students on the beach: "I'm not going to preach to you. The older generation forgets sometimes that they were young people once, too."

The evangelist asked the students to "just believe in Jesus."

"Everyone is searching for a life to live, a song to sing, a slogan to repeat," he said. "I say what we are looking for is Christ. Now we find something quickly, we may not have a world to live in."

Some of Men Had Worked For Both Govts.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Opposition leader D. L. Campbell was cross - examined by Attorney-General Sterling Lyon Tuesday on his charge that bribery, threats and patronage were involved in the highway program of the Progressive - Conservative government.

Mr. Lyon recalled that evidence given to the legislature public accounts committee, before which Mr. Campbell testified, indicated that some of the men in question also had worked for Mr. Campbell's government when the Liberal - Progressives were in power.

In light of the facts brought before the committee, do you still make the statement that most of them were supporters of the government?" Mr. Lyon asked Mr. Campbell. "That's my information."

Mr. Lyon replied that the information is hearsay.

Mr. Campbell: "It's from reliable people in the area."

Mr. Lyon: "When they are hired by your government it's not patronage but when they are hired by this government they are?"

The public accounts committee is expected to submit a report on the case of the legislature before prorogation, possibly in the next few days.

Four-Man Team of Experts Will Try to Renegotiate Uranium Contract With UK

OTTAWA (C) — A four-man team of Canadian experts will meet officials of the British Atomic Energy Authority in London April 17, to renegotiate Britain's commitment to buy 20,000 tons of Canadian uranium to 1963-66.

The team, headed by W. M. Gilchrist, president of Eldorado Mining and Refining Limited, probably will have instructions from the Canadian government to accept a price below $8 a pound, the amount originally agreed on through an exchange of letters of intent.

However, the team is expected to insist that Britain fulfill its 1957 commitment to buy 12,000 tons.

Mr. officials of the Crown-owned uranium agency accompanying Mr. Gilchrist will include Mr. C. James of Toronto, a member of Eldorado's board of directors; E. C. Powell, secretary, and R. E. Barrett, director of ore procurement.

In London, the Canadian team will meet Sir Roger Makins, chairman of the British authority.

Before the team leaves, the British-Canadian uranium situation is expected to be discussed in Ottawa by Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Macmillan. Mr. Macmillan arrives in Ottawa Sunday and leaves April 12.

Speculation here is that the government probably will accept a price in the area of $5 a pound.

The London talks follow a bitter controversy between the government and opposition parties in the Canadian House of Commons over Britain's 1957 commitment. Mr. Diefenbaker said there is no firm or formal contract covering the 12,000 tons at a price of $8.5 pounds sterling (of $182,000,000. However, Mr. Gilchrist told the Commons agriculture committee that his company regards the British letters of intent as a firm contract.

Says Statement Represents Veiled Threat

BRESLAU (CP) — A statement by Attorney-General Rogers that the proposed financing of the New Party involves "an element of extortion" represents a veiled threat that should not go unchallenged, Ontario CCF Leader MacDonald said Tuesday night.

He told a public meeting that the plan of financing of the Progressive Conservative and Liberal parties "through contributions from business interests," it was strange the attorney-general had only recently become concerned about political contributions by unions.

The New Party, founded by the CCF and the Canadian Labor Congress, will be financed by fees from unions' locals. Should the majority of a local vote in favor of affiliation with the New Party, then each member will be charged $2 extra a month.

However, Mr. MacDonald said any union member who supported another political party could contract out of the obligation by signing a document that he would not have to contribute.

He said it is idle for Premier Frost and Liberal Leader Wintermeyer to contend they know of no contributions to their parties by business corporations. He suggested the PCs and Liberals know their sources of party funds, which they have refused to do because "the facts can't stand the light of day."

Daughter Says Father Beat Her Mother

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (AP) — One time a bubbly sandwich-spade Cooley was booked Tuesday on suspicion of murdering his estranged wife. A daughter told police she saw him beat her mother at their suburban desert home Monday night.

The nude and bruised body of Mrs. Lois Cooley, 35, former band singer, was found wrapped in a sheet when an ambulance driver answered Cooley's summons about midnight Monday.

She died of internal death to either a blow-ruptured heart artery or a ruptured thyroid gland. The latter, a surgeon said, could have resulted from choking.

Cooley, whose western band was a top television attraction 10 years ago, filed suit for divorce last March 22, charging his wife of 13 years with incompatibility.

$460,000 Said Involved in Conspiracy Case

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — A breakdown of $460,000 involved in conspiracy charges against two Toronto businessmen has been presented at the preliminary hearing of the accused.

Special Crown prosecutor A. S. Bewar gave the list to the court Tuesday, Hubert Cox, 45, and Hugh Paton, 40, are charged with conspiring to steal $460000 in money and securities from Brandon Packers Limited between Jan. 1, 1958, and Nov. 30 1960, Cox is president and Paton vice - president of the meat-packing plant.

The amount includes $200,000 paid by Brandon Packers to the Imperial Bank of Canada, the proceeds of which are alleged to have paid for 200 shares of preferred stock of Frosts Limited, a company controlled by the Toronto men.

The money and stock changed hands in 1958 when J. C. Donkin sold controlling interest in Brandon Packers to Cox and Paton.

MANAGEMENT FEE

Also included in the total is $208,150 for management fees paid to Canada Packers Limited, Great West Saddlery Company Limited, Brandon Packers' parent firm which Cox and Paton also control.

The Crown included a $4,000 commission on the purchase by Brandon Packers of Weyburn Packers (Fort William) shares, and $4,213 paid by Brandon Packers to the personal holding companies of Cox and Paton for expenses.

A total of $38,500 is alleged to have been paid by the Brandon plant to Harry Lee and Joseph Champagne of Canada Packers Limited and Great Northern Securities Limited, all controlled by Cox and Paton.

Mr. Bewar said the rest is made up of rents paid by Brandon Packers on the Toronto offices of Paton Corporation Limited and Leomar Investments Limited, controlled, also by owned by the accused.

Identical Bids By Eight Firms Given PUC

KINGSTON (CP)—An investigation into alleged price-fixing in the construction industry will soon be started according to statements from three federal provincial and municipal officials.

Allmark, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Kingston.

Tuesday night's Public Utilities Commission meeting heard letters from CCF House Leader Hazen Argue, New Party member Walter Pitman and Liberal Leader Lester Pearson.

All three were received as a result of a move by PUC Chairman Fred Fry last month to place the 17 identical bids problem before opposition members after criticism of the action had been levelled at the department of justice.

Still another group of identical bids is to be sent to the department. Commissioners Tuesday night were confronted with eight firms submitting identical bids for a supply of cable.

Parent-Teacher Assoc. Can Play Important Role in French-Language Education

WINDSOR (CP) — The Polo parent-teacher associations can play in French-language education in Ontario underwent a searching examination Tuesday.

Rev. Richard Mignault of Ottawa told La Federation des Associations de Parents et d'Educateurs de Langue Francaise the associations exist "above all to establish a link between the home and the school."

They permit parents and teachers to meet on an equal basis, to get to know each other's aims, to size each other up.

The federation opened its 10th annual convention Tuesday, part of the annual Ontario French Week sponsored by l'Association Canadienne-Francaise d'Education d'Ontario.

Eight French - Canadian social, cultural and education societies hold conventions during the week.

Father Mignault said any other activities of the parent-teacher associations — such as organization of recreation activities for school children—are strictly secondary objectives.

"The associations exist to . . . give back a soul to our education system, a system . . . that has long held parents and teachers as strangers to each other," he said.

Other questions raised and examined—no firm answers were held—were whether parent-teacher associations should take part in campaigns against obscene literature, should oversee children's athletic programs, or otherwise work at activities not directly related to the schools.

Emile Dubois of Ottawa was re-elected federation president for his second term.

Roland Lavigne, Rockland, Ont., Damase Belzile, Ottawa, and Brother F. F. Cyprien, of the brothers of the Christian Schools Teaching Community, were elected vice - presidents. Leo Groulx of Eastview was re-elected treasurer and administrator.

The federation groups 208 associations with a membership of 5,000.

Jean Mongenais, president of the Windsor branch of L'Association de la Jeunesse Franco-Ontarienne, urged parents to assume their full responsibility for education of their children in the French culture.

Speaking at the opening of the association's regional conference Tuesday night, he said it up to parents to teach their children to pray in French, to read their children stories in French, to teach them to speak French properly, and to place them in bilingual schools.

Only persistence could prevent children from losing their French orientation.

Rev. Emile Langlois, dean of the Roman Catholic French-speaking clergy in Essex County, said the home must be entirely French.

Canada Warns Wrangling in UN Upsets Peace Efforts in Congo

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Canada has warned that cold-war wrangling in the United Nations has thrown a monkey wrench into peace efforts in The Congo.

Walter R. Nesbitt, vice-chairman of the Canadian delegation, charged that the Soviet general Assembly Tuesday that only lip service is paid to the policy of "hands off Congolese affairs."

This is all countries protest they want the Congolese to find their own political solution, such an idea of what the solution should be and they foster it in international affairs.

"This is a subtle kind of intervention in the internal affairs of The Congo," he said, "and a sort of interference which unfortunately the United Nations operation can prevent.

"Yet, oddly enough, for this very reason, it is necessary that the United Nations could not—and I say this emphatically—impose a political solution on The Congo, for there could never be a permanent one if we tried to impose."

The Soviet bloc and some Afro-Asian countries recognize the Stanleyville regime of Antoine Gizenga as the only government while Western countries generally back the Leopoldville political hierarchy headed by President Joseph Kasavubu.

But it is idle for either side to hope to have every issue go their way, said Nesbitt, parliamentary assistant to External Affairs Minister Howard C. Green.

"No proposed solution for The Congo, no solution in its internal political conflict, or even in the absolute majority of support here, will be acceptable to one or the divisions here to a considerable extent inhibit the reaching of a solution there.

"Must we perpetuate, in that unhappy country, all the differences which plague us here?"

Nesbitt, ranging over the political, military, social, economic and technical problems of the UN operation in The Congo, his speech, devoted one section to a protest against the mudsling and name - calling of the non-combatant troops by the Soviet delegation they were trying to help.

He demanded the "most unequivocal stand" by the UN and all member countries against such activities.

The Canadian reiterated support for the "dedicated" service of Dr. Ralph Bunche and Dag Hammarskjold and his Ghana colleague Alex Quaison-Sackey against attacks by the Soviet bloc.

FINE DEMONSTRATORS

LONDON (Reuters) — Local courts Tuesday imposed fines on 35 of 39 persons arrested here in anti - nuclear weapon demonstrations Monday. All told, 34 men and women paid fines ranging from 10 shillings ($1.40) to 65 ($14). One man elected to go to jail for two weeks rather than pay. The other four were remanded on bail for a week.

Must Bring Out Boats After Each Trip

TORONTO (CP)—The Ontario government cracked down Tuesday on a favorite labor-saving device of angling outfitters—dragging boats into remote provincial park lakes in the spring and leaving them throughout the summer to avoid repeated portages.

Effective May 1 it will be illegal to leave a boat unattended in any provincial park except Algonquin Park. The regulations will be enforced in Algonquin Park next year.

The ruling will not apply to land occupied under a lease, agreement or campsite permit issued by the department of lands and forests or to a camping area.

A memorandum explaining the new law issued by J. S. Yoerger, assistant deputy minister of lands and forests, said operators of commercial operators, particularly in Algonquin Park, have been leaving unmanned boats for fishing parties.

Algonquin Park is being exempted this year to give commercial operators more time to adjust their rates and hire more guides.

The $2 annual provincial parks vehicle fee has been raised to $3 and the $1.50 cents a day set for persons who do not want an annual permit, will remain. Chief of the department of lands and forests parks branch, said Saturday and Sunday campsite fee is unchanged but the $3-a-week camping rate is revoked.

10 Canadian University Students Will Participate In Poor Man's Colombo Plan

By DON SANRIGHT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA (CP) — A sort of poor man's Colombo plan is being developed in Canada under private auspices.

By mid-summer it will be ready to send 10 young and idealistic university graduates to projects in India and Ceylon under the name of "low-cost technical assistance."

Low cost is right. The volunteer graduates have been offered fare to Ceylon, for example, in exchange for native food, modest living quarters and a salary of 25 rupees a week—about $5.20.

So far Ceylon has guaranteed three jobs and India seven for such Canadian volunteers. Most of them involve teaching such subjects as agriculture, English and education. Graduate engineers, doctors and nurses also are being sought after.

The first 10 volunteers now have been chosen from among the graduates of Arts in University of Toronto where they have been attending extra lectures on the history, language, culture, economy and geography of the countries involved.

APPEAL FOR MONEY

Private sponsors are being sought to meet the estimated cost of $2,000 a year for each student volunteer. The amount includes return fare, home leave, life insurance, an extra living allowance of less than $2 a day, $500 contingency fund and a re-establishment grant of $500 for the students when they return.

The overall cost for each volunteer is about one-fifth the cost of maintaining a regular Colombo plan expert and his family abroad for a year, the organizers say.

A small-scale version of the United States "peace corps" now involving 4,500 volunteers, the Canadian operation is named "Canadian Overseas Volunteers."

It is centred at the University of Toronto where it has the support of President Claude Bissell, but also includes Laval University in Quebec City. A similar program is being considered at the University of British Columbia.

Heading the staffing organization is Fred Stinson, Progressive Conservative MP for York-Centre. He is the newsprint and chief fund-raiser for the group, Vice-president is Very Rev. George Forrest Levesque, vice-chairman of the Canada Council.

LIVE AS HOSTS DO

Ontario secretary and organizer of the plan is Ken Spicer, a 27-year-old history graduate of Toronto.

An advisory committee includes Dr. Nathan Keyfitz, former United Nations and Colombo plan technical expert; Nik Cavell, 1951-58 administrator of Canada's Colombo plan program and Canadian high commissioner to Ceylon in 1956-60; and Prof. Yves Martin, professor of social sciences at Laval.

A brief written by Mr. Spicer explains:

"The scheme involves sending recent Canadian university graduates of high intellectual and moral calibre to serve as volunteer technicians in less developed regions of the world."

They will work under the administrative control of the host countries "and will be expected to live as closely as possible to the living standards practised by their colleagues in these countries."

Mr. Stinson says the program has met with somewhat cautious reception in India and Ceylon.

MAKE AID PERSONAL

The organization's brief says the volunteers will provide "psychological encouragement" to Asians struggling for higher living standards and provide much-needed technical skills. Another advantage to Canada is the satisfaction of making a contribution to Asian-Canadian friendship "on an appallingly neglected personal level," and the accumulation in Canada of persons returning with intimate knowledge of Asian problems and people.

"This immediate concrete benefit to Canada will be liberally beyond price in the fields of government, diplomacy, education, journalism and culture, as well as in the creation of an informed and internationally-minded public opinion."

However, the idealism involved and the faster schedule its results of the program make it tough for Mr. Stinson to sell the program to potential contributors.

So far he has raised $8,500. The donors include an oil company, a university student group, a church and a newspaper. But he still has to get another $13,400 to meet the scheduled Aug. 1 departure of the first 10 volunteers.

Unemployment Has Struck Every Canadian Province But Its Impact Differs

By JOHN LaMANC
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Unemployment has hit every province of Canada differently.

Steel sales have dropped in Cape Breton. The fruit market has cut into jobs in British Columbia's Okanagan Valley. Newfoundland's Bell Island is having trouble selling iron ore. The automobile industry in Ontario has had to lay off workers.

With latest figures for mid-February showing 719,000—11.3 per cent of Canada's labor force —out of work, every labor market in Canada except Kitimat, B.C., has a surplus of workers. But some areas, notably in the Atlantic provinces, are far harder hit than others.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press brought these reports for each of the 10 provinces:

NEWFOUNDLAND

Latest figures place unemployment in Newfoundland at 32,000, a whopping 28.4 per cent of the labor force. Biggest factor appears to be that most Newfoundlanders are seasonal workers such as fishermen and loggers.

Others are a shutdown of the Pepperell U.S. Air Force base near St. John's and a 1959 layoff of 600 iron ore miners on Bell Island for lack of markets. The Bell Island rate of unemployment now is about 50 per cent.

Premier Smallwood says his government in the last 12 years has created 32,400 new jobs and blames the federal government for 90 per cent of the unemployment in the country. He says his government has "held the line" on unemployment in the province, pointing to 34,000 men employed in 1957 against the current figures.

To provide new jobs for a rising population, the government is negotiating for establishment of the province's third paper mill, which could create between 7,000 and 8,000 jobs. It is on a program of building longline fishing vessels to improve the fishery.

Despite the unemployment picture, Bowaters, Newfoundland's biggest retail store, boosts wages and sees no slump.

NOVA SCOTIA

The Sydney area is suffering big layoffs hit, with 900 men let off in Dosco's steel plant.

Supermarket operator Zeni Wynchenk describes unemployment in the city as "very serious" and says it is having a serious effect on business.

"All merchants are in the same boat. My business is about 20 per cent below the average for this time of year."

He said customers who ran up bills during the Christmas season usually have them paid up by the end of March. "This year they'll be paying up until mid-summer."

In the neighboring distressed coal town of Glace Bay, unemployment is described as not more widespread than usual. But the colliery area is due for layoffs.

About 800 miners are due to be displaced when the 100-year-old Caledonia pit—oldest in Canada—closes May 31. Mines in Florence and New Waterford are to close July 1 and Aug. 31, respectively. The three employ about 2,800 men.

The Nova Scotia government is trying to relocate the miners and has appointed a man to work on this.

The picture is brighter in Halifax, where waterfront activity was fairly steady and construction was high and constant. About 800 more are employed than at the same time in 1960.

Labor Minister Stephen Pyke says the provincial government has failed to encourage winter works where possible to offset seasonal layoffs. He says the government now is conducting a survey on how the problem might be better handled.

PRINCE EDWARD ISLAND

Out of a small labor force of about 54,000 on the island, 3,400 —or better than one quarter— have been drawing unemployment insurance benefits. Most of these are affected by seasonal unemployment, about 1,500 of them fishermen. The number of claimants, however, is about eight per cent below last year. That was about an average year for the island, which has largely an agricultural economy.

Labor Minister Henry Wedge expressed satisfaction with the employment situation, noting that claims for social welfare are running below other years.

A check with Charlottetown department stores and Supermarkets indicated healthy business. Sales were keeping up to the levels of other years and there were no credit problems.

NEW BRUNSWICK

A high unemployment area is in the north of New Brunswick where heavy snow contributed to keep woodcutters out of the woods. There are about 5,300 woodsmen out of work in the province.

In Saint John, unemployment is around the national average. As oil refining plant, drydock, pulp mill and port work contributed jobs.

In Fredericton, construction work and proximity to the army's big Camp Gagetown helped.

The manager of a large department store in Saint John said:

"Business has been off the first three months, but I don't attribute any part of it to unemployment. There are more employed here now than a year ago. It's just a lull in shopping, due perhaps to poor weather."

Labor Minister E. J. Weber: "The seasonal factor is the main one in our unemployment." He said New Brunswick's participation in the federal-provincial winter works plan for creating jobs is proportionately the highest in Canada.

Premier Louis Robichaud said in the legislature recently that unemployment continues a major problem "but, like our sister provinces, we are unable to substantially change economic conditions that are national in character."

QUEBEC

The province has about 260,000 unemployed out of a working force of 1,796,000. There are about 90,000 unemployed out of Greater Montreal's working force of some 900,000. A large part of the current Montreal unemployment appears to be attributed to a marked slowdown in house and apartment construction since 1959.

The Quebec Federation of Labor says the worst pockets of unemployment are in Quebec City, because of lack of diversified industry, and in Shawinigan and Arvida, hit by slumps in key industries. Shawinigan and Arvida are centres of chemical and aluminum industries.

In Montreal, department and supermarket store executives say business is holding up.

An indication, however, that food shoppers may be getting bargain-conscious is that Steinberg's chain, Miracle Marts (Steinberg) and Towers Mart, have announced plans to build grocery discount stores. Miracle plans nine—in Montreal, Toronto, Quebec City, Ottawa and Hamilton. Towers plans eight, all in Montreal.

In Montreal, retailers report sales of building goods and hardware down sharply. Most neighborhood stores are giving credit only to known customers.

Roger Robitaille, manager of the Quebec Credit Grocers Cooperative, grouping some 200 small grocery stores, said:

"Many grocers in Quebec complain of the credit they must accord to their clientele. Several are thinking of taking steps to cut down the growing volume of credit which today is attributable to the number of the unemployed."

ONTARIO

Last official report has 302,000 out of work in a labor force of around 2,100,000. A half-dozen towns are in trouble. The automobile-making cities of Windsor and Oshawa have been affected by Chrysler's textile industry has been in difficulty, partly from Japanese competition.

Hamilton's steel industry laid off 500 men in late February, though most will be back to work by about mid-April.

Metropolitan Toronto has between 65,000 and 68,000 unemployed among a population of 1,500,000. Part of the reason for this is the decline of a construction boom which a few years ago attracted workers, many of them immigrants. There now is a slack time in the construction industry, and many of the unskilled workers have been dumped on the labor market.

At Elliot Lake, the bottom fell out of the uranium market and hundreds are looking for jobs. The provincial government is about to try to make work by building a reform institution. Meanwhile, many home-owners have packed up and left town.

In Toronto, department store sales are holding up. One officer of a store said sales are about the same as last year.

MANITOBA

Mort Wilson, public relations officer of the Unemployment Insurance Commission in Winnipeg, says:

"Unemployment does not appear to be as acute in the Prairie region as in some other Canadian areas. Certain phases of pipeline construction have continued throughout the winter."

Henry Moore, secretary-manager of the Food Distributors of Western Canada: "I don't think unemployment has meant any difference in the granting of credit for the average small grocer."

Tom Miller, public relations head for Eaton in Winnipeg: "Business has been slow for the last two months but it's picking up. There are too many factors involved to say that unemployment has been responsible."

Labor Minister J. B. Carroll says that "Manitoba, with her broad-based economy, was not as seriously affected by unemployment as many other Canadian areas." Latest figures show unemployment in the province to be 37,300, compared with 35,-367 last year.

"The interesting point," the minister added, "is that since the beginning of 1961 the rate of increase (of Manitoba) unemployment has been less than one-half of one per cent above the rate of increase for the same period last year.

SASKATCHEWAN

The provincial government delayed $3,500,000 worth of public works until the winter months to provide employment. Under the winter works plan, up to March 6, there were 710 projects started, worth $7,800,000, providing work for an estimated 10,232 men and 326,900 man-hours.

Government officials said the number of projects is the third-highest in Canada and the number of man-hours worked is fifth.

Deputy labor minister H. S. Eikin of the province's CCF government has this to say about the "do it the easy way" making campaign of the federal government:

"The only time when such a campaign can be effective is when there is full employment for part of the year."

ALBERTA

Unemployment appears to be lower than the national average, something under 10 per cent. The Calgary area appears hardest hit, with some 13 per cent.

The Edmonton area has around 21,000 jobless; out of a work force of 215,000.

Big retail supermarkets in both main areas report a slight but steady increase in dollar volume of sales over last year.

Most spokesmen felt unemployment was keeping a rein on increases. However, a grocery firms mentioned a slight rise in credit buying from corner store operators.

The department of labor's employment liaison officer, J. Ferguson, said that employment is high all right but not too different from other years.

He felt some areas had suffered more in the 1958 recession. He was optimistic about the coming year, with expectations of heavy construction work and the general benefit of oil and gas pipeline contracts.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

The aluminum town of Kitimat on the northwest coast has been one of the few communities in the country where there is more work than labor available—in February it was the only one. A shutdown for plant repairs was coming up, but no one appeared worried. Steelworkers union staff representative Monty Alton said the union was negotiating a charter flight abroad for 135 employees during the shutdown period.

Kitimat is not typical of B.C. The Vancouver, Okanagan and Prince Rupert districts are having about as much trouble as elsewhere in the country. In Vancouver, construction has strangely flopped.

In the lush fruit-growing Okanagan Valley, manager A. G. Thomas of the local National Employment Service office says the reason for more people on unemployment insurance this winter is that there was a good fruit season last year.

"A good summer means a bad winter—a unique situation."

The good 1960 season, he figured, allowed more persons to qualify for benefits.

Meanwhile, Rupert has had a tough cold-weather fishing season. The fisheries department extended the herring season but some companies stopped operations in early February because of a poor catch.

The Social Credit government is attacking the problem by, among other things: Encouraging public works by guaranteeing payment of borrowings by local municipalities for such works; encouraging capital investment generally; trying to raise the standards of education and technical know - how in youngsters.

The federal - provincial-municipal winter works program has given employment to 7,474 men.

STONE AGE SITE

Excavations at Susa in Iran indicate that man was accomplished as early as the Stone Age.

JOBLESS MARCH — More than 1,500 men and women parade in front of the British Columbia legislative building in Victoria to protest high unemployment in the province. The march was organized in March by the B.C. Federation of Labor and the B.C. Council of Unemployed. (CP Photo).

EAT MISSION MEALS — Two youngsters eat soup at a free lunch arranged by the Scott Mission in Saskatoon. The mission, operated primarily to feed jobless men, opened its doors to children in March with free noon-hour lunches after some sources said children of unemployed people were underfed and hungry.' The free meals have continued but the total number of children lining up at the mission has dwindled from the original 93. (CP Photo).

STEEP INCREASE — Unemployment in Canada has reached its highest level since the Second World War.

Graphs show peak jobless total reached in each year since 1953—when the bureau of statistics started recording monthly unemployment figures—and the percentage of the labor force represented by the peaks.

Highest unemployment total in 1953 was 237,000 or 4.5 per cent of the labor force. Latest total for 1961 is 719,000 or 11.3 per cent of the labor force. (CP Newsmap).

Canadian Priest Believes Racial Explosion Looming In Africa Before 1965

By DAVID ROWNTREE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

NEW YORK (CP) — South Africa has three or four years before a racial explosion occurs, in the view of a Canadian priest who has worked in Africa for 21 years.

When the blowup comes, the Africans will be shown no mercy, says Very Rev. Romeo Guilbeault, a native of Matawa, Ont.

Father Guilbeault is principal of the University College of Pius XII at Roma, Basutoland, about 250 miles south of Johannesburg. Basutoland is a mountainous British protectorate entirely within the Union of South Africa.

"It is a terrible way to put it, but that is what is going to happen. And the Africans don't care what the consequences will be.

"The African liberation movement is very active. After the shootings at Sharpeville in South Africa last year, several hundred Africans fled to Basutoland and the other protectorates — Swaziland and Bechuanaland.

"They are collecting guns and ammunition and money.

"In the cities of South Africa, maids and boys employed at white homes have been told to set fire to the houses when the time comes.

"Can you imagine what it will be like if every one of these lights a fire at the same time? They don't even care if they get burned themselves."

PREDICTS STRIFE

Very Rev. Romeo Guilbeault, a native of Matawa, Ont., who has taught in Africa for 21 years, predicts a racial explosion in South Africa in three or four years. He is principal of the University College of Pius XII, started in 1945 by Oblates, and two other Canadian Oblate priests in the British protectorate of Basutoland. (CP Photo).

FARM UPRISING

"On the farms, it will be even easier. The average Afrikaner farm is large and the houses are widely separated. Each family has 30 or 40 blacks as farmhands."

Father Guilbeault recalled sadly how on a previous trip to North America in 1956 he tried to warn people that a showdown was coming in the Belgian Congo.

No one took him seriously and more than once he was told: "The Belgians know what they are doing."

When — for Father Guilbeault the word is not "if" — black turns on white, there will be only a few Africans capable of keeping a modern society running.

The West still has a chance to avoid a total breakdown but there is little time, the teacher-priest told an interviewer.

He said the college he and two other Canadian Oblate priests started at Roma in 1945 is the sort of help the West can best provide.

"Higher education is the golden key to the African but much more needs to be done."

Father Guilbeault is in North America hoping to get financial support from governments and institutions for a $3,000,000 expansion program for the University College of Pius XII. There were six students in 1945 and 250 now. The future goal is 800.

SCHOOL INTEGRATED

Despite its name, the college is not a Roman Catholic institution. Only half the students are Catholic and only six of the 42 staff members are priests. There is no religious instruction.

The school is not segregated and this has frequently brought it into conflict with the South African government, which has considerable control over Basutoland's affairs.

If the West is going to be Africa's guide and helper rather than Russia and Communist China, it will have to give more proof of good intentions, Father Guilbeault said.

While upgrading South Africa's withdrawal from the Commonwealth, he said Africans will have their worst suspicions confirmed if trade advantages are left unchanged.

To illustrate the feeling of educated Negroes, he showed a letter from one of his graduates.

"The African leaders have made it very clear, except in Guines, perhaps," the young man wrote, "that they will accept no aid with strings.

"But I am afraid, father, that a stomach is a stomach and politics another thing. Even if you are a thief or a murderer, if you once helped me in a direct need, it is human that I don't fail you in your direct need too.

"What I fear is that while the West is gradually changing its attitude towards the evils of colonialism and imperialism, they nevertheless speak with their tongues deep in their cheeks when it comes to fighting a fellow NATO power for practising these evils. Russia is aware of that."

UNDER VOODOO SPELL

NEWCASTLE, England (AP) — A young African dancer who escaped as he was killed in Britain is convinced he is under a voodoo spell and will be sent home as soon as he is able to travel, Doctors say his trouble is air sickness complicated by the change of climate. But Faye Dieng, 26-year-old member of the Senegal dance company, believes his parents put a spell on him because he declined their order not to enter a plane. The company arrived by plane Monday from the new West African nation for a 13-week season in Britain.

White's District

WHITE'S DISTRICT — The Rev. T. F. Redmond was in charge of the Easter service at White's Church on Sunday morning. The junior choir rendered, "On Easter Day, On Easter Day" with Mrs. W. DESERONTO

Fire Dept. Kept Busy Fighting Five Fires

DESERONTO — Last week was a busy one for the local fire department with a total of five alarms in three days. On Wednesday morning shortly after 10 o'clock the alarm sounded for a fire at the home of Bruce McGregor on College Street. The fire originated in the back shed of the house and had gained considerable headway before it was noticed. Pupils at the high school across the road saw the smoke pouring from the house and ran across to tell Mr. and Mrs. McGegor and at the same time one of the teachers called the fire department. Prompt arrival of firemen prevented the fire from getting into the main part of the house but smoke damage was quite severe and everything in the shed was gutted. The two towpher lines from the pumper were used to bring the fire under control. Damage was estimated at $1,200.

GRASS FIRES

On Thursday afternoon a grass fire on the corner of College and Thomas Street about four o'clock gave some of the neighbors concern and the firemen were called to extinguish the fire.

On Friday, shortly before noon, the department was called to the farm of Abel Gerrow north of the town. A neighbor was burning grass on the farm and swept the fire out of control and through to the property of Mr. Green. Flames reached the high sweept across the grain field and for a time threatened the home and barn. The firemen set out a backfire to contain the blaze to the farm of Mr. Gerrow and prevent any damage to buildings and the adjoining woods.

About three o'clock they were called to the farm of R. Kimmett on the boundary road where another grass fire was in progress. This was easily controlled.

Shortly before nine in the evening they were called to the property of H. Thompson on the highway east of town where a building was on fire. The rural line was burning fiercely at the top. This was caused by the burning of the marsh in the adjacent and was extinguished in a few moments.

Valiant is running around with other men's wives all over town. Why not yours?

What makes Valiant such a matinee idol? Good looks, of course. A case of love at first sight for most women. Dashing figure. Courtly manner. Caters to a lady's slightest whim, whether skipping through tangled traffic or scooting into a size 7 parking space. On the highway, Valiant's the strong, silent type—as you'd expect of its initial body.

Comfortable, too. Valiant's Torsion-Aire suspension carpets the roughest roads around. And what a beautiful bargain is this King of the Compacts. Valiant's priced with the lowest of the compacts. And its inclined engine sips fuel so sparingly, it often seems Valiant is running on its good looks alone. Why not introduce your bride to Valiant? Take heed, however; stern measures may be necessary to keep her mind on household chores when Valiant whispers: Let's go driving...

Chihawks Crumple Habs' Grip On Cup

THIRD GOAL FOR HAWKS IN CUP SEMI-FINALS — Eric Nesterenko (15) leaps up after driving puck (far right) deep into net for third goal of game as Chicago Black Hawks shut out Montreal Canadiens 3 to 0, in deciding semi-finals series, but after that Chicago never looked back.

Balfour and Big Elmer (Moose) Vasko replaced Hay and Evans to complete the job.

MADE BIG SAVE

Hall, playing his 439th consecutive NHL game, made his big save late in the first period when Don Marshall got a breakaway while Montreal was shorthanded.

He raced in but hurried his shot and Hall got in front of it. Hall, who handled 24 shots, said his teammates played the best game he has ever seen.

"They gave me terrific support all the way," he said in the dressing room after the game while still surrounded by celebrating Hawks.

"I think this shutout was tougher mentally than that 3-0 job in Montreal last Saturday. At the start, I wasn't loose. I even had to fight a couple of shots. But after we scored the first goal in the second period a lot of the pressure seemed to leave. The first goal means a lot."

Hay got that goal at 1:15 of the second period when he cut out quickly from the end boards and fired an angle shot that whistled past Plante.

HAS PENALIZED

Hall's goal came on a screened shot at 5:49 while Montreal defenceman Albert (Junior) Langlois was sitting out a penalty.

Nesterenko completed the scoring at 15:36 when he swooped on a loose puck after a shot by Hall had bounced off Canadien defenceman Doug Harvey and blasted it into the net before Plante could move.

Pilous—whose job was rumored to have been in danger in mid - season when the Hawks were wallowing in a slump—had predicted the series outcome exactly, though few people took him seriously then.

The Hawks had looked bad in losing the opening game 6-2, but came back to take the second 4-3. The third game, won by Chicago 2-1, was a crucial one that went into three overtime periods before Murray Balfour triggered the winning goal.

Canadiens completely outclassed the Hawks for a 5-2 win in the fourth game to tie the series. Hawks will meet Detroit in final series. Montreal goalie is Jacques Plante (1). Other Canadiens are (left to right): Guy Gendron, Al Langlois and Doug Harvey. (AP Wirephoto).

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By GEO. H. CARVER, Sports Editor

Mighty hydroplaner and powerful outboards may quest world honors over an abbreviated course on Prince Edward County's internationally-famous Long Reach raceway this summer.

The Prince Edward Yacht Club Racing Committee, with the sanction of the Canadian Boating Federation, is seeking to reduce the Harmsworth Trophy course from five to three miles.

A recommendation to this effect has been forwarded to the Harmsworth Deed of Gift Committee, London, England. This body has the final word, or can place the matter to a vote before representatives of Great Britain, Canada and the United States.

The United International Motorboating Association has agreed to three-mile competition for the John Ward Trophy, symbolic of world outboard supremacy.

"A three-mile-course for all events would greatly facilitate matters for the committee," Yacht Club Commodore Jay Sprague said this morning. "We believe it will be better for the boats, the public and around-the-course property owners."

If approved the course will be laid out on the same part of Long Reach as that of the five-mile raceway last year.

Last year in her first defence of the Harmsworth, "Miss Supertest III" raced to decisive victory over American challengers over a five mile course. In 1959 the Canadian champion wrested the trophy from American holders on a three-mile course on the Detroit River.

Jim Thompson of London, Ont., owner of "Supertest," is said to be agreeable to the three-mile course for the Harmsworth races. However, the American challenger may hold a different view.

Doubt is expressed in some quarters that some outboard officials will take kindly to the three-mile course. They may object to the long mile straightaways and their effect on delicate engine mechanisms.

The reduction of the course length to three miles might knock alleged American strategy into a cocked hat. At the pits last August, veteran hydroplaners from both sides of the border said that American hopes of victory lay mainly in "Supertest's" power plant giving up the ghost.

Supporting their theory in the second heat was the fact Bob Hayward slowed his champion down to a figurative walk after one Nitrogen boat had dropped out, and the other had no chance of catching him.

"Gale V" and her wizard driver Wild Bill Cantrell will again challenge "Supertest" for the Harmsworth. The American boat has been given a brand new Packard power plant, capable, it is reported, of developing up to 3,000 horse power.

The new Packard engine has been given and, is undergoing special tests in an effort to bring it to the point of perfection where it can be gunned full throttle for long periods of time with a minimum chance of mechanical accident.

I am assuming this is being done to force "Supertest" to go all-out on the long straightaways which if done consistently would test her power plant to the utmost, if not uncover a weak spot.

But a three-mile course would minimize this possibility for both boats. It is no wonder then that Jim Thompson favors the shorter course and that an American request for the longer route might be in the making.

Speaking of "Gale V" and her reported 3,000 horse power, the Rolls-Royce power plant which thrust "Supertest" to championship victory on two occasions, has undergone a complete overhaul in the parent firm's factory in Scotland.

Scottish engineers who did the job were asked what horse power the engine could develop, say 3,000?

They smiled. "We cannot guarantee it will develop 3,000 horse power, but we will say this!

"She is ready."

Upwards of one hundred entry forms and letters of invitation have gone to all parts of the world to potential participants in the John Ward Trophy world championship events. Some 40 are expected to file entry.

Canadian Class Designs, 48, 150, 266 and 280 cubic inch hydroplanes will take part in the regatta on Sunday, August 6. There will be two heats in each class and these are timed to be run off before the Prince Edward Gold Cup events slated to start at 4.30 p.m.

Commodore Sprague said today a new restriction has barred all classes but the 266 and 280 cubic inch hydroplanes from participation in the Gold Cup heats. Four entries from the 266 class will race while any 258 class craft can participate.

The 266 hydroplanes are stock engines with a class record of between 90 and 100 m.p.h. The 266 boats have modified alcohol-burning engines. Their record is around 130 miles per hour.

Hull Leads Star Parade

CHICAGO (CP) — Chicago's giant-killing Black Hawks demolished the Stanley Cup playoff sway of Montreal Tuesday night by crushing the Canadiens 3-0 and taking the best-of-seven cup semi - final four games to two.

The triumphant Hawks now meet Detroit Red Wings, upset victors over Toronto Maple Leafs in the other semi-final, in the opening game of the final here Thursday.

It is the first time in 17 years the Hawks, who finished third on season play in the National Hockey League have been so close to the Stanley Cup and they got there brilliantly.

Bill Hay, Bobby Hull and Eric Nesterenko took care of the scoring.

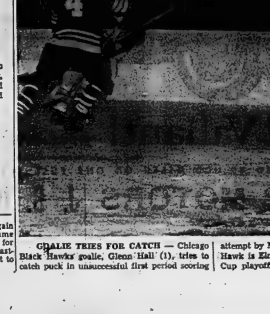
The Hawks, from goalie Glenn Hall out, played as though they had never heard of the Montreal might that had kept the Canadiens in the finals for the last 10 years, given them five consecutive Stanley Cups and four out of the last five league championships.

SCORE TWO IN ROW

The Hawks outskated, outchecked and simply overwhelmed Montreal all night and racked up their second consecutive shutout—a humiliation veteran hockey followers believed Canadiens have never before suffered in cup play.

The fans crowded into Chicago Stadium gave their heros a three-minute ovation as the final buzzer went. During the last minute of play, a roar of applause started to build up in exuberant approval of the Hawks play.

They flooded the ice with hats, rubbers, programs and a multitude of other articles—including a skull one whimsical fan tossed near Montreal goalie Jacques Plante.



The dejected Canadiens started to move slowly off the ice after the finish, but then turned and came back to congratulate the winners.

GEOFFRION TROUBLED

Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion, the 50-goal star who injured his knee in the third game, returned to the lineup by cutting a cast off his leg but was used sparingly when it became obvious he was skating with difficulty.

The pattern of the game was set quickly and confirmed midway through the first period. Chicago had the best scoring chances through the first few minutes, but during the 12th minute lost two men through penalties.

Canadiens sent out their vaunted power play, with Geoffrion and his booming slant on the point, but Hay, Nesterenko and Jack Evans checked Montreal to a standstill. Then Earl

Score Five Goals in 13 Minutes

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Five goals within 13 minutes during the final period carried Portland Buckaroos to a 7-4 victory over Spokane Comets Tuesday night as the 1961 Western Hockey League playoffs got under way.

Meanwhile, Vancouver Canucks, defending WHL champions came from behind with two second-period goals to beat Victoria Cougars 2-1.

The victories gave Vancouver and Portland 1-0 leads in their respective best-of-five quarter-final series.

The Bucks' outburst, sparked by an unassisted goal by centre Art Jones came before more than 2,900 fans at Portland.

But in Vancouver, only 1,100 fans saw the Canucks down the Cougars.

The Bucks' big sniper was Tom Thurlby, who set up Portland's first goal by veteran Gord Haworth in the second period and added two himself within 34 seconds late in the third period.

Other Portland snipers were Bill Davidson, Larry Leach and Arlo Goodwin. Dick Lamoureux scored both Spokane goals.

The Canucks were caught off balance by Cougars' centre Ford, who scored to give Victoria a 1-0 first-period lead before defencemen Brent Macnab and forward Jim Powers counted in the second.

Egan to Rangers?

Phil Watson To Coach Bruins?

CHICAGO (CP)—Rumors are current that Phil Watson will become coach of Boston Bruins next season and Pat Egan will take over New York Rangers.

No confirmation could be obtained from the many hockey sources here for Tuesday night's Stanley Cup game between Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks.

Watson, bounced by Rangers, handled Boston's Providence club in the American Hockey League this season. Egan, also a former NHL player, piloted Springfield of the AHL—now a Rangers farm — to first place this season.

It has been freely predicted during the last few weeks that Milt Schmidt would be replaced as coach of the Bruins and become an assistant to General Manager Lynn Patrick. Rangers recently announced that Alf Pike would be replaced as New York coach.

Irish Meet Royals In Opener

GUELPH (CP)—Guelph Royals will face St. Michael's College Majors tonight without their leading scorer Rod Gilbert in the opening game of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A best-of-seven final.

Gilbert, winner of the Tilson Trophy, has a serious back injury.

Fans of both teams are placing their hopes on four second-string players—Billy Taylor and Barry Jakeman of the Royals and Andre Champagne and Sonny Osborne of the Majors. These four have attained gigantic proportions in the playoffs in spite of mediocre performances during the season.

Osborne scored only eight goals and 11 assists in 48 games this season. Champagne scored 11 and 12 assists, Jakeman has 17 goals and 26 assists and Taylor has 12 goals and 19 assists.

In the playoffs, Osborne has four goals and nine assists in 11 games, Champagne has six goals and three assists, Jakeman has nine goals, one assist.

The Training Camps

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Talk about St. Louis Cardinals' 1961 pennant chances and you talk about the power of Ken Boyer and Bill White, the definitive help of Julian Javier and starting pitchers Ernie Broglio, Larry Jackson and Bob Miller. But you start the talk with the ace who's always in a hole—Lindy McDaniel.

Lanky Lindy proved himself to be best relief pitcher in the business last season, even though slacked against such fellow National League firemen as Elroy Face, Don Elston, Ed Roebuck and Dick Farrell and the American League's Gerry Staley, Mike Fornieles and Hoyt Wilhelm.

Broglio and McDaniel shared the Cardinal player-of-the-year award. Broglio with his 21 victories and McDaniel with his 124 strikeouts, 27 saves and 2.63 earned-run average, best in the league.

It was Lindy once again Tuesday, following Broglio to the mound, as the Cardinals made it four wins in a row over the American League champion New York Yankees, winning 2-1 in 11 innings.

BLANKS YANKS

Broglio blanked the Yanks on three hits for seven innings, and McDaniel, after giving up his first earned run in 13 innings this spring, resumed his shutout spell over the last four frames for the decision.

Washington Senators, leading AL clubs with a 13-8 won-lost exhibition record, ripped Chicago White Sox 13-3, Detroit Tigers walloped the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates 10-2, Minnesota Twins defeated Milwaukee Braves 9-6, Cincinnati Redlegs beat Philadelphia Phillies 9-6, Kansas City Athletics outlasted Baltimore Orioles, 11-10 in 10 innings, Chicago Cubs nudged Los Angeles Angels' 4-3, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated Cleveland Indians 8-5 and San Francisco Giants beat Texcoma, their Pacific Coast League farm club, 7-5.

Willie Tasby belted across six runs for the Senators with a pair of homers, one a grand slammer and both off lefty Jcan Pizarro.

The Tigers decked two of the Pirates' aces — Vern Law and Face. Detroit got 14 hits, one a home run by Al Kaline.

The Twins took similar liberties with another National League ace, cracking all but one of their 17 hits off Lew Burdette of the Braves. Earl Battey and Bob Allison each hit two-run triples for the Twins. John Demeris hit two homers, and a pair of singles for the braves.

Grand Jury Begins Hoop Probe

NEW YORK (AP)—The grand jury investigation of fix attempts Tuesday of the new United States college basketball scandals, taking testimony from unidentified witnesses in a two-hour session.

It was understood testimony was received from detectives and others working on the investigation which became public knowledge when Wagman, 26, and Joseph Hacken, 41, were arrested and charged with bribing three players to shave points on games in which their teams were involved.

A New York police source has said the scandal could involve as many as 15 to 20 colleges.

According to Assistant District Attorney Peter D. Andreoli, Seton Hall player Hank Gunter and Art Hicks accepted $1,000 each to shave points in a game against Dayton at Madison Square Garden Feb. 9. He said the unidentified university of Connecticut player had taken $1,500 for the same game in a Connecticut-Colgate game at Hamilton, N.Y.

Stirling Beaten 8-5

Bracebridge handed the Stirling Juveniles an 8-5 defeat in the OMHA Juvenile 'C' semi-final playoff game in Marmora last night.

The second game of the series will be played in Bracebridge tomorrow (Thursday) night. It is a two-game, total goals-to-count series.

This is the second series between the two clubs, the first one being gthrown out after a great deal of bickering, with protests and counter-protests coming from both sides.

President Good Golfer Says Crosby

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) President Kennedy "is a pretty good golfer who could become a very fine one if he had the time to play," says Bing Crosby.

A match between Kennedy and former president Eisenhower would "be pretty even now," Crosby told sports writer Ed Schoenfeld of the Oakland Tribune by telephone from Hollywood, Calif.

"But Kennedy could do a better job if he had the time. He's young—and hits a longer ball off the tee than I do."

Crosby based his analysis on 13 holes as the president's partner in the Palm Beach Country Club in Florida and his own experience as a golfer and tournament sponsor.

The singer said Kennedy "was a good swinger on the links but he was most impressed with his tee shots.

"He was out 240 or 250 yards," Bing said. "The president has a good golf swing and all the fundamentals are right. . .

"But the best part of his game is the way he makes snatches at the first tee.

"He has that confidence that he'll be able to handle those international rascals."

Crosby said he was Kennedy's partner in the Government occupation golf match, "but let him handle all the details" of arrangements.

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — Western Canada won the men's team championship while Eastern Canada took the women's at the Dominion Bowling Tournament which opened its ninth annual Canadian five-pin bowling championships opened.

Barons Bow To Indians Four in Row

CLEVELAND (AP)—The Indians of Springfield, fast, rugged and hard to stop, have captured a berth in the American Hockey League's Calder Cup final series with four straight victories over Cleveland Barons.

The Indians eliminated Cleveland from their best-of-seven semi - final set Tuesday night with a 3-1 victory here.

They will face either Buffalo Bisons or Hershey Bears for the cup. The Bears lead the Bisons 2-0 in their best-of-seven semi-final and could wrap things up in tonight's fourth game at Buffalo.

Springfield's victory Tuesday night could prove to be expensive. Marcel Paille, brilliant Springfield goaltender, was injured in the third period with a wrenched knee. It was not known whether the injury would keep him out of the finals.

The Indians won as they have frequently this season, with a splurge in the third period. Going into that period Springfield trailed 1-0. But in the space of 11 minutes and 10 seconds, tallied for two goals, the second one coming at 1:58.

Producers, Executives Spend Lots of Time Naming Shows

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — What makes a good title for a TV series?

Gunsmoke, agon Train, The Untouchables, and Candid Camera are obviously good titles in the first place, they give some hint about the content of the shows. But more important, they are the names of popular programs.

TV producers and executives spend a lot of time and thought on the names of shows, although sometimes it is difficult to understand what they are trying for.

CBS had two recent changes of mind about its forthcoming comedy series starring Robert Cummings. At first it was announced as The Bob Cummings Show. Then it was changed to Fasten Your Seat Belt, probably because Cummings will play an adventurous pilot with two planes.

Now it is back to The Bob Cummings Show. This, of course, is what the star's other series will be called if Announcer photographer — was called, But in reruns the old series is called Love That Bob."

Danger Man, CBS, 8:30-9 EST —premiere of new British-made action series starring Patrick McGoohan.

NEW YORK (AP) — Heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson will face either England's Henry Cooper or Eddie Machen of Los Angeles in a title defense for Sweden's Ingemar Johansson.

That appeared to be the picture for boxing's big boys today with both Cooper and Machen free until September. The title go probably will be held in New York's Yankee Stadium and the Ingemar Johansson International special is Ingemar's home town of Goteborg, Sweden.

Tom Bolan, the recently appointed executive director of Feature Sports, Inc., said Tuesday that Cooper, London No. 1 contender from Philadelphia, No. 1 here being.

Machen, the No. 2 contender from Portland, Ore., will have to show impressively against Mike DeJohn, No. 6 contender from Syracuse, N.Y., in their Monday night clash at San Francisco to merit a look-in.

Hollywood Has New Swede In Tradition of Bergman

By JAMES BACON

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Hollywood has a new Swede in the tradition of Garbo and Ingrid Bergman—but it may have a job keeping her.

Beside Ingrid Thulin, star of many of director Ingmar Bergman's masterpieces, is in town making The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse opposite Glenn Ford, a native of Quebec. It's her first American movie.

"But I cannot get used to your big System," says Ingrid. "In Sweden we have no such thing. There are only good actresses and bad actresses—and stars."

MGM executives predict that her first American picture will make her an international star whether she wants to or not.

Money apparently is not the issue for Miss Thulin.

"I am not sure I do not prefer the Swedish method of paying actresses. It's all based on seniority.

"We are very socialistic in Sweden — even in the acting business.

IT IS SECURITY

"The older you are, the more money you are paid. It's great security," Miss Thulin, one of Sweden's top actresses even before Bergman cast her in such pictures as Wild Strawberries and The Magician, makes $5,000 a picture in Sweden.

Her husband is Harry Schein, a wealthy Swedish businessman. That's another reason for her lack of preoccupation with money.

One aspect of Hollywood filmmaking bothers her in the same way it bothered Garbo. She likes to be alone on the set.

"It's not that we Swedes do not like people around. We love people but when we are concentrating on a scene, we do not like to be distracted."

Western Leaders Charting Strategy On Laos Crisis

Kennedy and Macmillan Enter 2nd Day of Talks

WASHINGTON (CP)—Prime Minister Macmillan and President Kennedy are expected to begin charting allied strategy today for negotiations with Russia, Communist China and other countries on a permanent settlement of the crisis in Laos.

The two Western leaders, in the wake of their Washington conference, were reported optimistic about Soviet agreement to a guaranteed cease-fire in the Laotian civil war.

They were expected to agree that once fighting ends there should focus their efforts on unifying and neutralizing Laos, seeking that objective in a forthcoming international conference on the future of the Southeast Asian kingdom.

Kennedy and Macmillan, in fact, were described as substantially agreed in their positions on a wide range of world problems—with one notable exception in the case of United Nations membership for Red China.

U.S. BACKS ADMISSION

Britain favors admittance of Red China to the UN. The United States is strongly opposed, but does not have enough land Red China first give up aggressive claims to Formosa.

Today's talks were to begin with a meeting between State Secretary Dean Rusk and Foreign Secretary Lord Home. Macmillan planned to attend a luncheon at the Capitol given by Sen. J. William Fulbright (Dem., Ark.), chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee.

Kennedy arranged to take the prime minister on a later afternoon ride on the Potomac River aboard a 65-foot presidential motor cruiser which he has named Honey Fitz after his maternal grandfather. Between 8 and 9 p.m., Macmillan is to have dinner at the British Embassy.

The shipboard conference, U.S. officials said, was to be devoted primarily to a discussion of certain issues between the Western powers and Russia which have not been brought into the consultations. These include Laos, the Soviet negotiations at Geneva on a nuclear test ban treaty, and the Berlin crisis.

Parrot Talks His Way Out Of Kidnapping

LONDON (AP)—Just as detectives hoped he would, Polly Jolley tried his way out of a kidnapping.

Polly, a parrot, was stolen with a flock of 300 rare birds from a private zoo at the weekend, but was found peacefully pecking in the pets' corner of a London department store.

He was squawking, "Hello, diddle diddle . . . Baa, baa, black sheep, have you any wool?"

Then he switched to and screamed his name and address. A stock clerk, who had read newspaper reports about the missing Amazon parrot was able to recite nursery rhymes and repeat his name and address, called the police.

The manager of the pets department said the birds had been bought from a bird dealer at Egham, in Surrey.

Detectives followed the trail back and said he had also bought the birds from another man.

Detectives are now questioning a man in Southampton.

And Polly Jolley and the other birds are now back in their private zoo at the Bleak Hall bird farm at Hockcliffe.

MUNICIPALITIES ACCEPTING AID IN BIG WAY

Sewer Construction At High Level

OTTAWA (CP) — Late last fall, Parliament hustled through the legislative mill a measure to help cities, municipalities install trunk sewers and sewage treatment plants.

The idea of several bills passed in the pre - Christmas sittings was aimed at alleviating unemployment. This one also had another prime objective: To do something about soil and water pollution, a menace to health which is being increasingly anxious attention in Canada in recent years.

The municipalities have responded to the federal initiative in a big way. Since the program went into effect Dec. 2, loans totalling $22,673,988 have been approved for 58 projects, located in every province except Manitoba and New Brunswick.

Inquiries have been received from another 145 municipalities representing over 200 projects, of which 72 have specified the assistance they would like to borrow. These run to a total of some $83,000,000.

Loans are interest-free.

The figures were reported by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, which is running the federal side of the program.

The CMHC has already predicted that by the end of the year the $100,000,000 CMHC was authorized to spend under the legislation will be exhausted or nearly so.

The rush of applications can largely be attributed, officials say, to the 50 per cent of the cost, 25 per cent of the principle and 25 per cent of the paid as accrued interest will be forgiven the municipality where a project is completed by March 31, 1963.

Loans carry 5¼-per-cent interest, and are repayable over periods up to 50 years. Up to two-thirds of the cost of a project can be financed.

In the current issue of the CMHC bi-monthly publication, Habitat, N. J. Monckton, chief of the health department's public health engineering division, writes that pollution can be "a real" health hazard" in certain areas where waste disposal units such as septic tanks and privies are used.

He suggests that the program might bring about in many municipalities a better-quality and safer water supply "less frequently subject to objectionable tastes and odors," safer bathing beaches and "considerable tastes and odors," safer bathing beaches and "considerable reduction in stream pollution through expansion of industrial development based on suitable water sources.

Katanga Government, Residents Waging Economic War Against UN

ELISABETHVILLE (AP) — The Katanga government and Negro and white residents of Elisabethville Thursday kept up an economic war today against United Nations troops despite reports Premier Tshombe's truce with the UN commander.

All business places, including garages and cafes, still refused to serve UN troops.

The chief UN spokesman in Elisabethville said Wednesday he was ejected from a downtown hotel Wednesday night by the hotel proprietor and a Belgian police officer as a crowd of whites jeered.

The Belgian officer and Marcel Tignee, Belgian adviser to Interior Minister Godefroid Munongo, told Tombelaine that Tshombe's order to impose economic sanctions on UN troops had not been rescinded.

A UN spokesman said Wednesday that after a conference with UN officials, Tshombe had agreed the sanctions would be "suppressed but not lifted." The spokesman called this terminology a face-saving device by the president. But neither the Katanga nor UN military commanders made any mention of Tshombe's statement.

The UN military commander in the Congo, Gen. Sean McKeown, of Ireland, warned Tshombe during the two-hour conference that he would not tolerate his garrison in Elisabethville with Indian troops if there is any repetition of Tuesday's noisy violence against the UN force. Tshombe violently opposes use of Indians in Katanga.

About 300 Irish troops poured into Elisabethville airport Wednesday to relieve the Swedish garrison that was attacked Tuesday. They met no resistance.

Under the agreement with Tshombe, the Irish and Katanga police will guard the airport jointly. But the Irish are prepared to seal off the airport and await Indian reinforcements if the Africans go on another rampage.

Laos Govt. Ready to Order Truce as Soon as Rebels Do

VIENTIANE (Reuters) — The right wing Laotian government is ready to order a cease-fire and meet immediately with left-list leaders for talks to end this kingdom's civil war, it was reported today.

A reliable source said the government was ready to give the cease-fire order as soon as a similar order was given to the pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces. The only wagging was against the right wing regime.

Gen. Phoumi Nosavan, the right wing defence minister and strongman, offered to meet with leftist leaders for talks on forming a "representative government of national unity."

Until now, the right wing government has maintained that there could be no cease-fire until all "invading" troops from Communist North Viet Nam had been withdrawn from the country under international supervision.

A reliable source said the government is willing to send an envoy to negotiate as terms.

date truce, even before the reconvening of the International Control Commission for this purpose.

But sources admitted that a cease-fire was complicated by poor communications. Ill - equipped "battle lines" and countless guerrilla bands operate behind both the government and rebel lines.

The West has called for a cease-fire as the first step of a two-stage program for calling the international crisis, over Laos. The end of fighting would be followed by the reconvening of the International Control Commission, made up of India, Canada and Poland, and this in turn would be followed by an international conference on Laos.

Russia has agreed to the main Western proposals but has left the timing of the three steps vague, arguing for an international conference before early this month without prior conditions.

Meanwhile, North Vietnam, the two Communist countries bordering Laos, support the Pathet Lao.

Cost-of-Living Index Rises Fifth of Point During Feb.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's official yardstick of living costs rose a modest fifth of a point during February as higher housing and clothing costs added one - fifth of a point to the consumer price index.

The index advanced to 129.1 on March 1 from 128.9 on Feb. 1, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

This marks the first appearance of a new index price base which has been patterned on consumer spending habits of 1957, instead of the 1949 base. Spending patterns on which the index has hitherto been based.

The main changes reflect the fact that Canadians are spending a smaller share of the family budget on food, and a larger share on such things as recreation, sports and the family car.

The new index, however, continues to be based on 1949 prices equalling 100. Thus it will continue to express present-day prices as a percentage of 1949 prices.

On the new method of calculation, the price index was 127.9 on March 1 last year — 1.2 points below the March 1 level this year.

Today's report shows no overall change during February in prices of food or of tobacco and liquor. Higher costs of housing and clothing were partly offset by decreases in transportation, personal care and reading, recreation and reading.

The rise in the index during February followed two small monthly declines from the record 129.6 set in January.

It also followed an increase in industrial wage rates recurred in January. The index of average industrial wages rose to 140.0 in Feb., the latest data available — was 179.2 compared

Peace Talks With Algerian Rebel Leaders Postponed

PARIS (Reuters) — The agreed to the April 7 talks in French government today officially announced postponement of the Evian talks with Algerian rebel leaders, which had been due to begin Friday.

The government blamed the postponement on the Algerian National Liberation Front (FLN) on the military wing of the Algerian provisional government.

The insurgents announced six days ago they would not be present at Evian if France intended to hold parallel negotiations with the rival National Algerian Movement (MNA).

Up to Wednesday night, officials in the French alpine resort town of Evian, where the talks were due to open Friday, maintained there was "no change" in arrangements for the meeting.

The government communique, issued after a 3½-hour cabinet meeting, said the Evian talks would not open on schedule Friday because of the attitude of the insurgents.

It noted the French attitude has remained unchanged since March 18 when both sides separate statements published simultaneously.

Information Minister Louis Terrenoire told reporters that from Paris, the minister for Algeria who was to head the French negotiating team, will not go to Evian Friday.

LIFE SENTENCES GIVEN DR. FINCH AND MISTRESS

'Thank God' Finch Says Through Tears

LOS ANGELES (AP)—A jury that convicted Dr. R. Bernard Finch and his sweetheart, Carole Tregoff, of murdering his wife last year fixed life imprisonment for the couple. They will be eligible for parole after seven years.

Finch and Carole broke into sobs Wednesday after the 10 men and two women jurors announced their decision—climaxing a dozen suspenseful hours of deliberation.

The trial jury—the first two ended in deadlocks—had to make this choice: Life imprisonment or the gas chamber.

"We'll fight it, darling, we're still alive," Finch, wet - eyed, consoled his former lover.

Carole, at 24 no longer the tawny beauty she was two years ago in Florida's political miseries, cried at the verdict:

"No, no, I'll be an old woman when I get out . . ."

Finch, 43, dropped his head on his folded arms and cried until the counsel table in the packed courtroom was wet with tears. Then he said: "I'll be strong. Thank God, thank God."

The jury fixed the terms, 18 months of suspense and an estimated $750,000 of taxpayers' money after Finch and Carole indicted murder cases of recent years come to a dramatic conclusion.

The case was front-page news in the United States and around the world. On Feb. 1, 1959, when the body of Barbara Jean Finch, three bullet in the back, was discovered on the lawn next to the Finch estate in Newport Beach.

The state, asking the death penalty for Finch and Carole, argued: "Here we have greed, avarice, lust, frustration."

The prosecution's case: Finch and Carole wanted the doctor's

Canada, Britain Back Apartheid Motion By Asians

Reject African Nations' Demand for Sanctions

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Canada and Britain have carried their condemnation of South Africa's racial policies beyond the Commonwealth family into the United Nations.

The two countries announced Wednesday their approval in principle of an Asian proposal calling for "action" against apartheid (racial separation) but at the same time they rejected a 34-country African request for sanctions against economic sanctions against South Africa.

The United States followed a similar line but the French delegation indicated it would abstain on any resolution regarding apartheid. The racial issue is deeply involved with the question of non-interference by the UN in the domestic affairs of a member country.

The Asian resolution sponsored by India, Malaya and Ceylon would have the General Assembly request the states to consider taking such separate and collective action as they are open to them to bring about the abandonment" of apartheid.

BLACK REPRESENTATION

It has won considerable favor among Western powers because it "urges" but does not "demand." Defence Minister V. K. Krishna Menon has said it could mean anything from a mere token of protest to imposing sanctions that would be costly. Britain has already chopped trade and diplomatic relations with South Africa.

Canadian delegate Arthur R. Smith, Progressive Conservative member of Parliament for Calgary, said Canada's attitude toward the "deplorable policy of apartheid" had been made clear at the recent Commonwealth conference by Prime Minister Diefenbaker. But sanctions "would be unwise," he said.

"A resolution calling for sanctions would be premature because it might force South Africa out of the United Nations and that is the only channel of communication now left between South Africa and the international community.

"The union is already too isolated and the changing ideas and conditions in the modern world, represented in a country in the world refused to trade with every other nation whose

Joint Approach To Issue Begun By Russia, U.K.

LONDON (Reuters)—Britain and Russia have begun discussing details of a joint approach aimed at ending the civil war and international crisis in Laos, it was officially announced in London today.

The announcement said Sir Frank Roberts, the British ambassador to Moscow, and Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Georgi Pushkin reached the decision at talks in Moscow Wednesday when they were discussing drafts of documents setting out proposals for settling the crisis.

Details of the Anglo-Soviet exchanges was described in official circles as still encouraging. But it was understood that the Soviet has not yet completed its study on British view that a cease-fire in Laos must precede an international conference.

Britain and the Soviet Union have been in their new contacts in Moscow as co-chairmen of the 1954 Geneva conference which partitioned Indo-China.

The feeling in diplomatic circles here was that the Anglo-Soviet contacts were being carried on "satisfactorily" and discussions were not finding it easy to obtain immediate communist Chinese consent.

— WINNIPEG HITS PEAK

WINNIPEG (CP)—City council Wednesday night struck the city's 1961 tax rate at 74.5 mills, seven - mill increase and the highest rate in the city's history.

Only 17 Shelters for 80,000 People Might Have to Fight Shelterless

DEEP RIVER (CP) — Deep River property owners made a second appeal to town council Wednesday night to provide fallout shelters for this Ottawa Valley town's entire population. But 4,000-word brief pointed out that people with no property have no opportunity to build individual shelters. And the problem presented by nuclear warfare was so great that most Canadians would rather not face up to the threat.

In a submission to council three weeks ago the owners said there were only 17 known shelters in Renfrew County which has a population of 80,000.

In an emergency, said the property owners, each family should have some sign that it could fend it against persons without one.

They suggested that shelters be incorporated in all buildings in Deep River and that the shelters be connected by telephone. Radio should be manned by a policeman, a doctor and a qualified radiation surveyor.

Council sent the brief to Renfrew County council.

Railway Report Will Be Studied At Cabinet Meet

OTTAWA (CP) — The Macpherson royal commission report urging multi-million-dollar federal subsidies and a new competitive climate for Canada's railways is reported in government hands and under active study.

The first volume of what will be a two-and up as a three-volume report is expected to be considered by the cabinet at its next meeting, possibly Monday, the day Parliament resumes after the Easter recess.

But the decision on when the long-awaited report is to be made public lies chiefly in the hands of Prime Minister Diefenbaker, who indicated earlier this week he might table it in Parliament.

ALLOW LEEWAY

There is no reliable estimate of the amount of the subsidies, but they could range close to $100,000,000 a year.

The six commissioners under chairman M. A. MacPherson, a Regina lawyer and former Saskatchewan cabinet minister, are expected to recommend several specific subsidies to help the railways streamline their operations and relieve the pressing realities of competition in transportation.

ALLOW LEEWAY

The subsidies—largely of an incentive nature and designed to dwindle in amounts over the years—would serve to give the railways the time and freedom to reshape their whole business structure to meet changing trucks, planes, ships and pipelines.

The commission's first volume probably will spell out a general philosophy for transportation, coupled with some specific recommendations for federal financial assistance to the railways.

The recommendations prob-

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

HUNTERS GET SAFETY CERTIFICATES

Hunter Safety Training Instructors had a relatively quiet month throughout this district. Two instructors in the Belleville area, Ron Isaac and Bob Phillips, gave certificates out to 36 students. There were no other classes graduating during the month of March.

LAKE FORMATION

Although most lakes are formed by glaciers, they may also be caused by a fracture in the earth's crust or by a lava flow blocking a valley.

Many Large Construction Projects in Offing in Area

With a number of fairly large construction projects in the offering for the Belleville area during the next few months, the local employment picture is expected to get a shot in the arm, it was noted today by Mr. Cecil Hunter, manager of the Belleville Employment Service.

In fact the number of unemployed receiving benefits, at the Belleville office has been steadily dropped slightly with figures at the end of March showing a drop in unplaced males for the first time this year. Until the end of March the trend this year had been toward increased unemployment.

At the end of March unplaced males totalled 2,206 as compared with 2,227 at the same time a year ago. Unplaced females, however, were slightly higher at 696 as compared with 678.

"I don't like to be too optimistic but the number of fairly large construction projects scheduled for this spring and summer is certain to reflect favorably in greater employment in the local area", Mr. Hunter said.

PRELIMINARY WORK STARTS

Among the construction projects scheduled to go ahead this spring are two half-million-dollar motels, the new Ontario Provincial Police building in the north end of the city and a new bowling alley in the East end.

Preliminary work for the construction of the motel on North Front Street has already commenced, it was learned.

Also scheduled for construction this year are two apartment blocks and a new office building at Northern Electric.

Also in the phase of the city's sewage disposal project costing an estimated two-and-a-half million dollars, is expected to go ahead this summer.

Extension of the municipal airport works program to May 30 is expected to result in additional municipal works being carried out. Under the municipal winter works program labor costs are subsidized by the Federal government.

RAILWAY REPORT

ably will be aimed at relieving the railway at some of their more pressing problems, which include unprofitable passenger and branch-line services and the statutory level of freight rates on export grain in western Canada.

The commission is understood to base its whole philosophy of transport on the concept that competition has ended the railways' monopoly grip in Canada. Trucks are hitting hard at highvalue commodity shipments that once proved the cream of railway freight earnings.

In such a competitive era—with the railways close to pricing themselves out of some business because of their need for profit-making increases—the commission likely will propose a new climate of competition for the railways, including less government regulation, more freedom and flexibility in setting rates, abandoning uneconomic services and streamlining their physical plant.

This would lead to fashion the railways into a new role as a main-line operation with a few major branch facilities as feeder lines.

Enter School But Fail to Get Into Vault

An unsuccessful attempt to gain entrance to the vault at Prince Charles School was reported to city police this morning.

The school principal Mr. E. Harnden, said entrance to the school had been gained by smashing a glass in an outside door, then reaching in to free the panic bar. The combination and the handle on the school vault door were then knocked off but the intruders were foiled in their attempt to get into the vault.

Nothing was reported missing.

MELROSE BANQUET

If anybody alive knows how to prepare banquets it is the Melrose Auxiliary. All manner of delicious dishes in various shapes and colors set on gleaming white tables cloths, appropriately decorated with floral colors, was the scene that met the eyes of the people attending this annual banquet. Huge platters of turkey cooked to perfection with everything that goes with it, followed by pies to suit all tastes. Scoutmaster Tom Howard thanked the ladies; the lengthy oration was well deserved.

T/L John McLaren performed the flag-task ceremony. Grace was said by D/C. Bill Alcorn in the absence of the padre, Rev. L. Leathers. The guests were introduced by chairman Don McLaren: District Commissioner Phil Allcorn, A.D.C. Bill Sweet, Jack Hodgson, secretary District Council; Lloyd Monteith, president District Council; Cub Ken Monteith and Cub Mirror Mr. Jackson.

Cub Belsnap proposed a toast to the fathers, great guys who supply uniforms, and transportation and Belleville boys because they, the fathers, take off to attend camp. Jack McLaren, replying, said they were proud of their sons and welcomed this opportunity of saying so.

CAMPING AND HIKING

Scout John English presented a very good report on the camping activities of the Troop. He described the first camp in 1957's tented troop lacking equipment and experience. Several camps followed with equipment borrowed from the District Council. In 1960 the boy Scouts banded together and got busy and presented the troop with everyting required for camping, including canvas, four tents and a kitchen fly — without wings. It might be mentioned here that there was a profusion of flies at the banquet and they all had wings. Maybe Melrose is where flies go in the winter.

Scout Wayne Pascoe gave a similar talk on hiking activities. They explored the rivers, creeks and lakes. The troop did a lot of walking. Alford's Lake, Goodfellow's Lake, Fisher Creek, a detailed study was made of the million-dollar bridge at Salmon River.

The District Commissioner commended the boys on their well presented reports and remarked how pleased he was that outdoor Scouting was being practised.

IMPORTANT LITTLE THINGS

Lloyd Monteith, guest speaker, told us how little things can upset the balance of nature, resulting in serious consequences. A multiplication of tiny pebbles can destroy a forest — this means food for birds and animals. It takes 300 years for a forest to grow to its original form. No trees mean poor ground. An increase in rabbits results in more foxes and wolves and they leave the mice alone, who go free to spoil crops. The entire law of nature can be upset by little things. On the other hand little things are of the utmost importance. Life itself starts with little things. Scouting starts with little Cubs doing little good turns and being cheerful and helpful. Good little habits grow into big important things. Mr. Monteith is well versed in this subject and his talk was most interesting to young and old.

AKELA ENGLISH

Mrs. English handed the pack over to a new Akela Mr. George Lego. We are pleased to know that she is not leaving the pack. President Monteith praised Mrs. English for the many skills given to Scouting. The D.C. also paid tribute to Mrs. English for the formation and progress of Melrose Cubs and Scouts. The other leaders were A.C.M. Mrs. Tom Howard, A.C.M. Mrs. McLaren, S.M. Tom Howard, A.S.M. Carmen Morgan and T/L. John McLaren. It is interesting to note that Tom Howard, Mrs. Howard, Scout Paul and Cub Ricky are all active workers in the Melrose group.

Our congratulations to all the Melrose people for a wonderful evening of Scouting.

Senior Citizens Enjoy Contest Of Making Hats

The regular meeting of the Senior Citizens Club was held on Wednesday evening in the Recreation Centre room on Pinnacle Street with about 90 in attendance.

The president, Harry Scales, opened the meeting with, "The Queen" and a moment of silence out of respect to the late George Digby. Mrs. M. Drummond, the very efficient secretary read the minutes of the last regular meeting, which were approved. Birthday greetings were extended to all those celebrating a birthday during the month of March.

Mrs. A. E. Frederick gave the treasurer's financial report showing a substantial balance on hand, and the report was adopted. The president reported on the successful visit of the club members to the Trenton Senior Citizens Club.

Mrs. L. Adams, entertainment committee chairman, conducted a hat making contest, after which the contestants and second ranked their Easter bonnetts, but the judges failed to declare a winner, believing that all the creations were of equal value.

All members enjoyed an hour and a half of penny bingo under the direction of Mr. James Doyle, with Mrs. Fred Ally being winner of the final coverall.

Mrs. C. Wilson held the winning number for the door prize draw. Refreshments were served by the ladies of that committee at the meeting adjourned in the usual manner.

Dies of Injuries

TORONTO (CP) — A 55-year-old Thunder Bay woman died in hospital Wednesday night from injuries suffered in a fire at her home Tuesday.

Police said Mrs. Theresa Wings, Mayor Melrose is where flies go in the winter.

Scout Wayne Pascoe gave a similar talk on hiking activities. They explored the rivers, creeks and lakes. The troop did a lot of walking. Alford's Lake, Goodfellow's Lake, Fisher Creek, a detailed study was made of the million-dollar bridge at Salmon River.

The District Commissioner commended the boys on their well presented reports and remarked how pleased he was that outdoor Scouting was being practised.

IMPORTANT LITTLE THINGS

Lloyd Monteith, guest speaker, told us how little things can upset the balance of nature, resulting in serious consequences. A multiplication of tiny pebbles can destroy a forest — this means food for birds and animals. It takes 300 years for a forest to grow to its original form. No trees mean poor ground. An increase in rabbits results in more foxes and wolves and they leave the mice alone, who go free to spoil crops. The entire law of nature can be upset by little things. On the other hand little things are of the utmost importance. Life itself starts with little things. Scouting starts with little Cubs doing little good turns and being cheerful and helpful. Good little habits grow into big important things. Mr. Monteith is well versed in this subject and his talk was most interesting to young and old.

AKELA ENGLISH

Mrs. English handed the pack over to a new Akela Mr. George Lego. We are pleased to know that she is not leaving the pack. President Monteith praised Mrs. English for the many skills given to Scouting. The D.C. also paid tribute to Mrs. English for the formation and progress of Melrose Cubs and Scouts. The other leaders were A.C.M. Mrs. Tom Howard, A.C.M. Mrs. McLaren, S.M. Tom Howard, A.S.M. Carmen Morgan and T/L. John McLaren. It is interesting to note that Tom Howard, Mrs. Howard, Scout Paul and Cub Ricky are all active workers in the Melrose group.

Our congratulations to all the Melrose people for a wonderful evening of Scouting.

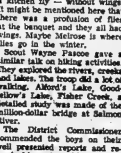
Adults Stare In Amazement At Exhibits



TORONTO (CP) — About 200 science exhibits ranging from a model atomic car to a hysterical-acting on a dog have been entered at the 1961 Ontario Science Fair by high school students.

The students, from Grades 9 to 13, are competing for $6,000 in scholarships at the fair which closes today.

Adults stared in amazement at complex nuclear science exhibits. Victor Arenovich, 17, of Hornepayne was the proud exhibitor of a device which amplifies light rays — a LASER, which may one day transmit 30,000,000 telephone calls simultaneously.

The LASER (from light amplification by stimulated emission of radiation) was built after the student found a bottle of xenon, a rare gas, in the school laboratory.

Other exhibits included a speech scrambler — a device which uses an electronic code to de-scramble jumbled conversation on tape; a device to test the IQ of a dog; an exhibit of Dutch elm diseases and a color organ which projects recorded organ music on to a screen in three colors by an electronic paralle.

Spring Cleanup Program Well Along Way

The annual spring cleanup program on city streets is well along for another year with a small army of men armed with brooms and shovels going over the town on a street by street basis.

Actually the cleanup operation is underway in West Belleville with the dirt and debris being swept from curbs along Yeomans Street. The vacuum wielding shovel the dirt into piles and then toss it into trucks for disposal at the city dump.

Up to 23 welders' receipts have been employed in the street up operations, the city public works department reported.

Installation of two sanitary sewers one in West Belleville and the other in the Bay End is now well along. A department official said today that the sewer on Bell Boulevard and Sinclair street between West Moira and Bell Boulevard was the one on Herchimer Ave. between Southview and Victoria, were nearing completion.

Both projects are being paid for under local improvements.

Trailer Caravan May Be Invited To Visit Town

TRENTON — At last night's meeting of the Trenton Coordination Council, chairman Al Ferry told the members that he had been given a suggestion that a "trailer caravan" be invited to make Trenton a stopping-off point this summer. This caravan, composed of more than 200 trailers, would travel from the southern states and pass through the town. Mr. Ferry suggested that the Trenton Chamber of Commerce could write to the principals in the project and ask that the trailers stop over in Trenton. He suggested that the trailer owners could be taken on a tour of the air base or the Bata Shoe Company and entertained in other ways. Mr. Ferry said that the caravan took four hours to pass any given point and that it would be a wonderful tourist attraction. Mrs. Fay Jeffery suggested that tourist brochures, advertising Trenton, could be passed out to members of the caravan. This event would take place in July.

Mr. Ferry told the members that on May 6, the Trenton Kiwanis Club would have as guest speaker a Toronto business man who is interested in rehabilitation work with crippled persons. Members of the council and representatives of service clubs will be invited to hear this speaker.

It was suggested that one service club be made responsible for plans for the erection of signs at the town's entrances which would advertise the time and place of club meetings. It was suggested that the Trenton Lions Club be asked to be responsible for this.

Miss Eva Baker of the Trenton Business and Professional Women's Club will represent her club on the committee concerned with the erection of the signs.

Building Slow

TRENTON — William Anderson, building inspector for Trenton, reports that the building permits were issued in March, Total estimates for the month were $26,200. Commercial repair amounted to $7,000; residential repair, $4,200; conversion (residential) $6,000, one new dwelling, $9,000.

Building activities for the first three months of the year has been "slow". With the advent of good weather, local building is expected to pick up.

Health Board Praises Bush Ambulance Co.

TRENTON — At yesterday's meeting of the Trenton Board of Health, Miss Marjorie Colbourne proposed that a letter be sent to the Bush Ambulance Company of Belleville, commending the owner on the very efficient service to the town of Trenton, rendered while the service "filled the gap" after the Weaver Ambulance Service of Trenton ceased on February 11. Indications are that a locally based service will soon commence duties in the town. The motion was seconded by E. D. Topping and passed by board members.

Secretary, O. W. Carr was instructed to write the letter.

Mr. Larry said that he had been very favorably impressed with the applicant for a local service, whose name has not been revealed. At this week's council meeting Councillor T. J. McNally, too, commended the applicant, said that his name would be made known to council and the public at the April 17 meeting of council.

POLLUTION PROBLEM

H. S. Pane, chairman of the board, said that the air pollution by-law, as applied to factories, would become effective on May 1. Discussion revealed that in the opinion of board members, the worst offenders were in this respect were the hospital, a dairy and an east side factory.

Miss Gothard said that the air pollution problem had been successfully getting under control six months' period.

Mr. Larry informed the board members that the board would probably be expected to enter into agreement with the new ambulance operator, as it is not legally feasible for the town to do so, according to the laws.

Mr. Pane said that the reports on milk samples from two local dairies, had been good. One milk had been sent to a laboratory in Peterborough under a new arrangement. Reports on the tap water from one dairy had not been satisfactory and further samples will be tested.

Miss Gothard said that water from taps in her home left a black oily substance on her sinks, etc., which was almost impossible to remove.

DOLLAR RATE

MONTREAL (CP)—The U.S. dollar was at a discount of 1 1-16 per cent in terms of Canadian funds, the Bank of Montreal reported near noon today. Wednesday the noon rate was 98 31-32. Pound sterling $2.76 15-16, down 1-16.

Planning Week To Be Observed In Near Future

TRENTON — Subject to the approval of Trenton council, the week of May 22 will be "Community Planning Week" in Trenton.

By that date the official town plan should have been approved by the Minister of Planning and Development for Ontario and in force locally. The object of the special week is to acquaint the public with the aims and objectives of planning and to assure local citizens that the planning board is not just another committee set up to enforce zoning but is rather a group of fellow citizens interested in the future of Trenton.

It is planned to display maps and models of the Trenton of the future in a downtown store window and local service clubs to permit board members to address their members on the subject of planning; conduct an educational program in the town's schools; sponsor poster competitions in the schools to do with planning, and distribute folders outlining planning principles.

At Tuesday night's meeting of the Trenton and Suburban Planning Board, chairman Dr. W. A. McDonald, Arnold Robson and Howard Langdon were appointed to form a committee which will carry out details of this week's activities. Members Bfuce Ireland and John Forbes will assist the committee.

O. W. Larry, secretary of the board, said that the official plan should be back in Trenton soon. He said that he could see no reason why it should not be speedily approved by the minister. Once the plan is in force, council will be asked to appoint a committee of adjustment, comprised of three citizens. Board members will suggest possible candidates for these positions.

Mr. Larry said that council had approved a $1,000 grant to the board as budget estimates.

The board will ask for a meeting with members of the Trenton Board of Trade's' planning agement to discuss development of the sanitary fill area.

MOTOR BURNS OUT

TRENTON — At 8.30 this morning Trenton firemen were called to the Thonsby Bar on Dundas Street West, where the motor of the deep-freeze had burned out. The restaurant was filled with smoke but no damage (expect to the motor) was incurred. Proprietor Bert Lilling, who has just returned from a vacation in Montreal, said that he didn't appreciate that sort of "welcome home".

Radar Speed Timing Device In Operation

TRENTON—Trenton police have gone modern in their war against speeding offenders.

Yesterday the very latest in radar speed timing devices was put into use on city streets. The new equipment is the same type as has been operated by the Belleville police department since last winter.

With the new equipment radar signals sent out from a parked spotlight-type apparatus on the police cruiser are bounced back to the approaching vehicle with the speed being automatically registered on a dial being watched by the police operator.

The apparatus is accurate to within a very small percentage — always in favor of the motorist.

So Trenton motorists beware — the police may have you tuned in!

Inquest Finds Death Accident

TRENTON — A coroner's jury in Brighton yesterday brought down a verdict of accidental death in the case of Terrence Thompson, brother of Ben Thompson, M.P. for Northumberland. Mr. Thompson was killed instantly when his car crashed into the rear of a transport in Colborne on March 1.

The Brighton detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police report that the inquest will be held into the death of Charles Musgrave, whose body was found in the Murray Canal yesterday. Mr. Musgrave was a Toronto resident.

Drunken Flying Is Charge Laid Against Pilot

MONTREAL (CP) — Marie Leblanc, 35, a private pilot from suburban Dorval, pleaded guilty Wednesday to the unusual charge of drunken flying.

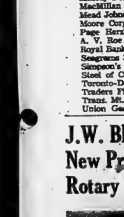
Leblanc, father of six, who went flying last Aug. 1 in a two - seat aircraft, pleaded guilty to charges under the Aeronautics Act. Judge Rene Thibaudeau fined April 12 for sentence.

Leblanc admitted drinking almost all of a bottle of wine and some whisky before taking off from St. Jovite, Que., 55 miles north of Montreal.

He said he was airborne for about an hour before he realized where he was. He landed in Montreal.

Winter Deer Conditions Good

The past winter has produced no real hardship for the Trweed district deer herd. During years of deep snow deer congregate in lowland areas, usually in cedar swamps, to secure protection from the weather. This winter, the snow depth has not been very great, thus deer have been able to travel over most of their summer range without too much difficulty. A few deer have been seen to congregate in groups in yarding areas, but this has not been the general rule.



The Department of Lands and Forests urges everyone to tie his dogs in order to keep them from chasing deer as the does are now heavy with fawn. Disturbances at this time of year could adversely affect the does that are due to fawn in late April and May.

Muskrat, Beaver Said Numerous In District

The beaver season closed on March 31st. Although many local trappers would like to see the season extended as there is approximately two feet of ice on the lakes, the majority were satisfied to take beaver while they were at their best in pelt-ness and the harvest has far surpassed that of last year's. This early closure will result in few "spring" beaver on the market to bolster a supply greater than the demand which results in poor raw fur prices.

The muskrat season closes April 30th, south of number 7 highway and on April 30th, north of number 7 highway. These animals appear to be very numerous this year, but this may be due to low water and heavy ice.

Echoes from Britain

There is a rising tide of public opinion in Canada for any program which would ban nuclear weapons, especially the H-bomb. This was clearly demonstrated on Easter Sunday, when ban-the-bomb meetings and marches were staged in Regina, Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

At present a situation exists in Canada which gives added meaning to such demonstrations. The Canadian Government has not yet taken a clear stand on its policy regarding the provision of nuclear weapons for Canada's armed forces—in particular whether nuclear warheads should be stored on Canadian soil for use with Bomarc missiles if these ever have to be fired to repulse intruders into our air space. As a means of influencing the Government, the demonstrations and marches are quite legitimate. We may be sure, though, that the Government will not lose sight of the fact that the demonstrations represent only a minor fraction of those Canadians with firm opinions in this controversy and that it is much easier to get people to protest against something—even a possible policy—than it is to get them to protest against such a protest.

It is interesting to note that Easter weekend saw similar demonstrations in Britain, but there they were not a new development but just the latest round in a continuing protest against nuclear armament.

The opposition of a large section of the public to the possession of nuclear arms is of greater significance in Britain than in Canada, for Britain has its own atomic bombs, while Canada would have to depend on her allies, Britain and the U.S., for the supply of any such arms should it be decided to stockpile them on our soil.

The countries where "ban-the-bomb" protests would be most meaningful, though, are Russia and the United States. In these lands, there appears to be no public opposition to H-bombs. Of course, it is difficult to determine what the true reaction of the Russian people is—firstly because they are unlikely to have access to the facts and secondly because, even if they desired to protest, they would be ruthlessly prevented from doing so unless such demonstrations happened to serve the government's purposes.

It can be argued, and perhaps correctly, that this means that the absence of any widespread "ban-the-bomb" demanstrations in the U.S. is thus of greater significance than a similar situation in Russia.

Here in Canada, it is worth noting that Premier T. C. Douglas of Saskatchewan, addressed the Regina rally. Premier Douglas is more than a provincial politician, since it is a foregone conclusion that he could have the leadership of the "New Party" for the asking. He is thus the first really important political figure in either Canada or Britain to lend his support to the movement, although in Britain men and women of national and even international reputation, in other fields than politics, have been prominent in it.

South Africans Worried

Two Associated Press despatches, which by coincidence appeared in adjoining columns of Monday's issue of The Ontario Intelligencer, may not be without significant relationship, one to the other.

One item noted that 23 South Africans had arrived in Elizabethville, the capital of Katanga Province in the Congo, to serve in that region's white mercenary army. All told, there are believed to be 130 South Africans in Katanga.

The other item, from Johannesburg, reported that the South African Government had decided to build 160 concrete watch towers, protected by minefields and ditches, between Cape Town and Windhoek, the capital of the Commonwealth trust of Southwest Africa.

With her ties with the Commonwealth cut, South Africa may be troubled over the possibility that future date may see her threatened by invasion by some of the newly-independent African lands.

Perhaps the white South African mercenaries in Elizabethville are not interested solely in money or adventure, but regard themselves as an advance guard holding back the threatening black tide.

If that is their idea, though, history may prove them tragically wrong. Whatever may be in store for the Congo, it is almost certain that the white mercenaries will do much more to make the white man's future in Africa difficult than to achieve the opposite effect. The mercenary, is seldom the type of man who wins friends and influences people

Pessimism is only the name that men of weak nerves give to wisdom.—Bernard De Voto.

All Nations Belong in UN

Toronto Star

Ghana and Libya suggest that South Africa be expelled from the United Nations if it persists in its apartheid policy. The Ghanaian delegate says the recent Commonwealth prime ministers' conference, which led to South Africa's departure from the Commonwealth, could serve as an example to the UN.

While sharing these nation's loathing of South Africa's oppressive policies, we do not believe the suggestion is mistaken and the Commonwealth example ill-chosen.

The Commonwealth is a multi-racial association of states which grew out of the British Empire. It reached the point where it had to take at least a minimum stand for racial equality at the time of the colored members. This stand, which left no place in the club for the Verwoerd regime, controls the country it claims to represent.

The principle of universal membership has gained ground to the point where there are two major nations (Communist China and Germany) and a number of minor ones which are outside. And all states should be in the UN, as it may best serve its overriding purpose, which is to prevent international disputes leading to war.

The expulsion of South Africa might not, probably would not, be fatal to that purpose. Should it result in South Africa's membership in the U.N., any step toward making it an exclusive club of like-minded nations, is a step in the wrong direction. Nor would the term "Fascist states" "Communist states" "Dictatorships of all kinds" if they were universally applied, there would be not much left of the world organization or its peacemaking capacities.

Kennedy Shows Humor

Baltimore Sun

Admirers of President Kennedy have begun to discern a humorous side to the President-elect and altogether welcome sense of humor. It enabled the president to deal with not long ago of his brother Bobby that the position of Attorney General ought to supply "a little legal experience before he starts practicing." And it enabled the president noted wryly of himself that "success has spoiled me." His presidential term he will be at an "awkward age . . . too old to begin a new career and too young to write my memoirs."

Barring Abraham Lincoln the presidency has not usually gone to funny men, and even Lincoln's humor seems to be of a more philosophical than belly-laughing variety. Certainly Roosevelt could get off a joke or two (not often about himself) and Wilson had his maverick. Samples of Mr. Kennedy's humor to date are not likely to be no comic either, his seems to be a brisk, dry wit characterized by a refreshing lack of not far removed from the Abe Stevenson facility for which correspondents called "quipping." Comparison to Abe Stevenson, however, should ring a warning bell for Mr. Kennedy. He must avoid getting into the Adlai the Solemn Ass. This law holds much prefer a natural human that, chuckle with those who joke. We think it's a silly law and much prefer a natural human to the White House than a scowling to politician. It's a law all the same. We look on the president continues to break it.

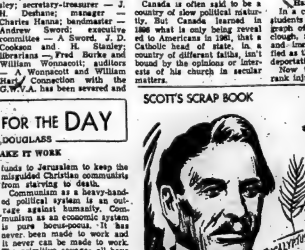
Do Not Bow to Hierarchy

Financial Post

Americans are discovering that, as Canada could have told them ages ago, a Roman Catholic president doesn't necessarily share the views of his church on political issues.

Mr. Kennedy is asking the U. S. Congress to vote $2.3 billion for federal grants to public school districts. This is against the demand, voiced by Catholic clergy and laymen that parochial, or Catholic schools should share in this aid. It's considered ironic that the first Catholic to sit in the White House should be, early in his first term, at odds with the hierarchy on such a question.



There's a neat parallel from Canadian history of the 1890s.

At that time the Manitoba legislature moved to deprive schools of the share of tax revenues they had always enjoyed. The ensuing debate got into national politics and the ruling Tories at Ottawa proposed to pass "remedial" legislation forcing Manitoba to restore the rights of the Catholic minority unchanged.

When Wilfrid Laurier, the national Liberal leader, opposed the measure, he was attacked from Quebec pulpits. In the eyes of the Roman Catholic bishops, writes Arthur Lower, "Laurier became a kind of anti Christ, a reincarnation of some of the old atheistical 'Rouges'." Nevertheless, the Quebec people supported, he won the 1896 election, and remained PM for the next 15 years.

Canada is often said to be a country of clear political neutrality. But Canada learned in 1896 what is only being revealed to Americans in 1961, that a Catholic head of state, in a country of different faiths, isn't bound by the opinions or interests of his church in secular matters.

Our Children Are Ashamed Of Their Teeth

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

We were playing musical chairs at our house not long ago, and Michael picked up some body's virus, which attacked his ear. It cleared up in a few days — at least the pain went away — and he returned to school.

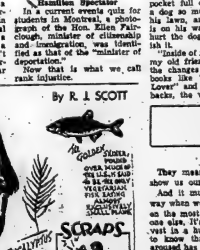
Then we noticed that he had become curiously withdrawn, and would not answer questions addressed to him, which was very unlike his personality. He seemed bemused, almost in a trance much of the time.

Finally, we caught on. He simply was not able hear very well. The infection had left a temporary hearing impairment; but he said nothing to us about it at all, until we asked him pointblank.

"That's right," he admitted, "I haven't been able to hear very well lately."

What doctors and child experts generally forget to tell parents is that children are reluctant to confess any shortcomings. A child will sometimes caste pain to a parent, but not admit weakness.

Thus, a great many children who are thought to be "a-a-a-a-a-rd" in some way are really suffering from poor eyesight or hearing which is not discovered.



The Belleville city council of 21 members is far too large and cumbersome. The proceedings of the last two sessions of the council should cause an unanimous demand for the abolition of the ward system.

Despite all the trust and affection that exists between us and his parents, he somehow does not find it easy, or possible, to confide in us about his fears and negative to them. For instance, are so ashamed of his teeth that children will not inform their parents if liberties have been taken with their teeth by workers with the principle that they forget the incident.

Adults are so used to voicing their complaints that they forget how unsympathetic they were as children. A child is unwilling to admit anything "bad" has happened to him, possibly because he feels that some of the blame will fall on him, or that the parents will reproach him, like Shylock over his ducats, if he owns up to some deficiency.

When I was a little boy, I was terribly frightened of a large and noisy dog (though no doubt genial) man who worked in an uncle's plant. I had bad dreams about him for a long time; but not once did I mention them to my parents, or they laugh at me. He remained my personal bogey-man.

There is a lack of communication between parents and children which is a terrible thing to achieve. The child is a deep reservoir of secrets, which is thought he may safely be hidden from the adult world, for he is not yet wholly at home in that world. Myth and myth still rule his mind. The blackest of these myths is that his hearing had been diminished because of some ugly sentence he may have uttered against his baby brother.

Dry Socket Denotes Lack Of Adequate Blood Clot

By Joseph C. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What is a dry socket, and is it serious? Can anything be done about it?
— E. H."

A "dry socket" is one in which, after a tooth has been extracted, there is lack of an adequate blood clot, and hence a lack of proper healing, since blood clot (at first) and then a "scab" or the equivalent, is part of nature's healing process.

Inflammation and infection of the bone, which has exposed the root of the tooth, is the cause. This may be from some chronic infection or one which results from the physical trauma (shock; of extraction, or, both. Various medicated dressings are used in the socket for the dual purpose of promoting healing and relieving pain.

I am not, of course, a dentist, and would not pretend to have the fine points of treating such a case. However, a very dry socket is very sharp pain, in suitable cases, dental surgeons sometimes smooth the sharp, bony edges of the socket. This may also suture the soft tissues if that is necessary.

A dry socket can be a painful condition, but it is not necessarily a fatal one.

Rather than try to create the information into a column or two, I wrote a booklet on this topic. It is available to readers for a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents in coin. "Dear Dr. Molner: I have never read anything in your column about 'floaters' in the eye. Please write something about this. W. M."

I know what you mean by "floaters" in the eye. They seem to move around in the eye. Probably most of the people who are reading this have noted the same thing. It's very common.

The best way to deal with all I can say is this: The significance varies. Often the only cause is an innocent little bubble or particle floating in the fluid of the eyeball.

Other times "floaters" may be due to a degeneration in the eye itself. If the trouble persists, an eye examination by the doctor to find out whether the floaters mean nothing or Griseofulvin. It is also useful for fungus infections other than in the nails. It is produced under various proprietary trade names, but since it is a drug available only on prescription, you still must have your doctor give you an order for it.

"Dear Dr. Molner: I have inherited or acquired? My mother and two sister also have one as I do. It's on the finger of my right hand, against which I rest a pen or pencil. It is most unbecoming. I would like to know how I can get rid of it painlessly if possible. — E. F."

Anybody who writes a lot will develop a callus from the pressure. A dark say some people may be more sensitive to this than others. All the same the callus is acquired. Personally I don't know of any practical way of removing this thickened skin, but like any callus, it will soften and gradually go away if consistently relieved of pressure. — can you hold a pen or pencil in some different manner, so it doesn't press against the callus? Self-adhesive cushioning the least possible pressure ought to help, too.

Neon Signs Confusing

Christian Science Monitor

Those Japanese police officials who are being ridiculed in Tokyo for their attempts to establish on bilingual road signs need not feel badly. Bureaucrats have grew up speaking English sometimes do little better.

For one thing we see signs in British, Australia or the United States reading "Give Way," meaning, the intent of the police actually is to prevent parking. One sign is hard to provide some upon anything quite in the Japanese version, "Right Turn Only" or "Keep Left Outside."

But the syntax of road-sign English in the native haunts of the language is also sometimes puzzling. In one road sign warning this was quaint; today it is more often a hazardous—especially for the man caught in the middle lane of an eight-lane highway.

Any conference of highway officials ought to discuss the differences between communities should also attempt to draw up a model law and code regulating the proper size, color and placement of signs, and, just as important, the best means of preventing interferences by gaudier, larger, more attractive commercial signs.

It may be possible to puzzle out what "Right Turn Toward Immediate outside means, but not if it calls for a split all because of flashing neon signs.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARK

Now that spring is coming, an old retired friend was telling my acquaintance who spends his time gardening and keeping his lawns and premises in order and tidy at a new policy. He is free once more to sit in his rocking chair on the screened verandah and shoot peas at dogs. He has a new pea-shooter already and he keeps a pocket full of dried peas. Let the dog bark, he says, he is at his lawn, and "pfft", the dog is on his way, howling. It does not hurt the dog. They just astonish it.

"Inside of fifteen years," says my old friend, "what with all the changes brought about by such books like "Lady Chatterley's Lover" and these frank paperbacks, the wording of our by-laws about dogs is going to be more phlnly phrased. We say now that dogs are not allowed to run at large, but we don't mean that. What we mean is we don't want strange dogs soiling and polluting our property. Along this street there are dozens of dogs and four different ladies who come along with their dogs and for no purpose whatever but to have the dogs defile somebody else's property than their own. Of all the barefaced swindles!"

For the last three years, nobody will be allowed a dog license who hasn't adequate property on which the dog can be exercised and confined. And anybody who allows a dog to soil anybody's else's property will be made to come and clean it up!

THOSE WHO AWAKEN US

How grateful we should be to those who awaken us to love to those who bring us so much of happiness.

Many people appreciate it all that they ask!

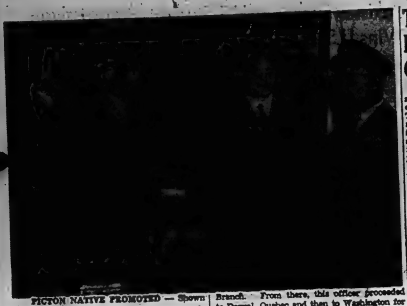
Not the priceless things in this world are those without intrinsic value.

A man's estate can be figured in value to the penny, but what is a dainty violet upon a generous heart? Greater than any compounding of interest is the increase of worth in a fine character.

As I write I look upon my walls and see pictures by those who have long gone to their quiet slumber. Their love of the beautiful lives on though through everyone who is inspired by what they left.

STRENGTH for the DAY

BY EARL L. DOUGLASS



NOTHING CAN MAKE IT WORK

Communism cannot be made to work and no one knows that quite so well as the intelligent Christian statesman who has been all through this sort of thing in history of the Christian Church.

The early believers in Jerusalem, went far beyond anything the Lord had commanded them. They gave up their individual property and held all goods in common. The result was that they were soon on the starvation list. They had tried communism — not political communism but spiritual communism — and it had failed. St. Paul started a round among the gentile churches and collected money from people who lived under a system of free enterprise (today called capitalism), and hurried these funds to Jerusalem to keep the misguided Christian communists from starving to death.

Communism is a heavy-handed political system is an outrage against human dignity. Communism as an economic system is pure bosh-pous. It has never been successful in any area it never can be made to work. The problem is not private enterprise compulsual ownership; that is one reason why they remain savages. It is not people learning anything, they begin operating economically and commercially on the basis of free enterprise. They establish the system known as capitalism.

Communism shouldn't be supressed! It should simply have the club wrested from it hands and be allowed to collapse of its own dead weight.

SCIENCE FAIR

Miss Beverly Davies and Miss Elizabeth Corke, of Belleville, are attending the Science Fair being held in Toronto.

Beverly Davies is exhibiting one of her science projects at the fair. It received first prize at the Belleville Science Fair.

Vota Vita M.C. Topic 'Work For Retarded'

The March meeting of the Vota Vita Mission Circle of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church was held at the Belleville School for Retarded Children, with Joan Low's group in charge.

In keeping with Easter season Grace Smith read a poem entitled, "Calgary."

Mrs. Woodcock spoke for devotion year "Hands Beautiful?" in which she described the significance of the hands of Christ as being hands of brotherhood, hands of power and tenderness and hands of reassurance.

GUEST SPEAKER

The guest speaker was Mr. T. Stovell, research chairman of the Belleville Association for Retarded Children and Director of Region 10 (Brockville, Trenton and adjoining towns). His address on work being done to help retarded children in the district and across Ontario, was most informative and was an indication of the accomplishments of a few inspired people in which a group of Toronto parents united and began teaching 50 or so children and, in 1952, the Ontario Association for Retarded Children was formed. Similar groups have been organized in other Ontario communities. "The Association looks after children who are denied the right to enter public school. Mental retardation is not a disease, it is a condition."

Classes were held, at Pine Street School in Belleville until the present building was purchased. Mr. Stovell told of support given by the Belleville Lions Club, and of the need to help adult retarded in the city, about 18 in number.

FILM SHOWN

A film entitled, "Eternal Children," left a lasting impression with all. It showed retarded children in schools and institutions in Canada, at work and at play, and a workshop for adults in the Toronto area.

Much interest was shown during a tour of the bright, newly-decorated classrooms and in work done by pupils of various ages.

Ruth Campbell expressed appreciation to Mr. Stovell on behalf of Circle members.

A business meeting and social period followed.

Mr., Mrs. Thomas Emerson Mark 50 Years of Married Life

Wedding bells rang merrily again for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Emerson, of Station Street, when they were honored guests at a turkey dinner sponsored by their brothers and sister, on Wednesday, March 29th, commemorating their golden wedding anniversary.

The dining room was beautifully decorated with yellow and peach-colored chrysanthemums, yellow roses and spring flowers — gifts of relatives and friends. The table, bountifullyladened with good things, and prettily appointed with a wedding anniversary cloth of ribbon and bells with golden streamers, was centred with a lovely one-tier anniversary cake topped by a tiny bride and bridegroom beneath an arch of yellow roses.

MARRIED IN 1911

Fifty years ago on March 29th, 1911, in Thomasburg, Ontario, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Adams, their daughter Lucy, became the bride of Thomas Emerson, son of the late James and Isabell Emerson, of Thomasburg, with the Rev. J. Connell, officiating.

The flower girl, of 50 years ago, now Mrs. Robert Rollins, of Plainfield, was also present on this anniversary day, and wore the golden locket given her by the bride of so long ago. The wedding music on that occasion was provided by Miss Christina Hollinger, who also was responsible for creating the lovely bridal gown.

SNOW AND RAIN

Mr. Emerson remembers that there was quite a lot of snow on the ground but later that day it poured rain as he took his bride, by horse and buggy, to her new home on the farm beside the Moira River east of Thomasburg. In those days, Mr. Emerson remarked, wedding trips were not as popular as they now are."

For many years they farmed in the Thomasburg district, later selling out, they moved to the village and last year after selling their village home, moved to 196 Station Street, where they now reside.

Among the numerous gifts and cards of congratulations and best wishes which they received, was a plaque from the provincial secretary, at Toronto.

But all this activity has its price tag, says Betty.

"I work through Saturday and Sunday nights to make up for lost time."

WEAVING LOOMS

There are 17,000 mechanical, 160,000 semi-mechanical and 800,000 primitive weaving looms in Indonesia.

Peterborough Girl Tinkers With Motors

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP)—Betty Eviidge, one of the few accredited women outboard motor mechanics in North America, is hard at work preparing for the summer tourist season.

Betty, 30, is busy with her father and brother overhauling some 150 outboard motors and maintaining a line of chain saws and power mowers.

Tinkering with small motors is a hobby as well as a living for Betty. She got started in the business in 1956 when her father suggested: "Stop talking motors and get busy on them in the back shop after hours."

Then she followed up with a factory course that summer in Toronto—the only female in a class of 15 and the only successful one, to date. She has taken advanced courses each year since then.

For recreation Betty occasionally rides a motorcycle and in between dates she manages to ski and play the guitar, violin and bass fiddle. But her chief joy is working in the outboard motor pits during summer race meets.

Although she owns two motors, six racing propellers and a special tool set, Betty has no boat of her own.

Short Courses In Christian Study Urged

TORONTO—What the United Church of Canada needs right now is a crash-type, good one-year course in Christian education for high school graduates — especially girls," says an editorial in the current issue of the United Church Observer.

Pointing out that scores of young people could be put to work immediately in congregations of the church if such a course were available, The Observer points out that "there are indications that scores could be recruited for a one-year course who are not going to volunteer for work requiring five or six years' training."

The United Church Training School now requires for admission to its two-year course, a university degree or professional equivalent, or special training with some years of experience.

The Observer says that leadership training schools of the United Church are turning out some full-time workers, but their purpose is to provide leadership rather than full workers. Professional training is not their field.

The church journal states that in hundreds of congregations, Christian education work isn't being done at all. In others it is done by lay people with no training, or overworked ministers with little/time, aptitude or energy.

"Let's face it," says the Observer, "there is a desperate need for Christian education workers . . . there are candidates for this kind of training . . . there's a school where they could be trained . . . but there's no course."

Miss A. Francis To Speak Here

Miss Anne Francis will be the guest speaker at the annual meeting of the Women's Canadian Club next Monday evening. Her topic will be "Personalities Around the World."

Miss Francis was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and was educated in Agnes Irwin School and Bryn Mawr College. She has travelled extensively in Europe, the West Indies, the Middle East, Germany and Pakistan and began lecturing on International Affairs in the 1930's. She has been giving news commentaries on national networks and international service on the CBC since 1940.

Among her extra-curricular activities she has an interest in social work and was a former board member of the Winnipeg Junior League and chairman of the Editorial Board of the Canadian Welfare Magazine.

Miss Francis was the only woman member of the Canadian delegation to the UNESCO Conference in New Delhi, in 1956.

DIRECTOR GENERAL

The Director General of the program is Mr. Dayton Stoddard, of New York City. There are two programs for the American students, and the incoming program which includes 6 weeks of study and the school program which includes six months of study in different countries such as Europe, Australia, New Zealand and South America.

Miss Randeria is staying with her American parent-families, and has two Lions Laitinen, the daughters Joanne and Barbara of Detroit, Michigan.

She studies in a public high school in Detroit, an average American school of 3,000 students. The school is one of the oldest in the city of Detroit.

Miss Randeria plans to return to Pakistan in late summer and resume her studies of foreign affairs in College.

She has been a pen pal of Miss Judy Whitmore of Frankford, for the past two years.

Miss Vlasta Rabel has a pen pal, Miss Zarin Mody, cousin of Miss Randeria, in Pakistan. Miss Eleanor Beach has a pen pal, Miss Thrity Kapadia in Pakistan and Miss Ann Beach, a pen pal, Miss Bapsian Cama Mody in Pakistan, cousins of Miss Randeria.

Easter Monday evening, a number of young high school students gathered at the home of Miss Judy Whitmore in honor of her guest, Miss Zarin Randeria of Pakistan. Zarin wore her national dress, the sari for the happy occasion. Her story was recorded on tape.

Records were played during the evening and after a happy time together, refreshments were served by Mrs. J. Whitmore.

Progressive Euchre Held By Quinte WI

SND SIDNEY — The Bay of Quinte Institute held a progressive euchre party last Thursday evening at Harder's School, with a nice number present.

There were nine tables of euchre with the first prize for ladies going to Mrs. Frank White and the first prize for men going to Charles St. Hilaire, of Frankford. Consolation prizes went to Mrs. John Howe and Fred St. Hilaire. The lucky cup was won by Mrs. Ernest Curtis.

At the close of the games, the little tables were put in two rows and lunch was enjoyed.

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three social workers and a visitor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.

Debby W. — I want my sister to take care of Rory so I can go to Switzerland.

Phyllis A. — The baby hardly knows me. He's too young to leave so long.

• • •

Debby W. — My husband and I have the most wonderful opportunity to go to Europe this summer, if only Phyllis would agree to come in from Wisconsin and baby sit.

There's a convention in Geneva and Dick's firm is paying our expenses as a delegate. For a few hundred dollars more, I could go along and we could see Europe together on the way to Spain.

My sister really owes this to me. Before Rory was born, I took care of Sherry for her honeymoon, and Lenny fell the thing. But she turns me down now, with some rather lame excuses.

Phyllis A. — It's not that I'm refusing to help Debby. I'd do anything for her. All I'm trying her now is to forget about going away so far and so long while Rory is only 2 ½ years old.

A child so young doesn't know what's happened when his parents go on a vacation and you can't explain it to him. A friend of mine has an emotionally disturbed child and the doctor traces it back to when the child was separated from her mother during hospitalizations. The little one cried her heart out.

To make matters worse Debby expects a new baby in half a year. She'd have to leave Rory again. But that would be easier to handle.

The Council — "Go now, pay later" can have a very special meaning, as Phyllis warns, for mothers who, just fade away, out of sight of their pre-school-ers. "Stay now, go later" is our advice for Debby.

Of course, when there's no choice in the matter, there's no argument. However, illness, damage or accidental loss of sentimental "needs," children — all these can make a profound appreciation of mother and child inevitable. And while he will suffer some pangs of conscience, no matter how adequate the substitute mothering the vanished treasure will prove to be, and how so he comes to understand the answer to "Was this trip necessary?"

But since Debby's absence is optional and psychologically harmful to remind her that pediatricians and psychologists strongly urge that his mother stick around, especially when the child is between one and six. There's a nice scientific explanation for this: In the months immediately following birth, the mother-child tie is "symbiotic" or resembling two lives in one body. After the first year, however, it becomes "dialogic" where the child must take longer and longer strides away, but always with mother as the starting point. Interruptions in this process can be disturbing and bewildering.

Young Rory, let us add, can have no sense of time, nor can he detect assurances that mother and dad will be back "soon." While we doubt that a serious emotional disturbance can be traced solely to a mother's unexplained absence, we agree with Phyllis that a very young child may well feel deserted and slow itself in devious ways for years to come.

No, Debby. There'll be other conventions. Watch for one in Denmark. Then you and Dick can take both kids to play in the Tivoli Gardens.

SEEKS LARGER GRANTS

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Welfare Council has petitioned Welfare Minister Louis Cecile for increased grants to private homes for the aged. Private and public homes operating under the Homes for the Homes for the Aged Act received rising demand for foster care. In the case of private homes delays in providing care resulted from financial considerations.

QUESTION BOX

Question — When a young lady's parents are divorced and her mother remarries, is it correct that she call this man her stepfather, even though her own father is still living? I enjoy your column and read it religiously. — Mrs. D. S., Chicago, Ill.

Answer — Because your own father is living, you must, for the sake of clarity, refer to your mother's new husband as your stepfather. It is correct, I know, but how else can you make it clear what the relationship is? Thanks for your kind words about the column.

Question — I went to a cocktail party the other evening and was greeted at the door by my hostess. She was clutching a drink in one hand and had a cigaret in the other. She wiggled her little finger at me and laughed about not having any hand to shake with. Her husband, who was across the room talking with a bunch of men, didn't even recognize our arrival. It all seemed a very rude way to greet guests, and I was wondering if I am wrong thinking this way. What are your opinions on this subject? — Mrs. W. E., San Antonio, Texas.

Answer — Your hosts were absolutely wrong in their whole approach. It is extremely rude for the hostess — or host, for that matter — to greet guests with a drink and cigaret in hand. To begin with, both should be near the door to greet all guests until the final one arrives. Then they may mingle and enjoy their own party. The clever and good host drinks sparingly, if at all, at his own party. The first obligation is the pleasure of his guests, not his own.

Successful Living

Injured Arm Causes Despair

DORIS CLARK

DEAR DORIS:—My sister had a third degree burn through smoking a cigaret in bed. (She fell asleep and the bedclothes caught on fire.) It has taken months for her to get better and now the muscles in her right arm, which got the worst of it, are very weak.

From being an active business woman she sits around and acts as if life was over. The doctor tells her it is up to her to 'get action back into her arm, but she says she expects pain. Is there any way that I can get her going again?—OLDER SISTER.

DEAR OLDER SISTER:—Such a crippling burn can be a terrible blow to so active person. Months of pain and brooding can bring on feelings of hopelessness. Your sister is afraid to try because of a paralyzing fear of failure. She needs new hope. . .

Ask her doctor to refer her to the physiotherapy clinic at your hospital. There she will be taught how to gradually bring strength back into her arm. Make a point of talking to the therapist yourself, so that you will understand what your sister is up against and how best to encourage her. An important part of physiotherapy is teaching the patient how to develop her own exercise routines and you can help here. . .

DEAR DORIS:—Because I am stuck at home with two children, my husband has been doing the shopping. He is a grand sport about this and if is a real help to me. But I find I have to account for every fifteen cents. I never squander money but it does get boring to be treated like a sort of careless servant.—STAY-AT-HOME.

DEAR STAY-AT-HOME:—Why stay at home? Look at the fun the folks have who make the weekly shopping spree a family affair! Buggies with baby-seats give the little ones a free ride at a good level for seeing things. Peas and mama often have one each. . . When you shop together and share the spending there isn't the need to explain every cent; you both know where the money went.

Then too, you miss many bargains and new ideas about meats and other menu items. Keep up to date by seeing the stores.

You might try to work out a budget together so that there is a set amount to spend on groceries and a set amount for you to have on hand for everyday expenses. Share the problems and the answers and you'll stop feeling criticized.

DEAR DORIS:—My 14-year-old daughter has a classmate who is going to a camp in Muskoka for a month this summer. She is coaxing to go. We have a nice summer place and I want her to be with us. What do you think?—COTTAGER.

DEAR COTTAGER:—Be glad you have freed her enough that she is eager for the adventure of camp, rather than afraid to leave home and mother.

A camping experience with friends of her own age can do wonders for a girl. There she will learn to mix, to share fun and responsibility; to abide by rules and to acquire new and delightful skills. In the out of doors, in our congenial Canadian summer, many a miracle has been wrought with our teen-agers.

Find out about the camp in question. Be sure it has good standards, then pack her off by all means.

* * *

(Doris Clark will be glad to help you with your problems. Write to her care of this paper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Women's Institute

MELROSE W. I.

The Melrose W.I. convened at the Melrose hall for the March meeting with Mrs. F. Bush and Mrs. S. Lanier as hostesses. Mrs. K. McMechan presided with Mrs. Bush kindly acting as secretary in the absence of Mrs. E. Pascoe.

During the business session, several cards of thanks for gifts were read and a nominating committee, consisting of Mrs. R. McAren, Mrs. R. Fox and Mrs. J. McFarlane, was chosen to bring in the slate of officers at the annual meeting in April.

Mrs. C. Weese reported on the recent district executive meeting and announced the district annual to be held at Canniffton, May 16. Each girls' club is to display three skirts made during their last course. Mrs. A. English stated that arrangements for catering at the Ploughing Match were proceeding in an orderly fashion. The radio and TV survey was tabulated and handed to the public relations convener, Mrs. J. M. Lazier.

At this stage, Mrs. J. McFarlane, leader for this month, opened her part of the program with community singing, after which Mrs. C. Bates (Jr.) presented current comments on the motto, "It Won't help your crop to sit on the fence and count your neighbor's weeds." If one cultivates tolerance, love and understanding they will never dream of a weed on the other side of the fence.

Mrs. J. McLaren gave a reading, "Marjorie," which was the name given a farm animal that became a great pet and was involved in several human episodes.

DISCUSSION PERIOD

The highlight of the evening was a well prepared discussion on "Why Boys and Girls Leave the Farm," which proved most interesting with Mrs. V. Pascoe acting as moderator and Mrs. E. Badgley and Mrs. J. McFarlane stating the pros and cons. There has been a great deal of controversy on the air, press and TV concerning this subject, and both town and country have their advantages as well as disadvantages. A few points mentioned were: the great difference in working hours, the farmer being more or less his own boss in a way, but he is regulated by the weather; beauty nature seems to be his boss. The factory worker does the same thing over and over, while the farmer has a wide variety of jobs to break the monotony. The higher pay cheque of the city is a special inducement for farm boys and girls as it gives them a new independence. The farmer-husband and wife work shoulder to shoulder, understanding the perplexities of the other whereas the city wives have only a dim notion of their husband's work. Other items dealt with were: a suitable wage for hired help, the deficiency payment plan, higher education, expensive business to equip a farm with mechanical machinery, recreation, need for parental guidance, the great help given by 4-H Clubs. Remember, "Just as the twig is bent, the tree is inclined," so let us hope farm-life will continue to flourish and may the young generation remain undisturbed in the soil."

RUBE ORCHESERA

Much merriment was created by six ladies wearing wide straw-hats who composed a "Rube Orchestra," with instruments construed from farm and hand tools. In spite of their futile endeavors it was discovered that a full set was producing the music.

Mrs. L. McLaren conducted a "contest on "Farm Tools and Implements," which was won by Mrs. E. Badgley. Mrs. English followed with a timely poem, "Time Saved," and the leader read a short paragraph on "Peace."

Throughout the evening the variations and humor of the different numbers promoted a jovial spirit of comradeship which is so outstanding in institute gatherings.

The president reminded all of the 60th anniversary of East Hastings District on April 19.

Lunch was served.

WHAT EVERY MOTHER SHOULD KNOW

...about mattresses for teen-agers

RESIST THAT "HAND-ME-DOWN" TEMPTATION!

When you and Dad get a new mattress—sure it's a temptation to hand down the old one to your teen-ager. Don't do it! Because hand-me-downs could let your teen-ager down. They tend to sag in the middle, pull the body out of line during all those sleeping hours in formative years.

The best's the best for Junior (or Junior-ette) when it comes to sleeping equipment. Designed in cooperation with orthopedic surgeons, the Posturepedic gives buoyant, healthfully firm support . . . keeps the body properly aligned . . . helps develop fine daytime posture during hours of comfortable sleep.

GET ONE THAT CAN STAND UP UNDER PRESSURE!

You can't expect a cheap mattress to take a beating like this—for very long, that is. Perhaps a spring pokes through, ticking tears, the edges sag. Quality, naturally, costs more in the beginning. But it pays! That's why you'll want to take a look at a mattress for your teen-ager (or yourself) that is never cut price. And never cut-quality either! The Posturepedic is quality-built through and through—springs, padding, ticking, tailoring. No stinting on anything ever in a Posturepedic—made only by Sealy!

GET ONE SHE CAN TAKE WITH HER!

Practically as good as new . . . years from now . . . ready to go along when she furnishes her first home. That's a Posturepedic! Guaranteed for at least ten years . . . twenty if you buy a matching foundation. You could never expect this of a cheap mattress.

So you see, a Posturepedic is actually the most economical buy—all things considered: comfort, healthful support, long wear. The best 'buy by far! It's always just $79.50. And, of course, you can see your dealer about terms. DO—soon!

The best's the best for teen-agers, too...

Epicurean Stuffing For Broiler Halves

By Mary Moore

Just before we left for the South we had guests for dinner and I sprung on them a new method of cooking chickens. It was such a success that I am going to try the same idea with veal later on.

It is a novel method of stuffing halves of broilers or breasts of chicken. It is on the extravagant side so serve it for some special event.

MUSHROOM-STUFFED BROILERS:

(NOTE: The five broiler halves I bought each weighed slightly over one pound. I think the servings were too large. If you can buy broiler halves weighing less or not more than a pound do so. Or you may use chicken breasts from roasting chickens.

To serve 5 you will also need: 1-3 cup table cream, 1-3 pound mushrooms, 1-3 cup whole blanched almonds, 2 tablespoons butter, 1-3 cup dry white cooking wine (optional), salt and black pepper. Use 1-4 cup of the cream for brushing all over the skin surfaces and cavities of the chicken. Sprinkle generously with salt and not so generously with pepper. Pour the wine (of if not used pour 1-3 cup water) into broiler pan (or two shallow baking dishes) and place prepared chicken halves, skin side up on it and bake in preheated oven at 325 deg. Fahr. for 1 1-2 hours, basting 2 or 3 times with pan liquid.

Meanwhile prepare Stuffing: Wash, well and chop finely the mushrooms and saute lightly in the melted butter for 2 minutes. Add remaining 1-4 cup cream. Now add the almonds which have been put through finest knife of grinder twice to reduce them to powder. The finely ground almonds have thickening power. As you stir them in you will see the mushroom-cream mixture thicken. Add salt and pepper to make this quite flavorful. After chicken pieces have baked 1 1-2 hours turn them over and put the stuffing in the cavities and sprinkle with paprika and chopped fresh parsley. You may raise the heat to brown them a little — maybe 10 minutes. Or if you would like to delay serving time reduce heat to 250 deg. Fahr. for 1-2 hour or so.

We had a great old chicken feed and we all finished up picking the bones up in our fingers. In fact extra napkins and finger bowls were brought on!

I served this with glazed carrots and poppy seed noodles; windsblown cake with caramel-almond topping and an interesting version of citrus fruit cup with green mint jelly cubes. You will hear more about these two dessert items next week.

Canada Short of Doctors, Medical Students, New Ones Said Not Brilliant Enough

TORONTO (CP) — Canada is faced with the compound problem of an inadequate doctor supply and too few applicants entering medical schools, of the new applicants not enough are brilliant.

This is the consensus of articles in the current issue of the Canadian Medical Association Journal, devoted almost entirely to the education of physicians.

The writers of the articles, all prominent Canadian doctors, probe deeply into the problem and find a variety of ills.

Chief causes are changes in disease patterns, hospital and medical facilities and economic conditions. The soaring cost of a medical education and the drop in prestige suffered by doctors in recent years are also given as chief difficulties.

SEES NO INCREASE

Dr. J. S. Thompson assistant dean of medicine of the University of Alberta, says there will be no increase in the number of medical graduates during the next three years, and "too many students of low academic potential are being registered and not enough brilliant ones."

Dr. J. A. MacFarlane, dean of the University of Toronto's medical faculty, says enough confidence in the doctors who have registered to practice in Canada during the last five years are graduates of other than Canadian schools.

Dr. Thompson suggests recruiting of new doctors might be aided by arrangements for free or greatly-reduced tuition for the last two years of the course. He estimates total expenses for a four-year medical course between $6,000 and $7,000.

If the recruiting of students can be stimulated, there are still other obstacles. One is the fundamental need for two types of doctors—the general practitioner and the specialist or research worker.

Dr. F. V. Stotz, medical director of the Canada Life Assurance Company, London Ont., suggests two separate schools for the two curricula be set up, not necessarily in the same city.

Where-is-also concern over the decreasing number of patients available for doctor training.

Hard-to-Place Children Being Readily Taken

TORONTO (CP)—There has been a "phenomenal" acceptance of hard-to-place children since Ontario started its wantad adoption program, Welfare Minister Cecile said Wednesday.

He said that since the department began advertising hard-to-place children for adoption in April, 1959, there has been an obvious trend towards placement of older-age groups as compared to "young" adoptions.

In 1960, adoptions of children three years and under dropped by 522 compared to the previous year and adoptions in the older age groups increased by 203. In the four- to six-year group, adoptions increased by 113; in the seven- to 12-year group by 165, and in the 13- to 20-year group by 27.

Adoptions of all age groups last year totalled 1,098 a compared to 3,278 adoptions in 1959. Adoptions totalled 4,334 in 1958, the year before the wanted kid program started.

Hard- to - place children are those who are handicapped, of mixed racial origin or in the older age groups.

Teachers Told Not to Panic If Student Leaves School Because He Is Sick of It

TORONTO (CP) — An education research specialist told guidance teachers Wednesday not to panic if a student drops out of school because he is tired of it.

Dr. W. G. Fleming of the research department, Ontario College of Education, said there was cause for alarm only if students dropped out in large numbers.

He was speaking to the personnel guidance section of the Ontario Educational Association. Some 10,000 delegates are attending the association's convention and the annual Catholic Education Conference.

C. M. Johnston, history professor at McMaster University, Hamilton, said Grade 13 should be made a year of advanced study. Teachers and counsellors should be released from the burdens of examinations to explore new ideas.

Dr. Cicely Burke, mathematics theorist at Indiana University, told the association's elementary school section that parents who consistently reward and encourage their children for classroom achievements are being over protective.

A. H. McCarthy, assistant superintendent of Ontario secondary education, said Grade 13 departments in high schools have been successful, but are supplementary to regular examinations. He added that eight out of 10 departmental marks correspond with the teacher's grades.

The separate school section of the Ontario School Trustees and Ratepayers Association authorized Hardy Advertising Limited firm to present the "true story" of the financial picture of separate school boards to the public. Meeting as part of the Educational Association, delegates said the decision was not to be construed as "antagonistic" to public school boards.

The Trustees and Ratepayers section recommended that high school district board members be elected rather than appointed by municipal councils. Under existing legislation, many councils appoint high school district boards that become part of the corporate body with power to borrow and spend money without responsibility to councils and taxpayers.

Teachers have acquired a wealth of knowledge through educational research but still have the problem of figuring out how to use it, Dr. Cecil F. Collins, Canadian Education Association told OEA delegates.

He said research has not yet made the required contribution to education. No definite conclusions could be made about a student's level of intelligence or achievement capacity.

A Steel Company of Canada executive said office clerks will have to be given more promotion in the future unless they have university degrees. F. J. R. Watson, the company's general supervisor of methods and procedures, told the Ontario Commercial Teachers' annual convention that the computer age requires "thinking" clerks.

Herbert A. Stowat, former president of the United Nations Association of Canada, said evidence in The Congo stems from the communist theme in Belgians at the turn of the century. He told the OEA's elementary school section.

The OEA's Rural Township School area passed a resolution urging Ontario's education department to devise a more suitable way to observe Remembrance Day or to drop the two minutes' entirely. The resolution said the Nov. 11 holiday should be kept and a two-minute silence observed instead.

The Trustees' and Ratepayers' Association plans to ask the Ontario education department to approve trustee pay. At present, district high school board members receive $300 a year, but other trustees are not paid.

Kennedy Deeply Concerned Over Weakness of Alliances

Canadian Press Staff Writer

President Kennedy is reported to be deeply concerned over what he considers to be a developing weakness in the west's work of Western alliances built up mainly to stop Communist aggression.

Privately, he feels the situation may worsen before it gets better. His present main course of action is to try to strengthen unity of purpose among the three top Western powers—the United States, Britain and France.

This concern has been deepened by the Laotian crisis.

The eight-power Southeast Asia Treaty organization last week stated that if the Communists attempt to take Laos by force, the SEATO powers would take "whatever action may be appropriate." France refused to be part of any stronger statement.

But to critics who suggested the decision was a sign of weak, U. S. Secretary of State Dean Rusk replied that the statement was "all that is needed." His associates sought to allay public fears that in the event of a military showdown, the United States would not count on France for support and would get only reluctant support from Britain.

This is seemed from the surface that SEATO was still strong and determined. But now it is known that in Kennedy's private view, this just isn't so.

It is known to have concluded from various confidential statements made by French diplomats that France has had enough of war in Southeast Asia.

Kennedy's view that the Allies must work together closely is reflected in the importance he attaches to his current talks with Prime Minister Macmillan and with the talks he will hold in Paris with President de Gaulle May 31.

Undoubtedly he also will attempt to use all the persuasion he can, to help stiffen Western unity, when he confers with Prime Minister Diefenbaker at Ottawa May 16-18 and when he meets Chancellor Adenauer here next week.

Prime Minister Will Address Canadian Club

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Macmillan will address the Canadian Club and hold a press conference during his two - day visit to Ottawa next week, Prime Minister Diefenbaker announced Wednesday.

The British leader and Lady Dorothy Macmillan will arrive by air Sunday at 5:55 p.m. and stay at Government House, residence of Governor - General Vanier.

Mr. Macmillan will confer with Mr. Diefenbaker at 11 a.m. Monday in the Parliament Buildings.

United Kingdom High Commissioner Sir Saville Garner and Lady Garner will give a luncheon for Commonwealth high commissioners and their wives at 1 p.m., and at 6 p.m. Mr. Macmillan will attend a reception in the Parliament Buildings, Governor - General and Mrs. Vanier will be hosts.

Tuesday Mr. Macmillan will meet the Canadian cabinet at 11:30 a.m., address the Canadian Club at 12:30 p.m., confer with Mr. Diefenbaker again at 3 p.m., and hold a press conference at 5:15 p.m. Following a reception at Sir Saville Garner's residence, Mr. Macmillan will attend a reception at the home of Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

The Macmillans leave Ottawa by air at 8 a.m. Wednesday.

Policy Change On Immigration Not Likely

OTTAWA (CP)—No change in Canadian immigration policy is likely to result from Prime Minister Macmillan's talks with Prime Minister Diefenbaker here next week, officials said Wednesday.

In fact, the question may not even be raised.

Officials said they were surprised by reports from Jamaica during Mr. Macmillan's visit there last week that he intended to raise the question of West Indies immigration into Canada and the United States during his visits to Washington and Ottawa.

An immigration department official said West Indies emigrants are admitted to Canada under the same rules that apply to all other British subjects. The difficulty is that they must have the skills or promise of training that will enable them to fit themselves into the Canadian community.

French-Language Version Of Canadian History Being Made for Separate Schools

WINDSOR (CP)—The French Association of Ontario Wednesday voted $500 toward a French-language version of Canadian history to be used in Ontario separate schools.

Rev. Oyner Deslauriers of Ottawa, association representative to the Ontario Teachers Federation, told several hundred French - speaking delegates to the annual meeting that three books of the six - part history have been finished. He said the complete text will be in use within two years.

Authors are Bro. Charles and Bro. Leon of the Freres des ecoles Chretienne, and Lucian Brault, historian and archivist for the federal government, all of Ottawa.

Father Oyner said the text will receive financial backing of the Ontario department of education.

The association is one of eight in Canada giving bilingual groups meeting here in conjunction with the annual meeting of the French-Canadian Education Association.

More than 1,200 delegates and wives, representing Ontario's 300,000 French - speaking residents, are attending sessions which end Friday.

French educationists said the texts will prompt wider use of French and present the French point of view. An English history of Canada will be used with the French.

A resolution also asked that salaries of separate school teachers be increased to that of public school teachers. They now are about 25 - per - cent lower.

The Association of Bilingual School Inspectors opened a review of the entire field of French - Canadian education. Most delegates stressed higher standards of teacher admissions.

The French-Canadian Parent Teachers Association of Ontario discussed obscene literature but failed to reach any conclusions.

Discussion, all in French, arose when delegates considered a resolution urging the association to fight against such literature. The move was defeated when delegates said they had no definition of obscene literature.

CARRIED TO FREEDOM

HONG KONG (AP)—Cancer-stricken Robert McCann, 60,—of Pasadena, Calif., reached this British colony today after spending nearly 10 years in prison in Communist China. He was carried across the border from Red China on a stretcher. McCann, sentenced in 1951 to 15 years in prison on espionage charges, was reported dying of lung cancer and released by Peking.

Two More Cubans Executed As Castro Govt. Bears Down Against Regime Insurgents

HAVANA (AP) — Firing squads executed two more Cubans in La Cabana fortress today, raising to 601 the unofficial total of persons executed by Prime Minister Fidel Castro's regime since he took power Jan. 1, 1959.

Those were Carlos Manuel Delgado, convicted of shooting a close friend of economic czar Ernesto (Che) Guevara, and Dalmacio Palmero Bolet, accused of planting bombs in movie theatres and other buildings. They were condemned by separate military tribunals Wednesday.

Delgado was convicted of killing Carlos Gutierrez last month in suburban Mariamar, 15 miles from residence owned by Guevara. The slaying led to speculation that an attempt had been made to assassinate Guevara but this was not mentioned in the trial.

Government prosecutors said Delgado fled after being stopped by Castro militiamen at a road-block in suburban Santa Amalia.

Palmero Bolet, 40 unlike most of Cuba's largest sugar mills, formerly the American-owned Hershey mill, 40 miles east of Havana. Damage was estimated at $1 million.

Meanwhile, the Castro regime announced it had smashed two counter-revolutionary bands operating in Oriente province and captured 21 insurgents.

The ministry of armed forces were supplied by the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay. Similar charges in the past have been denied by U.S. officials.

The government said Castro intelligence agents had broken up a plot for an uprising Feb. 16 and captured the leaders. The government said four counter-revolutionists and two militiamen were killed and an army lieutenant and seven militiamen wounded.

Junior Mayor Will Not Seek Federal Aid

DUNDAS (CP) — The administration of this Hamilton suburb is not a d illipuitian comicality Wednesday.

The 23 - year - old mayor declaimed "Heck no!" at the thought of asking for federal and provincial help to solve his 40 - child unemployment problem.

He promptly whittled the total down to 37 by signing up three workless constituents as unemployment commissioner and deputies.

Dundas is not always like this — only on the annual Junior Citizens' Day. This was the third.

Two hundred and five children from Grade 8 classes in the town's six public and separate schools converged on city hall, ousted the incumbents and gained a unique insight into town business.

The junior mayor was Gary Curran. He was chosen last month by winning an essay contest. Other positions—mayor police chief, fire chief, fire men, garbage collectors, dog catcher, town planner, councillors, reeves, clerks and even the switchboard operator—were chosen by running bands operating in Oriente province and captured 21 insurgents.

The ministry of armed forces were supplied by the U.S. naval base at Guantanamo Bay. Similar charges in the past have been denied by U.S. officials.

The government said Castro intelligence agents had broken up a plot for an uprising Feb. 16 and captured the leaders. The government said four counter-revolutionists and two militiamen were killed and an army lieutenant and seven militiamen wounded.

White and Green Flag Was Work Of Idealist

OTTAWA (CP) — The red white and green flag that flew in front of the Supreme Court building Wednesday was the creation of an 18-year-old "Canadian Idealist" working with one of his mother's best bed sheets.

Peter Hargreaves, a student at Glebe Collegiate, said he placed the home-made banner on the 105-foot flag pole in front of Canada's highest tribunal "because I am a Canadian idealist."

His mother, Mrs. Don P. Hargreaves said he was an unwitting accomplice to her son's midnight plot to have the flag recognized.

"I didn't know he was going to put it on that pole," she explained in telling why she helped sew together the parts of Peter's handiwork.

The flag was hauled down in a flurry Wednesday morning by RCMP officers. It flew there since about 1 a.m.

The flag, nine by six feet, had an upper half of white and the lower half in red. In the centre was a green maple leaf. It now is in the possession of the RCMP.

'Lines on Life'

By Dr. Stuart E. Rosenberg

In the very nature of things, man is born into conflict. Peace does not attend his birth. His first breath is taken almost as an act of violence. His struggles to survive from the very moment he enters the world. And from the start, he is frightfully dependent upon forces which operate outside of himself. Someone else may cut his umbilical cord; and yet, spiritually, he carries the burdens of dependence all the days of his life.

On three fronts man is unceasingly challenged.

There is, from the outset, this conflict of his with Nature. In spite of certain unique and divine endowments - his ability to think, to speak, to imagine and to create - man remains a plaything in the fingers of the forces of the universe. Nature often overwhelms him; he is, after all, but a mortal speck in an infinite, far-flung cosmos.

With this mind he tunnels mountains and bridges the waters. He spans the heights and plumbs the depths. He flies with eagles' wings and swims with the big fish of the sea. Yet, ultimately, there are tunnels and bridges he cannot build, heights and depths he cannot reach. With all of his knowledge, he discovers how short-reached human knowledge really is. He becomes wise when he stops fighting Nature, learns to live by its laws, submits when he must.

Like Nature, human nature holds man in the grip of its inexorably powerful hands. Man locks his horns, battles his neighbors, seeks vengeance and relentlessly pursues enemies who are no enemies. Man seems unable to escape conflict with his fellow men. Despite his vaunted technological skills, in dealing with men, not things, he has hardly inched past the station of the cavemen.

Why do men fight one another? Why do brothers kill brothers?

TAKE 2 LINES ON LIFEE

Why have we been able to make peace with Nature by learning to submit to her laws, and are yet so primitive in the way we "live" with one another?

Some clue to an answer is found within man himself. Perhaps we fight one another because of an ongoing conflict which we have not yet learned to resolve: the battle each man has with himself! The great destructions in history may very well be the reflection of man's basic inability to get along with himself. Thus, the greatest conflict of all conflicts: Man against himself. The road to peace cuts across the highway which leads to man's soul.

We have studied the natural sciences, elaborated principles of social behaviour, looked for laws in history - all, in a determined effort to come to grips with man's conflicts, to understand them and perhaaps, thus, to transend them. But we have yet to grasp fully the role of the psychic and spiritual elements in life. We may know a lot about things; we still have much more to learn about people.

Religion may not yet have all the wise and sufficient answers to the conflicts which beset us. Yet, its principal importance must be recognized. It always has trumpeted the warning: The fault lies not in our stars, but in us. It always has been, always will remain, a necessary and urgent reminder that man must first learn to come to terms with himself if he is to find peace in the world.

Peewee Hockey Tournament

GODERICH (CP)—Two shots at goal, neither of which entered the net, earned Waterloo a place in the A series final today of the Young Canada Week peewee hockey tournament.

The two shots were enough Wednesday to give Waterloo an edge of one in the shots at goal that decided their tied game against Woodstock.

With 35 seconds left in the game and the score tied 1-1, Woodstock held a 17-16 lead in shots at goal. Ryan Yoshi, a husky Japanese - Canadian lefthandman for Waterloo, grabbed the puck from a face-off near his own net, raced down the ice and evened the count.

Pete Palezcay, who scored Waterloo's only goal, fired another shot at goal to give his team the decision.

OTHER GAMES TODAY

The other semi-final was to be contested today between Leamington and Stratford, defending champions in the series.

Yoshi shot three goals for Waterloo's earlier 6-2 victory over Wallaceburg.

Woodstock downed Lindsay 4-0 in their first game.

Stratford entered the semi-final by defeating Owen Sound 6 - 2 and eliminating Mount Royal, only Quebec entry remaining in the tournament by identical twins, Barry and Garry Jordan. Each shot two goals and assisted on two others, while Barry got a goal and an assist.

Mount Royal won their first game Wednesday by defeating Brampton 5-2.

BROKE A TIE

Leamington and Galt battled to the wire for the right to enter the semi-final. Galt broke a tie late in the third period to emerge 3-2 winners.

In B series play Walkerton knocked out the host team 5-2. Paul Smith scored both goals for Goderich.

The Ingersoll-Listowel game went into overtime. They ended regulation time tied 1-1 on goals and 17-17 on shots at goal. Alan Lockhart scored in 58 seconds of extra time to wrap it up 2-1 for Ingersoll.

In the B series Tillsonburg collected four goals, two each from Chris Coulthard and Max Partlo, for a 4-3 decision over Tecumseh. Delhi edged St. Marys, 5-4.

Ontario Bowlers Win Two Titles

ST. CATHARINES (CP)—Ontario bowlers claimed the men's and women's singles championships but lost the mixed team event as the ninth annual Canadian five-pin bowling championships ended here today.

Ab Collingwood, 30, of Hamilton posted a 10 - game total score of 2,430 to win over Dick Lane, 35, of North Sydney, N.S., who finished with a total of 2,322 pins.

Eastern Canada representative Lea McHeigh of Toronto had a 10-game total of 2,243 in the ladies singles while Mrs. Annis of Vancouver had 2,200.

The Winnipeg team, representing the West in the mixed team event, totalled 18,025 in 10 games, 1,061 more than the Ontario all-star team.

Ted Erlas rolled the highest single-game score for the West, 300. Johnny Scholz of Welland was the only Ontario bowler to go over the 300 mark in a single game. He did it three times with 307.

Gomez Predicts 300

A Horse-Riding 'Punch'?

FORT ERIE (CP) — Jockey Avelino Gomez, 32, predicted today he will win more than 300 races for the W. R. Beasley stable of Toronto this year. He'll be riding hard for his first win when the Ontario racing season opens here Saturday.

The diminutive Cuban says Beasley horses will overtake the Taylor stable colors to 270 victories although he missed the last three weeks of the racing season and two weeks earlier because of a spill.

Last year the Beasley stable was the province's second highest money winner—$195,140. The figure is $44,200 less than that for the Taylor stable, but $42,720 of the Taylor winnings went from Victoria Park's sponsor of the Queen's Plate.

Gomez, who has ridden 2,186 winners in 18 years of competition, parted amicable with the Taylors last November.

JOCKEYS LICENSED

More than 40 jockeys have been licensed for Saturday's opening. Two of the leading contenders for Gomez's Canadian riding championship are expected to be Keith Robinson and Hugo Dittfach.

Robinson, who will ride for Conn Smythe, is regarded as one of the best riding apprentices ever developed in Western Canada.

Dittfach is under contract to the powerful Lasnon Farm stable. Trainer Art Warner predicts the season will be the greatest of the German - born jockey's career.

Ontario Jockey Club officials are looking to another record-breaking year for wagers and track attendance.

Last year the province's three manor tracks, all owned by the Jockey Club, attracted more than 1,000,000 persons and $65,263,300 in wagers — both records.

Racing dates at the three tracks: Fort Erie — April 8 to May 6, July 17 to Sept. 2; Toronto Old Woodbine — May 8 to June 2, Sept. 4 to 16, Oct. 30 to Nov. 25; Toronto Woodbine — June 5 to July 15, Sept. 18 to Oct. 28.

Want Tax Placed on Track Bets

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto board of control decided Wednesday to instruct city solicitor A. Palmer Kent and finance commissioner William Camp bell to investigate the possibility of placing a one - per - cent tax on bets made at Old Woodbine Racetrack.

A motion asking for a report on the scheme was made by Acting Mayor Donald Summerville. Mr. Summerville noted that the inauguration of night harness racing this year is expected to increase revenues from jockey and harness racing.

He said money collected would be used for the city's 1961-62 winter works program. He said past work programs have been financed largely by property taxes.

Last year, on jockey racing, a one-per-cent tax would have raised $236,238. Another $80,000 would have been realized from harness racing wagers. Old Woodbine is the only racetrack in Toronto proper.

Hawks Favored To Take Cup Opener

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

Wanted:—The whereabouts of a hockey swami, physical description unknown but possessed of a voice that sounds like an old razor shaving a chunk of sandpaper. He punctuates his sentences with a husky cough and a castanets click that bespeaks upper and lower fakies.

This man is not dangerous except to the backers of one hockey club. He carried a mental gun that can explode with unerring accuracy into the back of a man's dream and if he backed his predictions with pesos, francs, lire or pennies now has a load of lost that would make Fort Knox look like a piggy-bank.

He is the answer to a yogi's prayer. He is the bete noir of the Canadiens and owns a crystal ball that Punch Imlach would trade the Big "M" for.

He owns the voice that creaked over the sports desk telephone on March 29, the day before the beginning of the Great Avalanche, to wit, the Stanley Cup playoffs.

His voice rasped and grated as though his tonsils hadn't been oiled since he came off the assembly line. He didn't splutter or choke. He spoke with his courtand-click punctuations.

He is not an old Oxonian nor has he hobnobbed with the Carlaks. You wouldn't take him to be a Harvard graduate nor a scion of one of Notre Dame's Four Horsemen. Nor would you associate him with any Nob Hill fraternity.

In fact after he rattled his opening salute I took him to be a member of Local 2341765, Flathush Order of the Late Lamented but Defunct Dodgers.

"Wanna know sumpun?"

He was assured that any item of news that pertained to the world of sport would be welcome.

"The underdogs is gonna win."

"Meaning what, sir?"

"Meanin' the Wings is gonna beat the Leafs in five games, and the Hawks will take the Canadiens in six."

The wire services hadn't carried any stories of men in white coats searching for permanood, but suspend privileges, and didn't the hockey writers record any items of characters wandering around the city in a state of shock.

"Do you mean to say?" he was asked, "that the Chicago Black Hawks will end the reign of the mighty Canadiens and the lowly Red Wings strike the colors of the fancied Maple Leafs?"

"Yessm what I said. Wanna bet?"

Not too long ago the newspapers carried stories of a man who found a bag filled with $250,000 in usable fives and tens, the property of Brinks, Inc.

The hockey situation up to this point had been mainly the Habs and Leafs at each other's throats in a battle for top-spot in the final standing, let happen what may to the tails of the comets parbed in Hawks and Wings jerseys. It was something akin to treason to even think the lowly "birds" could be anything but stepping stones to "Stanley."

Yet here was Rappy-throat practically offering me a mint of my own making, or something equivalent I thought, to finding the Brink loot.

I was mentally figuring the amount of whatever could be turned into cash when there came three clicks. Two accompanied a muttered "Chicken", the other was the crash of the telephone receiver being slammed home.

So if you come across somebody wish a voice like a dust by a gravel-crusher and cement-mixer with tap-dancing accompaniment please advise this department.

He could be the bloke Ben Yanover was talking about the other day. This fellow, prior to the start of the semi-finals, bet $20 the Red Wings would take it all, cup included.

Crazy, yeah? like a fox. He got 50-1 odds.

Crippled Youngster

Incentive For Irish

TORONTO (CP) — A partially - paralyzed Toronto boy may give St. Michael's Majors hockey team a big enough boost to carry them to the Memorial Cup finals.

Tommy Smith, 13, is the new incentive for the Majors who play against Guelph for the right to meet Oshawa in the Ontario Hockey Association title.

Tommy, one of the team's most ardent fans, is recovering from a spinal operation he underwent after a baseball accident two years ago paralyzed him from the hips down.

At players' request, coach Rev. David Bauer has promised to take the boy west if the Majors reach the Memorial Cup finals. The boy's doctors have not decided on the plan.

Tommy's friendship with the team began three weeks ago when right - winger Jack Cole was wheeled into the boy's hospital room suffering from concussion. Tommy quickly identified his new roommate as one of the idols he followed on televised games. As other players came to visit Cole, Tommy's circle of hockey player friends widened.

Father Bauer said he believes the friendship will improve the boy's health.

"He's a brave lad," said Father Bauer, "and he sure deserves a treat like that. You can bet the team will play their best to make his dream come true."

REACHED THE FINALS

EDINBURGH (Reuters) — Dunfermline reached the final of the Scottish Soccer Cup competition Wednesday night for the first time in the club's history.

Both Teams Are 'Hungry'

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

CHICAGO (CP)—The Stanley Cup final, something of a commuter series for the first time in history, opens tonight with Chicago Black Hawks 13-10-10 favorites to snatch the first game from Detroit Red Wings.

Both teams look for a long, bitter struggle, perhaps going the limit of the best-of-seven games.

The series has also burgeoned into a family feud. James D. Norris, co-owner and chairman of the board of the Hawks, wants the cup championship in the worst way. So does brother Bruce Norris, president of the Red Wings.

In hockey terms, both teams are hungry. But the years have been longest and leanest for the Hawks, who last won the championship in 1938. The Wings' last win was in 1955.

USUAL SETUP CHANGED

This year's finals calls for a fast shuttling of the teams. Instead of the usual two games in each city to start, the schedule calls for single games in Chicago and Detroit—with one day in between—until the series ends.

An ice show in Chicago Stadium caused the change. The second game will be played in Detroit Saturday.

Chicago coach Rudy Pilous, who sent his squad through a light workout Wednesday, made it plain that Detroit's Gordie Howe is the man to beat.

"He's a great scorer and gets the best of support from his teammates," said Pilous. "But we will throw fast skating and hard hitting against the Red Wings, just as we did against Canadiens.

"We probably will vary our style a little to overcome the long-passing game the Wings and the results should be the same."

ADAMS PREDICTS WIN

The Wings arrived by plane Wednesday night and General Manager Jack Adams, holding forth in the hotel lobby, lost no time in predicting that the series will go six, or possibly seven games.

"We should win this series," said Adams. "We are rested, in good physical shape and have no injuries."

Likewise, Hawks will have no serious injuries.

Eddie Litzenberger was limping slightly Wednesday from a muscle injury in his thigh. Bill (Red) Hay had a cut lip as a souvenir of the last game with Canadiens and Eric Nesterenko sported a perfect thisser—a black-and-bright eye—as the result of a practice skirmish Monday.

"It's a sure thing that this is going to be a real rough series," said Detroit coach Sid Abel. "We watched the Hawks on television when they knocked off Canadiens and every man on the Chicago team played well. There wasn't one of them that wasn't skating and checking well.

"I'm not going to predict how long the series will last but we know we're up against a smart team when it can shut out Canadiens twice in a row. At the same time we have been playing well ourselves and we think we can take the series."

Riding High for Senators

Donovan Hot On Comeback Trail

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It has been a great spring for Dick Donovan, one - time Chicago White Sox pitching ace who gained a chance for a new baseball life with the new Washington Senators.

Dropped out of the starting rotation by the White Sox a year ago, then grabbed by the Senators for $75,000 in the American League's player pool, Donovan hurled nine innings for Washington Wednesday and beat Philadelphia Phillies 10-2 with a seven-hitter. It was his first complete game since Sept. 11, 1960.

The victory padded the Senators' won-lost exhibition record to six straight American League clubs, to 14-2. The Senators open the 1961 campaign at Los Angeles Dodgers 2-0, Boston Red Sox beat Chicago Cubs 4-3, New York Yankees defeated Kansas City Athletics 3-1, Los Angeles Angels beat Cleveland Indians 5-3 and Minnesota Twins and Baltimore Orioles split a doubleheader, the Twins winning 7-4, then losing 3-1 in seven innings.

RALLY IN SIXTH

The Senators backed Donovan with 13 hits, but needed only one big inning and five runs in the sixth inning against a wild Johnny Bucha.

Jim Bunning went nine innings for the second time this spring for the Tigers, allowing 10 hits, Lonor Vinegar Bend Mizell left after a seven-run sixth inning, capped by Jake Woods' second hit of the inning, a bases-loaded triple.

After Bill Skowron kept the Yankees in the game with a solo homer in the first four runs with a double and a three-run homer, slumping Roger Maris singled home the winning run off Ronnie Kline.

Sacrifice flies by Gene Freese, who also batted a two-run homer, and Ed Bailey gave the Reds their victory, Young Jim Maloney allowed the Braves only one hit in his five-inning pitching stint.

Southpaw Mike McCormick and Stu Miller combined for a blank performance that handed the Dodgers their first shutout of the spring. Don Blasingame drove the Giants in their winning run with his first home run of the spring.

MAKES FINE COMEBACK

Don Buddin, back after a two-week bout with a lame wrist, hammered a home run and singled in another run for the Red Sox.

The White Sox got fine pitching from Ray Moore and Gerry Staley and won when hurler Ed Rakow walked in the winning run in the 10th inning.

Jerry Casale and Ron Moolenaar allowed Cleveland but six hits. Casale opened a clinching three-run fifth for the Angels with a double.

Won't Face Drunk Charges

Giants Jailed, Freed

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP)—Three members of the San Francisco Giants baseball team were jailed briefly Wednesday on charges of drunk and disorderly conduct, but they don't intend to stand trial.

The charges stemmed from a dispute with two youths — or three, depending on whose version you accept — outside the Giants' headquarters at the downtown Hotel Adams.

Arrested shortly before their midnight curfew were infielder-outfielder Harvey Kuenn, 31, third baseman Jim Davenport, 27, and catcher Bob Schmidt, 27.

They were held three hours, then released on $30 bond each. A preliminary hearing was set for April 18—21 days after the Giants are due to leave their Phoenix spring training camp.

"We're going into a pennant race now," club secretary Eddie Gaedel Y. Brannick told police, "and we won't be back. The ball will be forfeited."

FOUND THEM ARGUING

Policeman Gary Dull said he found the three ballplayers on the sidewalk in front of the hotel, arguing with Lester Gray, 30, of Phoenix.

The players, the officer said, were "loud, causing a disturbance, and smelled strongly of alcohol." He said he saw no blows struck.

batting .178, hit a three - run homer in the first inning of the second game for the Orioles, then doubled and scored the winning run. The Twins smacked Milt Pappas for 11 hits in the opener, but lost young righthander Don Lee for three to three weeks. He suffered a fractured finger when he made a backhanded stab at Whitey Herzog's line drive.

Jankowski Named MVP

SEATTLE (CP) — Lou Jankowski, Calgary Stampeders' winger who set a Western Hockey League mark for goal-scoring, was named the league's most valuable player Wednesday.

Jankowski won out over linemate Norm Johnson and Don Head, Portland Buckaroos' rookie goaltender.

In balloting by individual players of the league, Jankowski received 280 votes, Head 180 and Johnson 118. Jankowski will receive $500.

He ended the season with 90 points, including a record-setting 57 goals.

TORONTO (CP) — General Manager Frank Selke, irritated by the big playoff flop of his Montreal Canadiens, hardly waited for the smoke to clear before announcing at least four men will be chopped from the club for next season.

As the Canadiens were riding home by train from Chicago where they bowed out to the Black Hawks in the sixth game of a best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final Tuesday night, Selke started expounding on prospects for 1961-62.

He did not disclose names but he said there'll be new faces at defence and left wing.

Selke said replacements will be sought among seasoned performers rather than newcomers, indicating the team will likely be in a trading mood in the off-season and in the market at the National Hockey League's annual draft in June.

RATES ONLY ONE

"With the exception of one good defenceman I don't feel we have anybody in our organization of farm clubs who can do the job next year," Selke said.

Jean Gauthier of Hull-Ottawa Canadiens of the Eastern Professional League was understood to be the defenceman referred to.

He said Hull-Ottawa forwards Bobby Rousseau and Cliff Pennington are promising "but we need more experience than we have to get us through the cup."

"In thankfulness for winning the cup in eight games last season I kept players I had intended to drop," Selke added. "But there will be more drastic changes made before next October."

There was painful irony in losing to the Black Hawks for Selke.

When Canadiens were in their heyday and the Black Hawks wallowing in the league basement, Selke—out of generosity—dealt off player after player to help the weaker link.

HAVE SIX EX-HABS

Six former Montrealers, Eddie Litzenberger, Murray Balfour, Bill Hay, Ted Lindsay, Earl Balfour, Ab McDonald and Reg Fleming—played prominent roles in the spectacular upset. Two others, Bob Courcy and Cecil Hoekstra are on Chicago's list of eligibles for the playoffs, although they didn't play against Canadiens.

Selke served notice that Canadiens are going to dish out a much tougher brand of hockey next year.

"We have been playing nice, clean hockey a little too long," he said. "The Hawks deliberately racked up five of our best players and not one of the Canadiens lifted a hand in retaliation.

"I'm tired of hearing the fans calling our players yellow-bellies. This is going to change."

He also plans to go along with Jacques Plante in goal. But Plante has "got to take things more seriously," he said.

WAS WEAK EARLY

"He wasn't up to par through the early part of the schedule although he played his position better than most of the other players in the latter part."

Selke also disclosed Canadiens are likely to withdraw sponsorship of Montreal Royals in the EPHL in favor of an American League farm team in Pittsburgh. The Royals lost $100,000 in 1960-61, he said. At Pittsburgh, a new $17,000,000 arena is expected to be completed soon.

The absence of Maurice (Rocket) Richard was felt in the series against the Hawks, Selke said.

Montreal was "also below par throughout injuries and for some unexplainable reason our fellows failed to shoot the puck."

Masters Opens Today

AUGUSTA, Ga., (AP)—Golf's elite perform an era storm the treacherous Augusta National course today in the opening round of the Masters tournament.

Amidst the flowery splendor of dogwood and azaleas comes a relentless 72-hole stalking of the prized title—not to mention a $17,000-plus top swag—which Arnold Palmer is favored to capture and unprecedented second straight time.

The field of 54 United States professionals, 14 foreign pros and 30 amateurs was handpicked for the event. Par is 72.

By Sunday afternoon's windup, South African Gary Player or an amateur such as Jack Nicklaus, the amazing Ohio State strong boy, could dethrone Palmer. The same goes for such Masters veterans as Ken Venturi, last year's runner - up, or Dow Finsterwald, Billy Casper and Julius Boros, who finished in that order behind Palmer and Venturi.

Canadian is the medal-play tournament are pro Stan Leonard of Vancouver, Al Balding of Toronto and Bill Kerr of Montreal and amateurs Keith Alexander of Calgary and Phil Brownlee of Toronto.

Only three of the Masters 16 champions are missing from the starting field, retired Ralph Guldahl (1953), injury - hexed Art Wall (1959) and Henry Picard (1938), whose wife is ill.

May Change Hit-Batter Ruling

HAMILTON (CP) — Softball men from throughout the province will meet here this weekend at the Ontario Amateur Softball Association's 30th annual meeting.

Registration is slated for early Friday with the annual meeting taking place Friday and Saturday afternoons.

Expected to pour the lengthiest discussion in a proposal to abolish the rule whereby a batter is awarded first base when hit by a pitched ball.

The rule was adopted in St. Catharines a few years ago. However, Oshawa and Peterborough groups are expected to have it changed.

Belleville's Don Lee has been elected president by acclamation. He succeeds Simcoe's W. C. Perkin.

Also returned by acclamation are W. L. Algate, St. Catharines treasurer; Secretary Pickard, and auditors R. K. Champion, Hannon, and Dave Lether, Peterborough.

PLAN JAMBOREE

Sport Snapshots

By JACK SULLIVAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It seems in the prehistoric past but by golly, it was just two years ago Friday that Red Storey quit his job as a National Hockey League referee during the Stanley Cup final between Montreal and Chicago Black Hawks.

Now he's a liquor salesman in Montreal and a rib-tickling after-dinner speaker.

It was deadly serious business at the time.

President Clarence Campbell had criticized Storey's work during a talk with a newspaper man after a game three days earlier, Campbell said the referee should have called a couple of tripping penalties against the Canadiens who won 4-3 in a game in Chicago that was held up 25 minutes by jeering fans.

Red quit in a huff, declaring that Campbell should not have publicly criticized an NHL official.

Looking back on it all today, however, he gets a laugh from one humorous incident.

BEER IN FACE

One Black Hawk fan walked along the bench to the point where Storey was standing, leaped over, shook the can until the contents foamed and threw the suds in his face.

Eventually, when the ice was cleared of debris and the fan hustled off to the cells, Storey stated over to face off the puck. Chicago centre Tod Sloan looked up and asked:

"Red, if you'd known there was beer in that can, would you have opened your mouth before he threw it?"

Storey burst out laughing and it took him another couple of minutes before he got the puck into play.

Not so funny, though, was the choke-up sign by Chicago coach Rudy Pilous which was caught by the television cameras. Months later, Pilous eased his way out of it when he told a Winnipeg newspaper man that he was straightening his bow tie.

HOCKEY THERAPY

Stanley Cup anecdotes and rumors spring up by the score every year at this time and one centres around Maurice Richard, probably the only hockey player in the world to use a muzzle.

The gossip around the back corridors this year concerns coaches. For what it is worth, here's what some of the boys in the know are saying:

Phil Watson, bounced by New York Rangers three years ago, will return to the NHL as coach of Boston. That leaves Milt Schmidt out in the cold but the pilot chickens.

If Pilous doesn't win the Cup this spring, he'll be out and Schmidt will take over the Black Hawks.

New Series Is Carbon Copy Of All Intrigue Stories

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — Pat McGoohan is a new name, a new face in television. But Danger Man, the series in which he stars, seems as familiar and well worn as last winter's hat.

The first episode of the CBS program which started Wednesday night was a carbon copy of all those foreign intrigue tales of a 1,001 TV nights before it.

The hero, John Drake—played by the dashing McGoohan—is an international cloak-and-dagger operator. There is the usual meeting in a Paris sidewalk cafe, with exchange of secret passwords, when he receives his assignment.

Hans Vogler, chief executioner of an unnamed enemy, has killed old Professor Barlolf.

Get Vogler.

HAS NEW TWIST

Drake does, of course, after the usual chase through the woods. The chase was a little more complicated than usual because Drake was pursued while uncomfortably handcuffed to a pretty girl.

It would not be fair to omit mention of the ingenious way Drake smuggled his high-powered rifle into the unnamed enemy country. He posed as a vacationing schoolteacher on a motor tour. Most of the bulky part of the weapon was concealed in two loaves of Italian bread. The rest was disguised as parts of the motor of his car.

Royals Ace Operation Is Successful

GUELPH (CP)—An operation on Rod Gilbert, ace right-winger of Guelph Royals, has been described as a complete success by doctors at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn.

Gilbert injured his spine in the final game of the Ontario Hockey Association junior A season when he crashed into the boards. He returned to play in the semi-final series against Niagara Falls Flyers but the pain became too great and he was taken to the Mayo Clinic.

The doctors have notified New York Rangers that the operation was a success and Gilbert will be ready to play in the fall," Guelph coach Eddie Francis said.

There was considerable damage to the vertebrae and a bone fusion operation was necessary. Bone chips were grafted from his knee."

Gilbert will spent a month in hospital and several months of complete rest will be required.

Hull Beats Beavers In Fifth

HULL (CP)—Hull-Ottawa Canadiens exploded in the second period Wednesday night to defeat Kitchener Waterloo Beavers 4-1 in the fifth game of their best-of-seven Eastern Professional Hockey League semi-final series.

The Habs' revival came with a burst at 5:18 of the second period when Bobby Ellett let go with his first goal. Within two minutes he had added two more for a hat-trick to give the team a 3-2 lead in games.

Beavers took a 1-0 lead late in the first period on a goal by Mel Pearson. That was their effort for the night.

Cliff Pennington added the final Hull-Ottawa market midway through the third period.

Habs' netminder Ed Johnston was called upon for 15 saves. Jack McCartan handled 33 stops in the Kitchener-Waterloo cage.

Canadiens could finish the series with a win in the sixth game Friday night at Kitchener.

Bears Nip Bisons 5-4 In Overtime

BUFFALO (AP) — Willie Marshall's second goal of the game at the 11:07 mark of a sudden-death second overtime period gave Hershey Bears a 5-4 victory over Buffalo Bisons Wednesday night.

The victory gave the Bears the best-of-seven Calder Cup semi-final 4-0. The teams played 81 minutes and 37 seconds of hockey.

Marshall's first goal sent the game into overtime. Pete Conacher gave Hershey a 1-0 lead in the opening period. Barry Cullen tied it early in the second. Wayne Hicks put the Bisons ahead during a scramble but Les Duff tied it again before the end of the period.

Ron Ingram's long shot from just inside the blue line gave Buffalo a 3-2 lead. Only a minute and three seconds remained in regulation time when Marshall tied it again. Goalie Bobby Perreault had left the ice four seconds before to give Hershey an extra forward.

Billy Dea put Buffalo ahead again after only 10 seconds of the 10-minute overtime period but Ike LaLeade pushed John McKenzie's rebound into an open net at 7:34 mark to tie again.

Playing-coach Frank Mathers took a long shot and Marshall batted in the rebound to win the game.

The Bears now face Springfield Indians in the Calder Cup finals.

MILDMAY (CP) — Magnus Andrew Hockey, 61, was killed Wednesday by a falling tree which he and his father were cutting down on his father's farm near this village 36 miles south of Owen Sound.

One-Time Lawyer Will Head Investigation Into Trends Of Monopoly in UK Press

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP) — The man who will switch a searchlight on monopolistic trends in the British press is a tweedy ex-lawyer who looks like a Conservative and votes as a Socialist.

With his urbane, upper-crust manners and mallet-like looks, Baron Shawcross—better known as Sir Hartley — has always seemed bred in the Tory blue.

In fact, he has been a Labor party supporter, all his life. When the Socialists came exuberantly to power in 1945, he won something approaching political immortality with a boast that has haunted him ever since:

"We are the masters now!"

At 18, Shawcross was a Labor election agent. At 43, he became attorney - general in the first post - war Labor government, one of the youngest men to hold that office.

But somehow that suave exterior keeps fooling people. They refuse to take his socialism seriously. Wits dubbed him "Sir Shortly Floorcross," implying that he would soon cross the floor and the Commons to join the Conservatives.

HEADS PROBE

Baron Shawcross, an ex-lawyer who has been a Labor partisan supporter all his life, has been appointed by the Conservative government to head an investigation of monopolistic trends in the British newspaper industry. Better known as Sir Hartley, he was attorney-general in the first post-war Labor government and principal British delegate to the United Nations from 1945-49. Since 1958 he has sat in the House of Lords. (CP Photo).

PERSONALLY WEALTHY

The illusion arose partly from his gradual drift toward the right of the Labor party, partly from the rich income that enabled him to have a country home and a yacht, for a highpowered legal authority, his earnings averaged between £30,000 and £40,000 a year, he was chief prosecutor at the postwar Nuremberg trials and principal British delegate to the United Nations General Assembly from 1945-49.

At one time he was considered a possible future prime minister — but his enthusiasm for politics waned and in 1958 he resigned his parliamentary seat. He returned a year later on his creation as a life peer, taking the title of Lord Shawcross of Friston.

Now, the 59-year-old Hartley William Shawcross has been appointed by Prime Minister Macmillan to head an investigation into the trend toward creation of monopolies in the newspaper industry.

The announcement of the investigation, made Feb. 28, followed nearly six months of controversy over press mergers and closures.

FOUR CLOSED DOWN

Four national newspapers closed in 1960. The News Chronicle, with a liberal tradition and a circulation of more than 1,000,000, was absorbed by The Daily Mail, a Conservative paper. The Sunday Graphic ceased publication; The Empire News, also a Sunday paper, was bought by The News of the World; The Star, a liberal-leaning evening newspaper, was absorbed by The Evening News, Conservative.

In the Commons Feb. 9, Macmillan said recent developments "are widely taken to suggest that conditions are such as to lead inevitably toward concentration of ownership and reduction in the number and variety of voices speaking to the public through the press."

There was considerable speculation that the investigation would be dominated by economic factors in the industry, including restrictive practices by trade unions.

HAS FOUR ASSISTANTS

In keeping with his promise to restrict the investigating commission to a small number, Macmillan named four men to assist Lord Shawcross. They are:

Robert Browning, 56, professor of accountancy at Glasgow university since 1950; Sir Graham Cunningham, 66, chairman of a glass company, controller-general of munitions production during Second World War, and former chairman of the dollar exports board; William Brian Nicholson, 46, economic adviser to the Organization for European Economic Cooperation in 1951-52, and author of books on the Russian financial system, and W. J. P. Webber, 56, general secretary of the Transport Salaried Staff Association and a member of the General Council of the Trades Union Congress.

They are expected to begin work within a few weeks.

LIFE SENTENCES

disturbance with out of the way so they could marry, and also avoid a costly divorce settlement. They hired hoodlum Jack Cody to kill her and, when he failed with flash money, they plotted the ambush in the Fiesta garage.

SAYS IT WAS ACCIDENT

Finch testified that he went to see his wife to plead for a divorce, not to kill her. He said he pulled a gun, they struggled and the weapon accidentally went off.

Her dying words—according to Finch: "I'm sorry, darling, please take care of the kids."

Maxwell Keith, Finch's counsel in the third trial, said: "From the look on the jurors' faces when they came in, it looked like goo to me. The verdict couldn't be any better under the circumstances."

Flight - lipped and muttering "No comment," the jurors ran past reporters and photographers leaving the court. They retired to a hotel, dined on steaks and then jury foreman James Dyer read this statement:

"We as 12 individuals listened to all the testimony during the trial—the same testimony that all of you heard. When we returned to the jury room we discussed the testimony and various pertinent points and came to a decision on all counts. We feel we came to a fair and just decision. The verdicts speak for themselves."

FACED TWO CHARGES

Finch was found guilty of two capital offences—first - degree murder and conspiracy to commit murder. Carole was convicted of one capital offence—conspiracy to commit murder—and second - degree murder, which carries a penalty of five years to life in prison.

Their lawyers automatically made a motion for a new trial, but Keith admitted he has little hope the motion will be granted.

Judge David Colleman set April 27 for a hearing on the motion.

Hunt Algerians After Hospital Patients Shot

Two Killed, Twelve Wounded in Paris

PARIS (AP) — French police made a nation - wide sweep against suspected Algerian and French terrorists today as killings and bombings increased after the collapse of hopes for immediate negotiations on the Algerian rebellion.

Paris police hunted an Algerian extremist group that carried the hit-and-run war between rival rebel factions into a suburban hospital Thursday, killing two persons and wounding 12.

At Algiers the U.S. Consulate was bombed after it closed for the day. And an attempt was made to burn the American Cultural Centre. Both attacks were attributed to French rightists retaliating for U.S. moves to get peace talks started between the French and the Algerian rebels.

Police rounded up known French extremists in Paris and the French provinces also for questioning.

START TALKS TODAY

Negotiations between the French and Algerian rebels today started today in Evian , between the Algerian rebel group—the National Liberation Front (FLN)—refused to meet with the French government, but they would hold simultaneous discussions with a third rebel group, the National Liberation Movement (MNA). The French said the FLN demand that it be designated chief spokesman for the Algerian nationalists.

There appeared to be little chance the talks could make a serious move before Thursday, to get back to the central French President de Gaulle has scheduled a press conference for that day, and the hope was he will say something to clear the way.

The hospital Thursday in suburban Montfermeil was one of the most violent episodes in the war between the FLN and MNA, conducted from speeding motorcades and dart doorways for 6½ years in Paris.

KILL GUARD

The men in a taxi drove up to the hospital where Algerian victims of a recent FLN-MNA clash were in the surgery ward. Three of the raiders, wearing helmets, charged up to the fifth floor, shot and disarmed a French policeman guarding the wounded — and killed him with his own machine-gun.

Entering into the room, they found Mouloud Feraoun, believed to have been a member of the MNA, in bed. They opened a stream of bullets into him and into a man in the next bed. Another Algerian was killed under the bed and escaped harm.

The killers then ran from room to room, spraying bullets. One of their victims was a seventy-year-old nun, Sister Martine Petit, wounded as she lay in bed. Another was a patient in fisher, sitting beside the bed. her mother, who flung herself across her.

The three gunmen then fled down the hospital taxi, knocking out a ward attendant as they ran and beating a nurse with gun butts. In the end, two policemen who tried to stop them were shot in the feet.

More than a dozen Algerians were later arrested at an Algerian hostel and an Algerian taxi driver was picked up for questioning. There was no indication that the identity of the gunmen had been learned.

Castro Angry At Enemies Of His Regime

HAVANA (AP)—Fidel Castro Thursday promised Cubans that today's shortages will be "to morrow's abundance." He spoke before an organization called the committee for defence of the revolution.

He spoke angrily of the enemies of his regime who are assembling abroad with the avowed intention of invading Cuba. He said "we will see who dies in their own bile."

A powerful bomb exploded Thursday night in the El Encanto department store. Havana's largest, after its employees had left. Police said two persons were slightly injured. The blast blew out all windows on the ground floor of the five-story nationalized store.

The semi-official newspaper Revolucion assailed United States leaders again today, this time for conferring with the anti-Castro exile Jose Miro Cardona, president of the Anti-Castro Revolutionary Council in Exile.

Cardona met Thursday at the state department with Adolf Berle Jr., co-ordinator for Latin - American policies, and Philip Bonsal, former ambassador to Cuba.

Revolucion said the meeting was "worthy of the worst traditions of the Sicilian Mafia".

Neither Side Wants to Break Off Talks

GENEVA (CP)—The Western powers and Russia were at another standoff in the nuclear test ban talks today with neither side ready to take responsibility for breaking off negotiations.

British delegate David Ormsby - Gore said Thursday that the West has shown "moderation and patience" and drew a sharp retort from Soviet delegate Semyon K. Tsarapkin that "our patience can certainly match yours."

Since the resumption, the West in a package plan has accepted several Soviet proposals for joint nuclear experimentation. But Tsarapkin contended the West's continued insistence on independent control machinery to police any test ban with a demand for what in effect would be a power over the Soviet control apparatus.

The Russians had agreed previously to a single director—a neutral—for the control machinery, but Tsarapkin said negotiations had changed. The Kremlin is now proposing a control group similar to the one it demands head the UN secretariat — a troika with members representing the Communist bloc, the Western nations and neutralist nations.

CNR TRAINMEN FILE DEMANDS FOR MORE WAGES

Railway Already Facing Major Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — The CNR, already facing a major strike May 15, has been hit by more labor trouble.

The brotherhood of Railway Trainmen (CLC), representing about 9,400 CNR employees, has filed demands for an 18-per-cent wage increase.

A spokesman for the public-owned railway said Thursday night the company will study the union proposals and the trainmen's demands, including two weeks' vacation with pay after 20 years and eight statutory holidays instead of nine, when they are put on negotiation in about two weeks.

In addition, Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers Ind. representing about 3,500 CNR employees, has asked for a 15-per-cent wage increase.

Negotiations scheduled for negotiation starting April 17, include a company-paid $10,000 life insurance policy and increased paid vacations.

FACE STRIKE

The major problem facing the railway and the privately-owned CPR, however, is still the proposed May 15 country-wide strike called by the non-operating railway unions in back up a federal conciliation board's recommendation for a 14-cent-an-hour wage increase.

The CNR recently served 18 strike notices on the U.S. 100-member Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers (CLC). They are scheduled to come up for negotiations Friday.

The CNR wishes to eliminate "conventional "arbitraries" — payment for time spent on preparatory and inspection work.

Macmillan, Kennedy Agree To Bolster South Viet Nam

WASHINGTON (CP)—Prime Minister Macmillan and President Kennedy have agreed to seek ways of bolstering the pro-western government in South Viet Nam to keep the political situation in the hard-hit Asian country bordering Laos from deteriorating further.

They noted that as a result of Communist raids more people are being killed in South Viet Nam than in Laos.

Macmillan and Kennedy, a spokesman said, did not announce their strategy for South Viet Nam, but they were agreed the situation there must not be allowed to deteriorate further.

Ways will be sought to bolster the South Viet Nam regime to halt depletion of its trained personnel by Communist penetration, subversion, kidnappings and assassinations.

The spokesman noted that South Viet Nam has lost a hundred a number of trained educators, doctors, engineers and other professional persons.

Cruising down the Potomac aboard the U.S. presidential yacht, Honey Fitz, Kennedy and Macmillan Thursday huddled over a cable dispatch from a hour afternoon conference that began earlier with a round of talks spots, from Laos and South Viet Nam to Berlin and Russia, wrapping in the whole gamut of nuclear test ban treaty and disarmament.

The talks were recessed to while Macmillan flies to Boston for an address at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

A final session of the two men and their advisers will be held Saturday morning after which they will issue what one official called a business-like statement on the range of their discussions. Macmillan leaves for Ottawa Sunday.

From authorities who participated in the meetings which brought the two men together after a total of 20 hours from Wednesday morning through Thursday night, the following picture for a possible breakthrough in the cold war trouble spots emerged:

1. The British - U.S. negotiations with Russia for an agreement to prohibit the testing of nuclear weapons permanently under an international policing system are making little progress.

Macmillan and Kennedy agreed that the Western powers could never rely on an inspection system which would respect to a Soviet veto. Unless, as they believe, Soviet Premier Khrushchev will drop or drastically modify the directorate veto in the nuclear test talks at Geneva would appear to be headed for a breakdown.

The two leaders reviewed the disarmament outlook and reaffirmed hope that the talks would prove successful and that disarmament negotiations now projected for mid-summer would get off to a good start.

2. The chances of a new East-West confrontation over West Berlin were rated high, although Macmillan considered Khrushchev may choose to exert primary pressure for Communist gains in some of the underdeveloped countries in Africa and Asia.

Macmillan told prime minister reaffirmed their determination to maintain the Western position in Berlin or withdraw from any of their obligations in the event the West Berlin people against Communist threats and pressures.

Macmillan's flat punch line Thursday was to strike an optimistic note. He expressed the trend of world events. Lunching with a group of American senators, he later quoted as reassuring them that Laos could be kept truly neutral, even with pro-Red Pathet Lao representation in a coalition cabinet.

HAMMER USED TO BLUDGEON ESTRANGED WIFE

Husband Charged With Her Murder

TORONTO (CP) — Albert Charles Roberts, 34, was charged with murder Thursday, a few hours after his estranged wife was found bludgeoned to death with a hammer in her suburban home.

Mrs. Violet Roberts, 30, was found lying in a pool of blood.

A 10-year-old son, Bryan, suffered a fractured skull when he also was attacked by a hammer. He is in critical condition in hospital and is not expected to live.

Roberts, who is unemployed, was arrested later after a constable saw a man run into traffic. The constable took the man into custody after a struggle.

Mrs. Roberts moved into the ground floor apartment about a week ago after she separated from her husband.

Bryan, his face covered with blood, staggered up the hall to the apartment of Mrs. Margaret Partridge. Mrs. Partridge said she covered the boy with a blanket and, with another tenant, went to hear what he was mumbling.

FIND ON FLOOR

Before attending to the boy, neighbors entered the woman's apartment and found the battered body on the floor between the kitchen and living room.

Police confiscated a machinist's ball-peen hammer found in the kitchen.

Another son, Paul, 20, a plumber, told the police he left for work at 7 a.m.

The Roberts have five older children, all of whom live away from home.

Two Sea Lions Had an Outing From Zoo Pool

GLASGOW, Scotland (AP)—It was the skank of the evening and the emergency telephone at the police sergeant's desk rang almost clear.

"There's a sea lion out here on the road. I saw it in the headlights of my car."

The sergeant snorted.

To his cannie scotcher call:

"There's something awful out in the fields! It has two heads and it's green."

So the police went into action.

Toward dawn they caught both culprits, sea lions which had escaped from Los Angeles Wednesday and immediately escaped from Glasgow Zoo.

Zoo keepers joined the forces, snared Mitzi and Bubbles and got them back into the zoo pool.

U.S. Army Plans Big Buildup In Hotspots Abroad

Will Train 3,000 Men For Guerrilla Warfare

WASHINGTON (AP) — The army plans to send thousands of additional combat troops to overseas hotspots in the next year as a means of countering Communist thrusts.

At the same time, it will train 3,000 men in guerrilla warfare tactics for use in countries friendly to the United States.

Army leaders gave details of plans Thursday to a private meeting of the senate armed services committee. The testimony of Gen. George H. Decker, army chief of staff, and of Army Secretary Elvis Stahr was released after it was reviewed with military secrets deleted.

Today the navy testifies before the committee.

INCREASE IN PACIFIC

Decker told the committee that 2,400 men will be added to the U.S. Seventh Army, a NATO force in Europe. He also intended an increase of more than 5,000 men in the Pacific.

"Many of the current trouble spots can become the scene of violent action overnight," Decker said.

The number of troops being added to the army's overseas forces expands the army by 5,000 in army manpower requirements above the level of the defence budget.

Decker said that continental army units in the North American Air Defence Command would be decreased about 7,000 to meet other demands.

SUPPORT NIKE-ZEUS

Stahr appeared before the senators to back rapid development of the Nike - Zeus missile killer. This was an apparent disagreement with Kennedy's decision to limit funds for the weapon.

Meanwhile, the defence department said a new Pentagon staff has been created to plan how land, sea and air forces should be used in any Atlantic region brush-fire war involving the United States.

Designated as Joint Task Force Four, the unit is set up as a permanent planning staff under the commander-in-chief, Atlantic.

Heading the task force is Lt.-Gen. Paul L. Freeman, veteran army combat officer with experience includes guerrilla-type fighting in Burma during the Second World War.

The Atlantic command — especially in the Arctic — encompasses a huge sea from the Arctic to the Antarctic.

Threw Bricks At Window in Frost's Office

TORONTO .(CP) — A man threw bricks at a window in Premier Leslie Frost's office Tuesday, then sat down and asked two secretaries to call police.

The secretaries in the premier's outer office said a man threw the bricks through the window and notified his relatives. On a doctor's advice, the relatives signed papers committing the man to the Ontario Hospital for mental examination.

Kennedy Reservations Over NATO Nuclear Power Seen

WASHINGTON (CP) — President John Kennedy is reported to have reservations about turning the North Atlantic Treaty Organization into an independent nuclear power.

While Kennedy feels NATO must urgently build up its conventional forces, sources here say he already has informed Prime Minister Macmillan he will not support any nuclear weapons offered by former president Eisenhower.

In one of his last acts in office, Eisenhower put forward a proposal to establish a NATO force that would provide NATO with a "third force" alongside the U.S. nuclear strategic force, starting with five Polaris submarines.

Under a supreme commander U.S. Gen. Lauris Norstad, has been suggested that he must have an adequate nuclear force under joint international NATO control, requiring some changes in the American law that prohibits the U.S. government from delegating custody and control over its atomic warheads to another country.

Eisenhower favored turning over power to the alliance's nations to close allies, but he took no action to make a change in the law. Kennedy is reported to be opposed to a change. He would like to provide NATO forces with atomic weapons, but custody and control would remain in American hands.

This attitude on the part of Kennedy, sources here say, possibility Canada would be able to get custody and control over the Bomarc-B missile for defence. Canada may require in connection with Bomarc-B missile installations near North Bay, Ont., and Mont. Laurier, Que.

Kennedy supported this attitude, Vice - President Lyndon B. Johnson cautiously stated in a speech at Paris Thursday that the new American administration favors "an effective NATO nuclear capability" and that the U.S. stands ready to "consult with other members as to how to maintain this capability."

He said nothing about the U.S. yielding any control.

Eichmann Trial Is Subject Of Controversy in Israel

JERUSALEM (AP) — Spread across six columns of discussion in the Israeli newspaper Jerusalem Post is the caption "Justice by Eichmann — Trumpet or Tragedy?"

This publication is the subject of fierce controversy in Israel today.

Adolf Eichmann, a former Gestapo officer goes on trial in Jerusalem charged with "crimes against the Jewish people and crimes against humanity." He is accused of being responsible in the deaths of an estimated six million Jews in German extermination camps.

You might expect to find agreement on this extraordinary charge levelled against Eichmann in Buenos Aires last year, and on the desirability of bringing him to trial.

But opinion is by no means unanimous.

A young Israeli remarks: "Does Hitler in Buenos Aires would have made us all necessary."

A shopkeeper says: "The trial will cost a great deal of money and Israel is not a rich country. We have enough to ster to give Eichmann to the Germans and let them try him. Only, of course, they don't want him."

Hungarian Refugees Show Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — Average weekly wages of workers in the manufacturing industry rose to $81.98 in December, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today.

However, the increase was entirely due to longer weekly hours. The average work week was 40.1 hours, compared with 38.7 and hourly earnings fell slightly to $2.01 from $1.82.

In January a year ago the weekly wage average was $71.89 for a 40.7-hour week and hourly his product as a result of the said a great deal of research evidence, suggested both the need and desire by some segments of the public for knowledge of birth control.

He said the pamphlet was simple, straightforward and inoffensive, and as such, was valuable. Churches, such as the Anglican and United had changed their attitude towards birth control and today neither opposed it or encouraged it, Dr. Spencer said.

Mr. Fine said both the natural health and customs and equine departments were aware of his advertising plan and had admitted to him they had never prosecuted anyone under the criminal code section dealing with the subject.

A subsection of the section dealing with the subject stipulates there is no offence if the action is taken to serve the public good.

Mr. Fine said he received 22,000 requests for samples of his product as a result of the campaign.

Released Man Flown Back To Air Base

MANILA (AP) — Robert McCann was flown by Clark Air Base today on his journey back to the United States to die after spending 10 years in a Red Chinese prison.

The 60-year-old former businessman from Pasadena, Calif., ravaged by cancer, was flown in the U.S. Air Force hospital at the base north of Manila on arriving from Hong Kong.

McCann's wife, who travelled 8,000 miles to Hong Kong to plead with the Chinese Communists for her husband's release, said the doctors in Hong Kong had given her husband "only a few days to live."

McCann seemed in great pain as he was carried on a stretcher from the air force transport that brought him from Hong Kong.

Mrs. McCann said that since she first saw her husband, last Thursday, she had not discussed with him the various charges of espionage on which the Communists sentenced him in 1951 to 15 years in prison.

Sir Winston Will Pay Visit To Palm Beach

NASSAU (AP)—A yacht carrying Winston Churchill left here Thursday night reported to be bound for Palm Beach, Fla., on what would be the former British prime minister's first visit to the United States since 1959.

Sir Winston caught Nassau unawares when he came ashore unannounced Thursday with a group from Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis' yacht Christina.

Churchill, 86, clutched his traditional cigar and made a two-hour stopover "for Victory" sign to Bahamians who watched him board a taxi for a two-hour tour of New Providence Island.

A Christina yeoman said at Nassau the ship was bound next for Palm Beach.

At Palm Beach, unofficial reports said the vessel was expected to dock at the exclusive Bellerah Club today.

Charter Night On May 9th For New Club

TRENTON — May 9 will be charter night for a new and interesting organization which had recently been formed in Trenton. On that date, the Trenton Toastmasters' Club will come into being. President club members have been holding dinner-discussion meetings in a local hotel every Tuesday night for the past few weeks. Each member is involved to discuss a given topic in an address of one minute's duration. It is planned to have special speakers address the club from time to time. Don Rose is the president of the new organization.

Members stress the fact that the new club is not a service club. Members are interested in self-improvement, especially in the field of public speaking and personality improvement.

There are 4,000 Toastmasters' clubs in Canada and the United States. Members are, for the most part, young, ambitious young men, anxious to get ahead in their business or other clubs have been formed by younger women.

One member said that the club was run "along Dale Carnegie lines." He said that the membership was limited to 40 to give each member an equal chance to express his views on the subjects under discussion.

False Alarm

TRENTON — Around 3 o'clock last night the Trenton fire department received a call to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Tait, Telephone Road. Upon their arrival at the scene the firemen found that the owners were away and that there was no fire. It is thought that the call was the work of pranksters.

Men and equipment were sent to Mount Pelion where a grass fire was in progress. The fire was still smouldering this morning.

BORDER CROSSING

A record number of returning Canadians are expected at the three-per-cent increase in border crossings from the United States in 1960.

Sokol May Use Gym at School

TRENTON — Yesterday, members of the Sokol Club, Company said that the staff at Trenton High School and members of the Trenton school board were trying to work out some arrangements whereby the high school gymnasium and equipment could be used by the Sokol Club class one night a week. Provincial basket-ball play-offs are now in progress but it is hoped that when these have been completed the class may be allowed to use the school facilities. This summer, the Sokol class will participate in a gymnastic display at Chicago and the members are anxious to keep in trim for this event.

Various organizations in the Trenton area have come forward with offers of the use of their places of meeting for the numerous clubs and organizations which ordinarily used the Bessey Memorial hall which was destroyed by fire March 17.

The Trenton Legion branch has granted the Eastern Ontario Conservatory Association of its auditorium for practice for an indefinite period until other local organizations have made similar offers of assistance.

Train Cripples In Jewelry Job

TRENTON — On Thursday, Miss Eva Morrison, a resident of the Church of Divine Comfort, said that the committee had been able to secure a small stuccoed building on Bay Street West, owned by Jim Patterson, a member of the Quinte Disabled Person's Club could carry on its jewelry assembly business and train other crippled persons in this trade.

Miss Morrison said that the Trenton Rotary Club will do the building forces this year. She said that she was not free to divulge the exact plans of the committee at this time, but that there was some indication that a larger building might be leased or built for this work at a later date.

Mr. Patterson recently attended a course in jewelry assembly in Ottawa.

Miss Morrison said that the Bay Street West property and building had been levelled and raised and that painting of the interior would be started soon.

Oil Algae Give off on Dying Has Some Water Users Crying

Does your tap water have a peculiar taste or odor?

Well, don't worry about it! It's the advice of the Belleville filtration plant. It won't hurt you. Some people seem quicker to notice the taste than others because, while some have complained, others report they haven't noticed the "new" taste or odor.

Plant manager James Scriven said today Belleville's drinking water supply from the bay has been invaded by algae, the first time that he can remember when this has happened so early in the year.

"In all the time I have been here I don't remember ever affecting our water this early," he said. Occurrences in the summer we really get algae, but this is unusual."

He said the water has been tested and found safe for drinking.

"Actually," he said, "it's not the algae which cause the strange taste or odor. It's an oil given off by the algae when they die. Our purification system can take care of algae but we're not equipped to combat the oil they give off on dying. I've ordered some carbon which, I hope, will do the trick. Ontario Water Resources Commission people are coming here Monday to look into it."

Mr. Scriven said he did not know definitely where the algae entered the bay but he suspected the Moira River.

The filtration plant has received a few complaints, "but I'm not getting excited."

"As long as our drinking water is chlorinated, it is safe for drinking," he said. "Besides we have a good chlorination system."

Jack Gower Marina to Open New Showroom, Lunch Counter

Everything for the boatman and his boat!

That's the new service motto for the Jack Gower Marina which this year is expanding operations to include a new sales and showroom and a lunch counter service for the boat owners.

"It's been a long felt need on the Belleville harbor", noted Marina operator Jack Gower said.

During the boating season the Marina will be open to serve lunches and to sell gasoline from noon to 8 p.m. Monday until eleven at night. In the past boat owners have been unable to get gasoline until at least nine in the morning.

Although still waiting the opening of the 1961 boating season, requirements will be continued.

The Gower Marina, is Belleville's only supporter for Johnson outboards ranging all the way from three up to 75 horsepower.

They also handle M.F.G. fiberglass boats of all sizes as well as Gren-ell pleasure craft for the more discriminating boat owner.

OPENED THIS WEEKEND

But with the opening of the local boating season the Marina lunchroom is also expected to be opened with both local and visiting boat owners.

"We will have everything for the boat owner, including ice to keep his food fresh, as well as gasoline and oil," said Mr. Gower.

Mrs. Gower is just as enthusiastic as is her husband. She will supervise the lunch counter operations.

The new Marina building will be officially opened this weekend with a big boat show starting today and continuing all next week.

Half of the new 55-foot Marina building has been set aside for the display of pleasure craft where boats may be seen under the most ideal conditions. A paved floor will allow outdoor display of other craft.

On the harbor side of the building will be a 24x100 foot dock fitted with chairs and benches for the convenience of boating visitors.

OLDEST OPERATOR

As the oldest marine service operator in Belleville, Mr. Gower sees an increasing popularity for boating and water activities in the years to come.

"Just a few years ago the registration for power boats in Belleville was but 300. Today it is more than 2,600 and is still growing."

The rapid growth of boating has been reflected directly in the operation of the Gower Marina where present service facilities are now inadequate to keep up with servicing demands. As a result the service department is to be enlarged. The present retail outlet for boating requirements will be continued.

The Gower Marina, is Belleville only supporter for Johnson outboards ranging all the way from three up to 75 horsepower.

They also handle M.F.G. fiberglass boats of all sizes as well as Gren-ell pleasure craft for the more discriminating boat owner.

CAN'T AFFEAR

TORONTO (CP) — Brendan Behan will not be able to appear in court today to face charges of creating a disturbance in a theatre. The Irish playwright is still in a private hospital here suffering from what doctors say is a combination of pneumonia and bronchitis.

Doctor Happy In His Work With Farmers

ST. EUGENE, Ont. (CP)—If the era of the old-fashioned country doctor is on the way out, as many seem to think, the modern trends haven't caught up with Dr. Charles-Emile Lacerte and don't seem likely to.

The 54-year-old veteran of 30 years of practice in this French-speaking farming community near the Ontario-Quebec border says he once had thoughts of specializing in surgery in the city but long ago gave up the idea.

"I have refused interesting offers in Montreal and other cities," he says. "But live in a city? I could never do that. Besides I have never liked cities. It's the fresh air that I need to make me happy."

And so he has chosen to remain a country doctor in a community where patients are also his friends, where he often works 15 hours a day or more, where he has delivered some 3,500 babies—including three by his own wife—and where he is often a family counsellor as well as medical adviser.

CHANGED HIS MIND

He recalled that he came to St. Eugene just after finishing medical examinations and was looking forward to earning enough money to specialize in surgery.

"After two years I had the money. But I liked the place, the people and the work I had made adieu to surgery, got married and stayed."

One problem he faced was in getting people to respect his office hours.

"That was a difficult job but they finally came to understand that office hours are not established for nothing. But my days never end. Just after I'm about to retire, the telephone rings. It it's an urgent call, I go.

He spends his mornings visiting patients, most of them aged. He has been seeing-Mrs. Adrien Brazeau regularly for 13 years and for the 40-year-old wife of Peter his visit is an event she looks forward to from week to week.

"My patients not only relate to me their little problems but consult me about their wills and various other things. They'll tell me about their family problems, especially the women."

5 Supermarket Chains on Strike, 9,000 Involved

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP)—A union of meatcutters and clerks went on strike at 75 Loblaw stores and 5 others in Ohio Thursday and five other supermarket chains shut down in sympathy.

Nearly 9,000 workers struck the 300 stores involved. There are 2,000 additional Loblaw employees because of the cost of keeping the huge base open.

The Amalgamated Meat Cutters, Butchers and Affiliated Crafts Union contend that Loblaw's was attempting to destroy the union by refusing to bargain individually.

In addition to Loblaw's, the affected chains are: The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, American store (Acme), P. and C, Victory-Johnson and Kenny.

Robert McIntyr, the management negotiator, said talks broke off after the union submitted what he termed a contract economic package for the first time since negotiations began Jan. 16.

Under the demands, he said, a meat cutter now paid $104 for a 40-hour week would get as much as $140 under the two-year contract asked by the union.

STRATFORD (CP) — A director of the Canadian Western Development Association suggested Wednesday that participation of municipalities in such organizations should be obligatory. A. C. Ferguson of Regina, recommended at the association's annual meeting that the provincial government institute legislation obliging municipalities to become members. All municipalities benefit when you wrong such organizations, he said.

LEOPOLDVILLE (CP)—Rene cery coupled with practical considerations.

LeBlanc says he may one day consider those jobs he was recently offered in Katanga province, but the political situation has to settle down first.

LeBlanc, husky, garrulous city manager of Dorval, Que., spent 4½ weeks on special assignment for the United Nations, planning a reduction in staff at the former Belgian military base of Kamina, in Katanga province.

Twice, during visits to the provincial capital of Elizabethville, he was offered jobs by ministers in the government of Premier Moise Tshombe. And a territorial administrator at Kamina offered to hire him.

"I told them that if they ever achieve political stability, they can write to me and I'll consider the offers.

"You know, I love that country and the climate; But things are too unsettled. I don't want to bring my wife there now."

LeBlanc stopped here briefly on his way home.

Even without political stability, LeBlanc says he has a good mind staying at Kamina another six months.

"I have been shopping and there are hardly any stores," he joked. "Seriously, my friends and I got along very well with the Belgians and other Europeans."

TOP AIRPORT

Kamina was built by Belgium as a para-commando training base and during the Congo crisis was expanded to include additional flights for Belgian pilots and one of the most modern airfields in Africa.

After the arrival of UN forces in The Congo last July and the withdrawal of most Belgians, it was used as a UN military base and one of the principal air transport centres for the UN. The UN wants to withdraw all but essential maintenance personnel because of the cost of keeping the huge base open.

Basically, my job was to try to organize a plan so they can maintain the base with a minimum of personnel."

That included a study of the base's power plant, electrical distribution system and substations, water filtration, sewage disposal system—one of the few in Africa—roads, drainage system and other services.

LeBlanc's completed report goes to the new Tshombe cabinet under McFarquhart of Britain, co-ordinator of technical assistance operations in The Congo. Details of the report were confidential.

LeBlanc made frequent study trips to other Congolese cities and side visits to nearby villages around Kamina.

"These villages are among the most fascinating parts of The Congo. They remind me so much of my home. To think an African village looked like this we were living. They are still grass and mud huts, naked children running around and tribalchiefs.

Spring Is Tardy

Easter has come and gone, the calendar says that it is April and snow in any quantity is a fading memory—yet spring is but a promise. Tickle April, of course, may have changed her dress and her mood before this ever sees print. Today, though, she presides over a sere world, a landscape dead as that which meets the jaded eye in late November days. On the south side of the house, there may be a few spikes of green ar tulips for other bulbs send probes above their brown blankets, in search of a balmy breeze and a warming sun. To the casual observer though, there is no stirring of life.

All this will change and the longer the change is delayed the more certain that it will come quickly, in one of those heart-warming transformations which make us aware of the full glory of spring. Better by far that spring delay than come until she is ready to settle down for a real visit, than that she dash in the back door unexpectedly, warm her toes for a moment at a radiator still tuned to winter's demands and be chased away again by snow, sleet, hail or frost.

Still and all, it is an uneasy period, this waiting for her arrival. True, Easter was early this year. True, rubbers have been discarded and now lie, mud-caked, in the hall closet, their very presence an uncertain insurance against their being needed again some morning. True, too, that many a housewife, suiting her actions to the story of the calander rather than to the song the breezes sing, has started her spring housecleaning and will shortly be making urgently-worded demands that the storm windows be removed and stored in the basement. Truly, even, that the ice is moving in the bay and the free-flowing rivers may soon be invaded by spawning fish. Nonetheless true that it is not spring.

There has yet to come a day when the lighter spring coat, instead of being hugged around one, becomes a nuisance and a burden, to be shrugged back on the shoulders and let flop like a carefree flag in a romping south wind. There has yet to come a day when a man thinks that it might even be fun to clean the debris of the past four or five months off the front lawn and to chat with a neighbor and even to sneak around to the back, find a dry spot and snooze in the sun for a few moments.

Here it is Stanley Cup finals time and there still does not seem anything strange about people playing and watching hockey. A couple of springs ago the Macs were back from Europe at this time of year and, if memory serves us aright, were driving around in convertibles with only a few shivers.

We do not know how things are with golfers and tennis players, but we have not heard much talk about them rushing the season. Baseball bats have not become a common sight in street games.

Outside our window, the Moirs flows quietly and will not enjoy even one day's rampage this year.

But all this will be forgiven if only spring, when she does arrive, will not flirt with us too outrageously, but will settle down as if she were at home and give us the pleasure of her company without any lengthy absences. One has learned to expect occasional tantrums, a sudden packing of bags and departure for southern climes, even under the most favorable circumstances, but let these displays of temperament be short this year, for we have been a long time waiting.

Or so, at least, it seems to us, this dull, drab day.

Must Make Distinction

The Ontario Commercial Teachers group at the annual OEA convention this week was told that in future office clerks will have little chance of promotion unless they have university degrees. H. J. M. Watson, general supervisor of methods and procedures for the Steel Co. of Canada, said that the computer age required university training. We suppose that Mr. Watson knows what he is talking about and that what he says is not nonsense. All we can add is that it ought to be nonsense.

It may very well be that a high school education may not be enough in the computer age, but it is absurd to suggest that running a computer requires a university degree, if this degree signifies what it ought to. It is becoming more and more obvious that some immediate distinction between technical training and university study is essential.

To make universities mere trade schools is to debase them. On the other hand, just because a person may not be mentally equipped to benefit by a university course does not mean he or she cannot be turned into a competent technician.

Strictly Personal
Criminal Punishment Not Logical

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

The people who would increase punishment for crimes are not stupid; they are just incapable of logical, rational ideas. For the whole history of mankind has shown that severity of punishment does not reduce or deter crime.

Punishment has become less severe over the centuries, not because we are more humane or sentimental than past generations, but because hard experience has shown that punishment in itself is futile.

Men used to be subjected to the most horrible tortures and dismemberments for even the pettiest of crimes; but the murder rate did not decrease with this treatment. Public pickpockets were publicly hanged on Tyburn Hill in England, other pick-pockets used to circulate among the crowd during the executions.

There are only three things that really deter crime — the certainty of detection and trial, and the justice of punishment. It is the first two, and not the severity of confinement (which merely brutalizes men), or with the privileged classes, the mere disgrace of being publicly tried, that are effective.

If we are not able to work out any rational and effective preventive program for crime, it is our obligation to see that our penological system is sensible and workable.

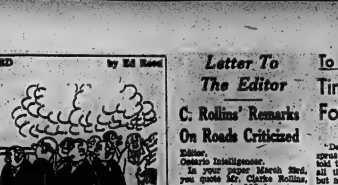
The criminal code is embarrassingly high in the United States because, as Bernard Shaw, I believe, is anything but sure, and it has only the vaguest relationship to justice.

The length of sentences depends more on accidents of time and type of legal help more than upon the seriousness of his particular crime. Our penalties are slow and cumbersome. It is not the swift, sure punishment at which gets the heaviest sentence — so the aim of criminals is to escape both and run, and thus avoid the hardest penalties.

It may surprise people who point to England's low crime rate to learn that the average prison sentence there is shorter than in the U.S. But the English system of justice is swift and sure — money and politics do not enter into the case, the prisoner at the bar and the judge on the bench.

Meting out heavier sentences is fanatically idiotic (and crippling to the economic powers of prison), as long as the lawbreaker knows that skilful legal talent and the right connections can long postpone or easily ameliorate his circumstances. There is not a penologist or a prison warden in the country who is not painfully aware of this contradiction.

When we demand greater punishment for law-breakers, we are really confessing our inability or to some extent, even with the corruption of justice in our amoral society.



People Good Investment

Halifax Chronicle-Herald

For citizens of any country, there are two avenues of investment — in natural resources and in its people. Both, it is hoped, will benefit Canada and help finance results.

The potential rewards of buying mines and stocks are self-evident. Until recently, however, emphasis on education at both the school and university levels, has all too unfortunately been thought of by many quarters as merely a "good thing," rather than a materialistic age which likes to measure results in dollars and cents, graphs and statistics, this motivation has not been strong enough on the whole investment in people has lagged behind that in mineral and other resources.

The folly of continuing this imbalance is now being widely appreciated these days — on purely economic grounds.

Serfs Freed Century Ago

Washington Post

With the interest in the Lincoln Inaugural and the revival of the Civil War epic, another important centennial anniversary slipped by almost unnoticed. We refer, of course to the abolition of the ancient institution of serfdom in Russia by the Ukase of Czar Alexander II, dated March 3, 1861.

The abolition was part of this reform—if that is what it should be called—seems to have been the work of Count Nikolay Alexeyevich Zhukovsky and Gen. Jakov Rostovtsev, both advanced liberal for those days, unhappily died before it had been realized. Rostovtsev, however, has given most of the credit to Czar Alexander, although there is a widespread opinion that he does not altogether deserve it.

Indeed many historians include Alexander Herzen, Bernard Pares and Alexander Kornilov consider Alexander to have been only a lukewarm liberal and in any event an instrument.

Drage, for one, has ironically contrasted the ferment and turmoil under the reign of his immediate successor, Alexander III with the relative tranquility — except for the floods of the Crimean War — under the repressive rule of the autocratic reign of his father, Nicholas I.

Nicholas, at least contrived to die in his bed—something of an achievement for the Russian autocrats. Alexander II was torn to pieces by a bomb thrown by a revolutionary conspiracy, Alexander III, another autocrat, died in Livadia, the Crimean resort, of Bright's disease, and Nicholas II, the last of the Romanovs, was murdered by the Bolsheviks.

The hundred years since the emancipation of the moujiks have seen the Russian state, after a few decades of bitterly fought efforts toward freedom, pass from one form of absolutism to another. The last of the tsars, all the life of moujik on a modern, collective or collective farm, is better than his life on the estate of the nobility or aristocrat before 1861, is a question about which we shall allow him to formulate your own answer.

Letter To The Editor

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

In your paper March 23rd, you quote Mr. Lewis Rollins, our present M.L.A., some statements he made in the Ontario Legislature, with which I do not agree nor do I believe the majority of the people agree.

He is quoted as saying "we have suffered all these years from the way the Hepburn road program was administered," that highways built by them were never up to standard. True the part of Highway 62 built under the Hepburn government starting from the Millbridge turn to near Bancroft was not built to as high a standard as is now being used, but every yard of it was built to the standard used at that time. Grades were only cut to 7 per cent and curves were cut to 10 percent and lower in many places.

I would like to remind Mr. Rollins that the part built by the Hepburn government was built over thirty years ago and has carried the traffic from south to north for many years, from south all these years and is still carrying it. I think that is better than riding having to suffer it has been a blessing.

He is also quoted as saying that "the highway built by the Hepburn government from Madoc to Bancroft would have to be rebuilt." I would like to inform him that highway was only one yard of new highway built by the Hepburn government from Madoc to Bancroft.

All they ever did with that section was to maintain it as good a county road. I know, for I had charge of maintenance.

I would also like to remind Mr. Rollins that when the Hepburn government came to power there were not one mile of Provincial road in the north of this county and Bancroft. When they went out of power there were highways leading north, south and west out of Bancroft.

Highway 28 from Bancroft to Peterborough was started and a lot of it built by the Hepburn government. It is a fine road.

There is much more I could say about our highways built over 30 years ago.

Peter McLaren.

poor Alexander II bleed to death after a bomb had exploded in his bed in the Winter Palace in St. Petersburg was a 19-year-old Russian who many years later became Czar Nicholas II.

One of the young fanatics identified at the time with the Narodnaia Volia was named Georgi Valentinovich Plekhanov. He was originally attracted to the notions of Bakunin for those of Marx, to become the ideological tutor to Nikolai Lenin and so, in a way, a sort of grandparent to the present Communist party.

In short, the age of emancipation in Russia was parralleled by an age of intense revolutionary fervor.

The reign of Alexander II was also the great era of Russian literature. Its luminaries included, among others, Turgenev, Dostoievsky and Tolstoy.

The hundred years since the emancipation of the moujiks have seen the Russian state, after a few decades of bitterly fought efforts toward freedom, pass from one form of absolutism to another. The last of the tsars, all the life of moujik on a modern, collective or collective farm, is better than his life on the estate of the nobility or aristocrat before 1861, is a question about which we shall allow him to formulate your own answer.

STRENGTH FOR THE DAY
DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

ALL IN LOVE

Much of the evil done in life is the result of thoughtlessness. There are people who plan evil. There are really wicked people. Into evil ways. There are ignorant people who do terrible wrong. Doing. But most of our wrongdoing comes as the result of thoughtlessness. We just cannot put ourselves in the place of others and so we do not pause to them to have us think and do certain things.

Injured feelings are often the result of self-pity. The person who is always having his feelings or hers hurt is a weak and abnormal person. But hurt feelings can also be genuine. Sometimes without realizing it we hurt the feelings of our loved ones, and usually it is because we are thoughtless. We wish them well but good. We love them. But once in a while we say something or do something which shows them to depths which we do not even know exist.

So watch your tongue. Be careful about your pen and typewriter. Watch what you say to a neighbor. In discussing a friend with another friends, give the person under discussion the full benefit of every doubt. Be charitable.

The mind and soul have tender areas which can easily be wounded. Let the golden rule light. Let the judgement be charitable. Let all be done in love.

Brisk Market For Swords

Des Moines Register

As the world trembles (more or less) under the shadow of intercontinental ballistic missiles, supersonic jet planes and similar devices of mass destruction, Wilkinson Swords of London, one of the world's foremost sword - making establishments, is enjoying a sharp boom in its business.

It is selling swords by the dozen these days to Indonesian marines, Burmese soldiers, Haile Selassie's personal bodyguard troops, and to various princes and potentates of lodges, orders and societies.

Swords are being purchased too, by people in trouble spots such as Africa who want them for self-defense. A snappy item with the Wilkinson people is a sword stick which is concealed in a walking stick.

All Wilkinson swords are real fighting weapons, razor sharp, resilient and sharp. Wilkinson's salesmen have a sneaking suspicion that the sword is not absolutely fine for cutting cheese at a reception of war.

They might come in handy at that — if you can't get along with sledgehicks, clubs, crossbows and lances.

THE PACKSACK
BY GREGORY CLARK

Parkinson's law applies to car trunks just the way it does to its economy. "Work expands," states the famous law, "to fill the time available for its completion."

If there is no time, work contracts. It is astonishing how little there is to do if there is no time to do it. And just as astonishing how much there is to go in the trunk "to spare" if is the same with car trunks. When we had the Buick years ago with a trunk half the length of the car, there were always a few things every week-end that we couldn't get in the trunk and had to put in the back seat with the dog.

Then we got a smaller car, the only bad feature of which was the peewee sized trunk which, however, we learned to cut our luggage, and were amazed at what it held. Now the trunk except a couple of things as usual, that had to go on the back seat, we got a little compact car. There surely could be no question this time. But Dr. Parkinson was right. We carried out our junk. It all went in the trunk, except a couple of things we wanted to carry. But a curious thing happened. We have to go a distance, this time as usual, on the back seat.

African Motion On Apartheid Facing Defeat

UNITED NATIONS (CP)—Africa - backed demands for a world-wide break with South Africa faced almost certain defeat today as the Western powers and Asian nations threw support behind a milder proposal.

The African call for UN members to sever diplomatic and economic relations with South Africa's white supremacist government was to be voted on in the UN special political committee this afternoon.

Diplomats predicted that even if it got the simple majority needed in the 98-nation committee, the measure could not get the two-thirds vote required for approval in the General Assembly.

Twenty - four African nations joined by Cuba and Indonesia sponsored the sweeping demand for sanctions. The nine-nation Soviet bloc also pledged its support, but that left the resolution still far short of two - thirds backing.

The United States indicated it favored less vigorous sponsored by India, Ceylon and Malaya which denounces South Africa's racial policies but leaves it up to individual nations to decide whether to take sanctions.

Britain, France and Canada also said they would vote against sanctions.

In the budgetary committee Thursday Australia warned that failure of countries to meet their financial obligations "could spell the end of the United Nations as we have known it."

But Finland's Mongi Slim disputed this view.

Focus on Health

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Topics this week: Hot coffee, the bite of false teeth and an ancient dietitian's advice.

HOW HOT IS HOT?

No matter how hot you like your coffee, the roof of your mouth will take only so much heat before it hurts. The pain threshhold is always near 118 degrees Fahrenheit, say U.S. Navy researchers.

Even though some people like the sting and stimulation of hot coffee, they usually sip some air beforehand to prepare the way by cooling the palate.

MOLAR MUSIC

Radio broadcasts from false teeth? A U.S. Air Force dental researcher has developed such a system to ensure a proper "bite" in the set the patient finally gets.

He has rigged a tiny radio transmitter to be built into the prospective set of false teeth, so that any tooth contact or combination of contacts sends out a signal. These are recorded by a receiver in the patient's pocket.

By using different dentures in the same patient's mouth, it may be possible to get the best possible arrangement of teeth.

INDIGESTION RECIPE?

Mix equal parts of water and onions in a bowl, let stand for four days, beat part of the contents to a froth and drink for four days.

That was dietary advice, circa 1,500 BC, "to drive away indigestion" though it sounds more likely to bring it on. Culled from the Ebers papyrus, an ancient Egyptian medical treatise, it is at least early evidence that diet has long been used, sometimes wrongly, in medical treatment, say University of Michigan researchers.

More-useful elements from old Egyptian medicine: Castor oil as a purgative, raw meat for bruised and blackened eyes.

FAMILY ALBUM?

At least some warts—those small benign tumors — are caused by a virus. Researchers have known this for some time. Now they have compared electron microscope pictures of this virus with those of another, more deadly virus.

The deadly virus is the polyoma which causes a wide variety of malignant tumors in several kinds of animals. Although it is smaller than the wart virus, Canadian researchers find, the two—one benign, the other malignant—have a similar structure.

A blunt and simple statement

"I would like to reiterate my endorsement of a pledge made by The British American Oil Company to the motorists of Canada many years ago:

'We will not permit a single competitor to make a better gasoline.'

"This pledge has always meant exactly what it says. It is a blunt and simple statement that our Company will always be in the forefront of product improvement and that we simply will not permit anyone to exceed us in product quality.

'There is not a single product improvement known to the petroleum industry that is not reflected in the formulation of B-A 88 and Velvet 98 gasolines.'

"Whether or not you are knowledgeable about recent advances in petroleum refining...whether you are enlightened or confused by claims and counter-claims...the important thing for you, as a buyer of gasoline, is to have a dependable and continuing yardstick of quality.

"We offer the B-A pledge as that yardstick—as precise and accurate a statement as when we first made it:

'We will not permit a single competitor to make a better gasoline.'

Superb Portrayal, 'Song Of Switzerland', Enthralling

One of the finest travelogues of the current "Adventure Series" under the auspices of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, was presented last evening by Curtis Nagel in his portrayal of "Song of Switzerland" at the Collegiate auditorium. From the first picture in the concluding one of snow-capped peaks, the capacity audience was enthralled with this wonderland of exquisite beauty, truly an "Alpine Paradise."

Curtis Nagel, the narrator and co-producer, was awarded the Travelogue Adventure Series "Oscar" for the excellence of his photography. The warmth and geniality of his portrayal added greatly to the presentation of one of the most beautiful, yet the smallest country in the world. As Argentina is known as the "Switzerland of South America, and Banff the Switzerland of North America, so Switzerland is the "Switzerland of Switzerland, a jewel set in eternal stone."

MUCH HYDRO POWER

Switzerland is the most electrified country in Europe. Huge hydro plants supply much power for France. It is composed of "cantons" or states, and is fully militarized, which is compulsory, and is famous for its mechanics and exports more products than any other country of similar size in the world. There are no slums, and a high standard of living prevails throughout.

The Swiss owe their heritage to the Germans, French and Italians, who have been instrumental in molding their background. They never meddle in war; there are no lost youths whose blood has sprinkled the battlefields, and the way of life is one of genuine happiness, hence the caption "Song of Switzerland."

The people, are wholesome musical, fond of beauty, agricultural in temperament, with their herds of fine cattle, and goats, pasturing on the mountain slopes, where they are milked; its cheeses are noted throughout the world for delicioumess.

SCENES VIEWED

Some of the scenes viewed dated back 20 centuries, showed the remains of Roman architecture in the massive walls, resembling the great wells of China. A great Roman arena, smaller in size than that of Rome; and a solid gold bust of Marcus Aurelius; Roman carriages, the formation of the first Republic with its capital at Swiz; and the present capital of Berne with its modern and old buildings forming an intriguing picture; the market held on the empty street where steadiness predominates and flowers hold sway; the 600th anniversary which continues for three days, with its colorful marching bands and delightful music of Swiss folk marches; street dances and floats depicting the different industries; lovely to behold, fashioned of flowers in every hue. One especially interesting float depicted the state coach of England in which Princess Margaret rode to her marriage, was fashioned of golden roses; while others were equally beautiful.

A particularly interesting scene was that of a modern departmental store which featured a swimming pool where customers enjoyed the warm and sparkling water with the water-cupped mountains seen through the glass windows. Here, too, is the finest watches in Europe and the Red Arrow train, the fastest in Europe.

There were glaciers with ice hundreds of feet thick through which tunnels have been made, were sky blue in color due to the mineral ingredients of the water and extending 15 miles in length.

Wood carving is an art. One of the native carvior mountain goats from one solid piece of wood was exceedingly fine. There were also wooden fixtures and peasant colored in native costume; little jewel boxes fashioned like chalets, the roof of which lifted forming the lid. Red geraniums lined the window boxes of the houses, which were ancient outside, but modern inside; and along the streets, tall six foot geraniums were trained to resemble pedral rose bushes, with clusters atop the single stem; the long horns, 12 feet in length, which were used as signals from mountain top to mountain, top, all contributed to a fascinating story.

MOUNTAIN SCENES

Following the intermission, many of the scenes were of the lofty mountains which rose from the edge of blue water lakes, Lake Lucarno, Lucerne, and others, where little towns dotted the shores. A monument to William Tell, of storybook fame, was noted, and the story told of his marksmanship. There were comfortable hotels at the city of Lucerne similar to those of the French Riviera; lovely fountains, and a second bridge nine hundred years old. At Geneva there was the highest fountain known, towering 390 feet into the air; the palace of Nations building; the flower festival, and the Castle of Chillon.

At Lucarno the oldest castle was seen; Lake Maggiore with its sailing vessels; and a pastoral scene of an ox and horse working together pulling a cart, in perfect harmony, are but a few of the sparkling pictures of this delightful and beautiful country.

A visit to the watch-making factory where the Swiss watches are made, showing the minuteness of the perfectly fashioned screws which are used in their manufacture, was of much interest, as were the dolls which played the harpsichord and drew pictures, working by delicate and most intricate machinery, almost human-like in expression. Many others might be mentioned, but these will long be remembered by all who were present at this outstanding travelogue.

Mr. Nagel was introduced by Mr. Ralph Graham.

Christ Church Afternoon WA Sponsors Delightful Spring Tea

A delightful spring tea and bazaar was held Thursday afternoon by the Afternoon Branch of the Women's Auxiliary, in the Parish Hall, at Christ Church, with a number of patrons and friends attending despite somewhat overcast skies. The convener for the occasion was Mrs. R. Woodcock, assisted by her co-convener, Mrs. L. Watson.

Graciously receiving the many guests at the entrance to the appropriately decorated auditorium, which was in keeping with the spring color scheme of mauve and yellow were Mrs. H. Pitt, president of the Auxiliary, and Mrs. R. Godden, Ontario Diocesan Dorcas secretary-treasurer.

ATTRACTIVE TEA ROOM

The tea table was especially attractive with its sparkling white linen table cloth, centred with a colorful display of yellow and mauve chrysanthemums flanked by sunny yellow tapering candles in bright silver candelabra with gleaming silver tea service.

The numerous guest tables with their embroidered and lace edged white luncheon cloths, with an artistic arrangement of single and double mauve and yellow blooms in crystal containers, were equally attractive.

The spring motif was further carried out by the numerous potted plants and blooms in the afore-mentioned spring shades adorning each of the window sills, encircling the tea room.

The tea room hostesses were: Mrs. G. G. Wright and Mrs. L. Watson and those who presided at the silver tea services during the afternoon were Mrs. Bamforth, wife of the rector; Mrs. H. A. C. Messiah, wife of the curate; Mrs. W. Allen and Mrs. H. Cooke.

Those who served were: Mesdames L. Hall; R. Wallbridge; J. Wright; G. Living-ston; A. Brownlee; C. Ostrom; and G. Adams, and those engaged in looking after the attractive trays replenished with dainty sandwiches and petite cakes were Mesdames Mrs. G. Dimsst and Mrs. J. C. Miles assisted by Mrs. J. E. Carr, Mrs. Roy Hubbard, Mrs. D. Walker and Mrs. G. Gist. Convening the tea table were Mrs. W. McLaughlin, assisted by Mrs. E. Orser and Mrs. R. Jones.

DELICIOUS HOMECOOKING

A most enticing table of delicious homecooking drew many customers, with its tasty and abundant supply of goodies which included a generous assortment of cookies; several varieties of tarts and pure cup cakes and centered the table was a scrumptious chocolate and white layer cakes; date loaves and numerous fresh rolls as well as jars of jams, jellies and relishes. A portion of the table was reserved for a tasty assortment of home-made candy which included triple creamy light and dark fudge and peanut brittle, mostly in little individual packages. In charge were Mrs. J. Chapman, assisted by Mrs. C. Hayes, Mrs. G. O'Brien and Mrs. C. Wright.

The first display at the fancy work table was a beautiful assortment of half and all-over aprons in nylon, organdy, print and broadcloth materials, some in plain colors, others in gay and colorful prints. Also the fancy and handicrafts table many lovely and useful articles were on display, especially the finely embroidered luncheon cloths and pillow slips, crocheted doilies, knitted baby sets, youngsters' socks and flanelette pyjamas with many other fine items. Backgrounding this display were two lovely quilts—one in particular in the Canadian Rose design was most attractive. In charge of the fancy goods was Mrs. W. Kempston, assisted by Mesdames E. Waterhouse, F. Clare, L. Monk and Miss B. Thomas.

The fish pond, always a drawing card for the young fry, was well patronized, having its usual variety of children's prizes. This was in charge of the Girls' Auxiliary, whose leader is Mrs. Clarence Fuzzen. Mrs. Isabel Wright convened this display, assisted by Ruth Francis, Joan Sherry, Patsy Kelley, Linda Whalen and Marina Bongard.

The treasurers for this most successful event were Mrs. G. E. Winer and Miss F. Ayling.

Group Met Once a Week During Lent

A Regional Catholic Social Life Conference on the theme, "The Christian Family Apostolate" was held last October in Peterborough. About 800 delegates, prominent clergy and laity from many Dioceses in Ontario and Quebec attended this conference.

The delegates heard lectures and participated in discussion groups on "The Christian Family Apostolate" during these three days and evenings. The parish delegates attended from St. Joseph's Parish, Belleville, namely Mr. James Wakelin representing the Holy Name Society and Mrs. George Whalen representing the Catholic Women's League. All delegates were urged, on returning home, to do something positive during the coming year in their respective parishes.

Teen-age Girls Not Getting Proper Diet

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The poor diet of many Canadian teen-age girls may have an unfortunate effect on their children, nutritionists told a conference of public health officials here Thursday.

Dr. George Beaton, associate professor of nutrition at the University of Toronto, said diet is related to natural abortions, malformations, premature births, size and health of the baby and toxaemia (internal poisoning).

Teen-age girls have the poorest diet of any group,in Canadian society, often eating much less than their nutritional requirements, the conference was told.

Diets in the teens, consisting largely of soft drinks, potato chips and coffee may have a much greater effect on pregnancies in the late teens and early 20s than nutritionists previously thought, the experts said.

"It is important to have an adequate intake of protein during pregnancy," Dr. Beaton said. "Proper nutrition may be more important before, than during, pregnancy."

BIRTH RATE

Experts expect that in 20 years' there will be an average four births and two deaths in the world every second.

MODERN MANNERS

Question — We are having an argument and two things to do with having wedding invitations engraved. Number one: Do you like the little pieces of tissue paper in the invitation when you mail it? Number two: Is it proper to have your h n s e cuddled engraved on the back flap of the envelope? There seems to be a lot of confusion about both of these questions, and we have gotten different answers from different customers. What do you think? Mrs. K. P. S., Chicago, Ill.

Answer — There should be no contention about it whatsoever. It is traditional, and has been for many many years, that the small piece of tissue be left in the invitation. The reason is that engraving is apt to smudge, and a wedding invitation should be received in immaculate condition. It is preferable to have the address embossed, rather than engraved, on the flap of the outside envelope. It costs no more and is much more dignified.

Question — I am a senior in high school. I have a steady date with a very nice girl, for every Sunday night. I go in bewied out the other evening by her father because I stopped out front and honked my horn when I went to call for her. He called me up to the front steps and said that it was no way to act, and that if I couldn't behave more like a gentleman I could just stop coming around. Don't you think he was a little hard on me? I was only trying to save time! Mr. T. B. S., Rochester, Minn.

Answer — I think your young lady's father is absolutely right! How rude can you get, saving time or no saving time? Never, ever, the ungentleman-ly habit again. Always park your car, go to the door and ring the bell, as you should do. I'm surprised the young lady has put up with your actions, let alone her Dad!

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a family disagreement presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.

Gene R. — She's making a career out of me and it's no good.

Ella R. He's my son, moon, and stars!

Gene R. — I was 46 when I married Ella three years ago and I thought I had done a good job of caring for myself up to then. She was about the same age and now, since there are no children, she seems to have developed a mother complex about me.

Suddenly I'm her baby, her big job in life. At first I enjoyed all the fuss. After years of loneliness it was nice to have someone care whether I remembered to wear rubbers and get my suit pressed. But now I find it oppressive. I get inspected each morning just like I did in the army!

The sun can be shining, but if Ella feels it's going to rain, I must take an umbrella. This makes me look like a jackass and I check it in a box at the subway station. After lunch each day, I must call and tell her what I ate.

I hear fellows complain that their wives neglect them. Boy, I should be so lucky!

Ella R. — I met Gene through mutual friends and they can't get over the improvement in his health and appearance since our marriage. He used to look pasty and seedy because he didn't eat right or keep his wardrobe in shape. Many's the time my friend invited him over for dinner, to put a square meal under his belt.

But now look at him! He's put on 30 pounds where he needed them. His cheeks are rosy, and he hasn't had a sick day. There's no reason for complaint. Sure, I ask him to phone about his lunch so I can plan the right dinner, I want to keep a well balanced diet. But he'd call home anyway because he's an endless chatterbox. I keep the talk geared to important topics.

Gene should appreciate my devotion. For one thing, nobody laughs at his get-ups any more. He used to wear yellow ties, green suits, purple socks! Now he has me to idolize and watch over him.

The Council — In the average marriage there are children and then, grandchildren. Along with children come outside interests in organizations, and causes, which affect them, such as the PTA and Boy Scouts. And later each of the partners is free to take on new challenges projects to enrich them culturally or financially. But Ella, poor frustrated Ella, is directing all the energy that might be required for the above interests to one captive, squirming outlet: Gene.

For Ella to borrow some lawyer — language, "Cease and desist!" With all her good intentions, there is a negative attached to her excessive ministrations in Gene's behalf. It's invisible but he's toting it up and feigning him. He must return to her the staggering sum total of satisfactions which most other wives receive from a dozen sources! To her, he must serve as mate, family, job, career, and Honor Roll. When all he contracted for was companionable husband!

We get the impression, in view of Ella's age at marriage, that she finds it hard to form new attachments and that once she effects a relationship she's bragging!

Mt. Pleasant U.C. Holds Easter Service

RAWDON — Mount Pleasant-Rawdon United Church was well filled with worshippers on Sunday afternoon, for the Easter service. Over 100 men, women and children were in attendance. Visitors were present from Toronto, Oshawa, Belleville, Picton, Trenton, Glen Miller and nearby points.

Several Easter lilies were used for decoration along with numerous other potted plants. The worship service featured an illuminated purple cross entwined with ivy, and an open Bible.

Mrs Kenneth Weaver, as organist and Mrs Mac Sharp, pianist, provided special music and the hymns were centred on the Resurrection. The full choir rendered an anthem and Miss Jean Sharpe rendered a vocal selection.

The offering included the Easter thankoffering of Mount Pleasant Women's Missionary Society, and the Mission Band and was gathered by Messrs Bert Sharp and Stanley Williams.

The pastor, the Rev. W. G. Fletcher, delivered the Easter message and dedicated two pedestal floral emblems, in memory of Mrs. Jennie Dunkley, who passed away on October 4th, 1960.

Mrs. Earl Dunkley placed two pots of Easter lilies in the containers at the close of the dedicating service.

Billy Graham's Film, "Africa On The Bridge" to Be Shown Saturday at Masonic Temple

Billy Graham's historic 17,000 mile "Safari for Souls" across Africa, is the theme of a new feature length motion picture, "Africa on the Bridge" which has its Belleville premiere at the Masonic Temple on April 8th at 7.45 p.m.

Photographed in authentic sound an natural color in 17 principal cities across Africa from Monrovia, Liberia to Cairo, Egypt, the document captures the spirit of Africa during these current crucial years. Frequently called "The Awakening Giant," Africa is depicted to be in a transition period — on a bridge — between ancient tribalism and the shining goal of independence from colonial rule. During this significant period, American Evangelist Billy Graham was accorded an unprecedented welcome by Africans ranging from Chiefs of State down to the general population of bush desert and jungle. A total of 800,000 persons attended outdoor mass meetings with nearly 35,000 inquirers remaining for further help and instruction.

"Africa on the Bridge" is a great pictorial scope, ranging from sequences depicting primitive village life to scenes of modern city and industrial life, including colorful and pagan rites and ceremonies are featured, together with some of the most remarkable big-game footage ever filmed.

Climaxing the story of the spiritual thrust of the Graham team is a tribute to the missionaries, whose years of faithful labors were in a large measure responsible for the spiritual harvest experienced by the evangelist. Missionary leaders and ministers joined with state and civic officials to extend the invitation for Mr. Graham to visit the continent.

"Africa on the Bridge" was directed by Dick Roes and produced by World Wide Pictures, the organization responsible for such well-known films as "The Heart is a Rebel," "Souls in Conflict," "Oiltown, USA," "Mr. Texas," and many others, with newest dramatic color feature scheduled for October release, "Shadow of the Boomerang," starring Georgia Lee and Dick Jones.

Owners Are Urged To Launch Jobs Early To Avoid Spring Rush

Home improvement activity, which ran at a record rate last year in sharp contrast to lagging housing starts, promises to outstrip even the rapid pace during the early months of 1961.

According to industry sources, home owners, contemplating repair, remodeling or modernization work, would be well advised to launch such projects at the earliest possible date in order to avoid the rush of home improvement jobs that can be expected to tax the capacity of many contractors and others involved, with the approach of spring.

Right now in many a family circle, one of the main topics of discussion is that "something must be done about the house" to bring it in line with expanding needs for living space or with modern standards of comfort, convenience and livability.

The honeymoon cottage that was ideal for two is found to be bursting at the seam with children and extra bedrooms become a "must." Or the old fashioned house that was bought primarily because of its size must be modernized. Or even the almost new house needs minor repairs.

PLAN COMES FIRST

Basic to launching a successful program of home improvement is the formulation of a all thought out plan, in which the relative urgency of specific family needs and the maintenance of property value should be major factors in establishing a logical order of "priorities" within the scope of the family's financial resources.

Which is just another way of saying "put first things first" in planning home improvements.

Usually it makes sense to start by putting your house in tip-top shape. Take a long, hard look at everything about your house: siding, roofing, windows, doors, floors, stairs, walls, even the heating system. Head your list of improvements with necessary repairs. Then consider remodeling, enlargement and modernization.

Include your entire property in your plan. If more living space is your most pressing need, determine how you can make the best possible use of every square foot available. What about the unfinished attic or basement? Does either or both afford space for creating extra bedrooms or a recreation room? Is such a transition practicable, cost-wise and otherwise? Should you convert the garage into an extra room?

UP-DATING HOMES

Even the newest houses have some things that can be improved by remodeling. Changes in lighting fixtures and the addition of wall paneling, built-in wardrobe units and closet accessories, built-in dressing tables, desks and breakfast bars are additions that will help to keep a house up-to-date and enhance the convenience and pleasure with which a family will live in it.

On the score of modernization, take a close look at those two focal points of household activity: the kitchen and the bathroom. To what extent have either or both become outmoded by recent improvements or refinements in these two realms? What steps should be taken to up-date them or expand their facilities? How much will it cost?

Once you have decided what should be done to improve your home, and in what sequence, you are ready to determine how much of the work you can or will want to do yourself, and how much will require outside help, and of what kind.

If you plan extensive work, by all means avail yourself of competent advice. Consult an architect. Also talk to recognized contractors in your area. Local lumber and other building supply dealers can also be extremely helpful.

PILOT BOAT SANK

HAMILTON (CP)—The Hamilton harbor commissioners' pilot boat Ire boat, the Judge McCoombs, sank Wednesday in 18 feet of water, three days after being launched. A watchman discovered the 32 - foot tug resting on the bottom of a marine dockyard slip. A spokesman for the commissioners could not explain the mishap. The tug was being refitted in preparation for St. Lawrence Seaway shipping expected to arrive about April 20.

Canadian Garden Service

By Gordon Lindsay Smith

Evening Gardening When Snow Is Deep

An interesting and very useful way of spending a late winter's evening is to get a pencil, paper and a good Canadian seed catalogue and plan the garden we are going to have just as soon as spring really arrives. Such plans, of course, are not absolutely necessary but they will be a big help and anyway in gardening planning is almost as good fun as planting.

In this planning we should note the mature size of the plants we are going to grow and the time they will be in bloom, or in the case of vegetables the time they will be in ready for the table. All this information and more will be found in the seed catalogue.

Location is another point to bear in mind. Some flowers thrive in full sun, others definitely prefer shade, some like a slope, others are not so particular; some want a damp spot, others insist on staying dry. There are even quite attractive flowers, portulaca, for instance, which will thrive in the hottest and dustiest spots imaginable. Another factor is fragrance. Some like stocks, nicotine and others which are not particularly beautiful plants, are primarily grown for their scent and add great attraction to the garden after dark. All these points should be noted as we browse through the catalogue and plan.

Why Not Grow Your Own

Where one requires a lot of bedding or started plants such as petunias, asters, zinnias or marigolds to get out in the flower garden once danger of frost is over, very substantial saving is realized by growing them from seed, and there is very little trouble in doing so. March is the proper time to start in most parts of Canada.

All that is needed is a pail or two of good fine garden soil in which has been mixed some peat moss or leaf mould and sand, in a flat or shallow wooden box about four inches deep or some flower pots, a few packets of seed and a sunny window.

Mix soil, sand and peat moss thoroughly, make as fine as possible. Soak well and plant the seed in merely pressing firmly in the soil. Water sparingly when the plants appear and turn box around frequently to keep sunlight uniform so that growth will be sturdy and even.

For at least a week before setting out permanently in the garden, the young plants should be hardened by exposing to outside temperatures and weather for a lengthening period each day.

Vegetables Do Have A Place

Many people who complain that they can't buy really fresh all vegetables, don't realize that they can and should grow some of these themselves even if only a tiny city garden is available. In the latter case, of course, no one is seriously suggesting that they could grow enough in winter's supply of potatoes or even any of this vegetable and many others that take up quite a bit of room. But there are several vegetables that can be grown in amazing quantity and take up practically no room at all. From a patch of ground not more than 10 or 15 feet square it is possible to keep a small family supplied with summer with lettuce, radish, carrots, beans, onions, beets, even a few tomatoes. The first named, lettuce, radish, carrots, etc., can be grown in rows a foot apart and a couple of inches each way in the row, and in most parts of Canada at least two and sometimes three or four successive crops in one season are possible. It is a wonderful convenience to have a small vegetable garden right at the back door and the extra quality and freshness will repay the little trouble necessary. Of course, on these high concentrated gardens, it is well to cultivate and water frequently and we succeed quite well with a good commercial fertilizer.

It won't be long now even in this country before we will be out with a spade. One of the first jobs will be planting shrubbery and trees. This and other "firsts" will be discussed next week.

Many Favor 'New Home at Old Address'

Millions of American families who made a "new home at the old address" spent nearly $20 billion on home modernization during 1960 according to Home Improvement Council, which represents manufacturers, dealers, contractors and others involved in the home improvement business.

In 1961, home owners will spend even more for this purpose, Council executives declare, pointing out that there is a growing realization on the part of property owners that remodelling can be a good investment. The home that is well kept and periodically improved will bring a much higher resale price than the owner's total investment in it.

Many families too, improve their present homes because they do not want to move. They have real friendships in the neighborhood. The children are settled in area schools. The housewife has come to know and have confidence in area retailers. These and a variety of other factors exert a tremendous hold.

Saving a millions of families do) in post-war homes built to minimum standards, and with large families, the happiest solution is often to improve the present dwelling.

Responsive to the needs of the many families embarking upon such projects is the growing number of one-stop home improvement centres, where home owners can obtain all of the materials and arrange for all labor needed for the most ambitious project, sometimes even get it all at the same time. As a result, home improvement projects are almost as easy to buy as a new car.

Family Fun Room Requires Durable Flc Covering

"Trouble free", is the number one requirement for all materials used in the family fun room.

A popular choice for flooring is resilient rubber or solid vinyl. Since the colors go all the way through in these high quality floorings, they withstand wear and tear of dancing feet, spilled glue from the hobby activities, dents from shall fly pull toys, spilled drinks and other hazards common to a heavy traffic room devoted to family recreation.

Both rubber and solid vinyl flooring may be considered as structural components which last for the life of the building.

It is easy for the do-it-yourself enthusiasts to install either rubber or solid vinyl in interesting designs. By creating special areas of activity through the resilient tile design, the home owners can achieve not only a feeling of greater spaciousness in the recreation room but also localize activities of different members of the family, for example.

Creating a shuffleboard or checkerboard pattern is part of the design of the family room floor is another way to

Hints on Heating Basement Playrooms

There are many ways to heat a new basement playroom, but to simplify matters, think about the heating work before partitions are constructed, advises the Better Heating - Cooling Council.

In older houses which have stoves or early hot water heating systems, the heat given off by the boiler and exposed piping keeps the unfinished basement quite comfortable. But most of the heat from the boiler is held back from the new playroom when the basement is converted.

Simplest way to keep the new playroom comfortable in this case it to take advantage of the heating system's existing piping which is located in the ceiling of the new playroom.

If this piping has an asbestos covering, this insulation should be removed. A silver or aluminum type paper, tacked to the ceiling or wood behind the piping, will act as a reflector. With this reflector in place, the piping will serve as a radiator. To hide the piping and give the job a trim look the piping can be "boxed in".

Heat output might be increased from this piping an additional 10 to 15 per cent if metal fins are attached to the piping. The fins should be installed by a heating contractor. The fins will increase the heating surface of the piping, and thus boost the heat output.

In newer homes which have modern forced circulation hot water heating systems, the temperature in an unfinished basement ordinarily is about 60 degrees, sufficient to keep the basement dry but not comfortable enough for a playroom.

The answer to heating the playroom with a forced circulation hot water system is simple: Have a contractor install a baseboard panel convector or radiator in the new room. Any of these heating units can be connected to existing piping in the basement.

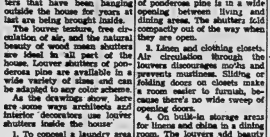
Louvers Are In, Not Out in Today's Homes

Those faithful louver shutters that have been hanging outside the house for years at last are being brought inside.

The louver texture, free circulation of air, and the natural beauty of wood mean shutters are ideal be all part of the house. Louver shutters or pondcrose pine are available in a wide variety of sizes and can be adapted to any color scheme.

As the drawings show, here are some ways architects and interior decorators use louver shutters inside the house:



1. To conceal a laundry area in the kitchen. Air circulates through the louvers, preventing dampness, and the shutters add textural beauty to the entire kitchen.

2. Attractive room dividers. A unique use of louver shutters of ponderosa pine is in a wide opening between living and dining areas. The shutters fold compactly out of the way when they are open.

3. Linen and clothing closets. Air circulation through the louvers discourages mo'ds and prevents mustiness. Sliding or folding doors on closets make a room easier to furnish, because there's no wide sweep of opening doors.

4. On built-in storage areas for linens and china in a dining room. The louvers add beauty to the room and require a minimum of operating space.

In air conditioned homes, louver doors permit the free flow of air between rooms to maintain even temperatures.

Substantial Savings on Fuel Cited

Installed in recommended amounts, insulation keeps heating fuel bills down, lessens the cost of air conditioning and makes a house more comfortable throughout the year.

What's more, good insulation never wears out and adds to the resale value of any home throughout its lifetime.

When enough mineral wool is installed in walls, ceilings and other areas where needed it reduces heat loss sharply. This enables the home owner to save as much as 40 per cent on heating fuel.

In summer, the proper amount of mineral wool insulation helps to keep heat outside the house which results in greater comfort inside.

A significant saving is realized by using sufficient insulation when a house is to be air conditioned. Tests prove that adequately thick mineral wool insulation installed where needed cuts down the size of cooling equipment required and its operating costs.

New Insulations

Practically all mineral wool manufacturers have switched from the old method of classifying their products by inches of thickness to a system of "R" designations. "R" means "resistance to heat flow out of a house in winter or into it in summer." Instead of describing what the insulating material is the "R" factor tells what its effect will be after it is installed. The greater the "R" number, the more effective the insulation.

For a comfortable, well insulated house, batts or blankets of mineral wool marked R-13 should be put in ceilings, R-11 in walls, and R-13 in floors.

Other insulation materials are made of rock wool, glass, slag, paper pulp, gypsum, asbestos, cork, aluminum foils, vermiculite, cotton and other vegetable and mineral matter.

Insulating a house also can be a do-it-yourself project. During remodelling or before a new home is completed, it's a comparatively easy matter for the home handyman to place batts or blankets of mineral wool between studs in walls or between ceiling joists.

How To Proceed

Here are some basic rules to observe for a good insulating job:

1. Use insulation of proper "R" factor in all exposed walls, ceilings, and floors over unheated areas.

2. Trim the insulation a bit larger than the space it is to cover, leaving a flange of vapor barrier at each end. With a very sharp knife or blade, cut along a piece of board or straight edge.

3. Fit the insulation tightly between joists, studs or rafters with vapor barrier overlapping the wood framing members at the end of the space. The barrier should be toward the side of the house that is heated in winter.

4. Nail or staple the flange to the wood at the end of the space, and along the facing side of the joist, rafter or stud.

5. Wedge the batt or blanket against the end of the first one.

6. Do not ignore small spaces, as they greatly reduce the insulation's efficiency if left uncovered.

7. If in doubt about the proper "R" number, get the higher one, for the slight extra cost will pay for itself in comfort and savings.

An existing home can be fully insulated with mineral wool without damage to walls or ceilings by having the insulation blown into inaccessible areas.

This job is done by an insulation contractor who has the necessary equipment. Loose mineral wool is blown through a flexible hose into all cracks and corners and around all pipes and wires. The siding removed to insert the hose nozzle is replaced carefully after the walls are tightly filled. Ceilings are done by bringing the hose through an attic window.

BORING HOLES

Today's Vogue Is Friendly Outdoor Living!

The chief reason for the current vogue for outdoor living is the "making of friends" amidst the relaxed atmosphere of beautiful gardens, terraces or patios, surveys by the Canadian Association of Nurserymen show. Outdoor living is conducive to neighborhood friendliness. The housewife can relax while entertaining and yet express her individuality in her choice of lovely shrubs, trees and other plants with which she "furnishes" the outdoor living area.

In this era of streamline living, more than ever before, the house and the garden are dependent upon each other — they are becoming one unit. The indoor-outdoor relationship is now a reality. Comfortable, wholesome outdoor living increases family affection and spurs the full approval of neighbors. Outdoor living, because of its accepted informality, largely removes the more arduous work and the irritations and the feeling of confinement indoors. "Furnishing" the outdoor living room with lovely plants is still a bargain for the home owner who carefully selects and plans what he or she wishes to achieve. The Association states. Once the living area is planted it will be beautiful for many years if properly cared for. One may plant for permanence; or plant for semi-permanence by changing the smaller shrubs after three to five years in order to achieve new effects of color or shrub form. The cost of completing an outdoor living room may not be more than the cost of a good living room rug.

The home owner planning an outdoor living area is strongly urged to plan it thoroughly, or have it professionally planned, if possible. Thorough planning will save time and money. Here are some things to think about:

1. Locate the outdoor living area properly. Notice the position of the sun with respect to the area, as well as the direction of the prevailing winds. Select a comfortable spot.

2. If you plan the picnic type of dining and entertaining, the area may be at some distance from the house, the back of the lot, for example. If there is considerable entertaining of neighbors and friends, it should be located near the house, preferably near the kitchen or off the dining room.

3. Professional planning of the outdoor living area is desirable in many cases, just as one usually can create a better effect indoors by hiring an interior decorator, excepting of course in this case, your advisor is the trained landscape nurseryman. You can buy the plan and then do the planting yourself, or let your nurseryman do it.

How to Reduce Operating Costs of Cooling Systems

Want to cut down electric bills that rise every summer because your air conditioning units are continuously operating?

Here are several ways you can get the best performance out of your cooling system at the lowest possible operating cost:

1. Keep shades or venetian blinds pulled to prevent sun's rays from coming into the house.

2. Keep windows and outside doors closed to curb cool air from escaping from the house.

3. Keep storm windows in to prevent warm outside air from coming into the house.

4. On cool nights turn off air conditioning units and open windows.

5. When landscaping, arrange tree plantings to keep house cool by shading it from sun's rays.

6. When re-roofing, choose a light colored roofing material. This will retard heat from penetrating the house.

7. Weather-strip around outside doors and windows to prevent cool air from "leaking" from the house.

8. Have automatic clothes dryer vented to the outdoors; the discharge of moisture into the indoor air makes the air conditioner work overtime.

9. When cooking on a hot day use the kitchen ventilating fan. A range with all burners going releases much heat into the house.

10. Have filters in air conditioning units cleaned periodically. Dirty ones reduce amount of air that can move through the unit.

11. Do your ironing on a cool day or late in the evening when the cooling system has the reserve capacity to remove this extra heat without difficulty.

12. Pick the coolest part of the day to mop floors, wash furniture or perform other chores that require water. As wet surfaces dry, moisture is released into the air to cause unnecessary discomfort.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Objects to Wife's Activities

DEAR DORIS:—We have three girls and a boy, all going to school. I am active in our Home and School Association, a leader in our Boy Scout troop where my boy goes, and I'm in the church choir.

My husband objects to me doing so much and won't even go with me to Home and School meetings. We quarrel about everything to please him? I think it is important to at least take an interest in Home and School when you have school age children.—BUSY MOTHER.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR BUSY MOTHER:—You can make all the difference to your boy and girls by taking an interest in their school association and their studies. When you find youngsters who don't care a bit whether they scrape through or not, you usually find parents who leave them to it.

But if you are out night after night, leaving a note for friend husband that his dinner is in the refrigerator, he has a point in objecting. Better be glad he prizes your company.

Perhaps your husband has never learned to use leisure time well. See if you can intrigue him by seeking his advice in matters relating to the training of his children's minds. Then be willing to settle for his company on Parents' Night or scientific studies. Give him time to finding some relaxing activities which you can share.

You and your mate will be sharing leisure hours long after the children have grown up and are raising families of their own.

DEAR DORIS:—At 46 my world has crumbled around me. My husband has just told me of his love for his secretary and his desire to divorce me. This has apparently been going on for a long time, but what brought it to a head is her having a baby boy which she says is his. This is the first child she has had, although she has been married a long time. Her husband would be willing to accept the baby as he would his own.

In my husband's mind the big thing is that this child is a boy, and we only have girls—three of them—nearly grown up and incidentally fond of their father and hurt by his attitude. He has always been a good father and he wants this son to raise, badly enough to marry the mother, instead of just having her for an amour. So it seems there are two divorcees coming up and two households to be broken.

Is there any point in my rebuild this divorce, in the hope that he will come to his senses?—JENNY.

DEAR JENNY—I doubt it. The pull of the male baby is pretty powerful, when added to his love for the woman. Your husband sounds like an immature person who is unable to do without the things he wants for any noble reason like standing by his obligations.

Ask him for time to think. Remind him of the years you have shared and the love of his girls—but don't be too long-suffering. Your daughters will be looking to you to know how to take this, which means you must work to keep your self-respect and poise. If you find yourself faced with divorce and the necessity to go it alone, do it with your chin up. And make sure he provides for you financially.

TORONTO (CP)—African nationalist leader Tom Mboya of Kenya will visit Canada next week to speak at an inaugural dinner for a fund-raising campaign for African students.

He also will have talks in Ottawa with external affairs department officials.

Dr. Mboya, the first president of the Pan African Congress, led the Kenya African National Union to the biggest single-party victory in elections during February for the British colony's legislative council.

The dinner, to be held next Thursday, will be followed by a luncheon address to the Canadian club of Ottawa on Friday and a reception that evening given by British high commissioner Sir Saville Garner.

At the end of the four-day visit he will fly to New York city.

UNEMPLOYMENT LOWER

At the end of February, Norway had 22,000 unemployed, the lowest figure for that month since 1955, out of more than 1,000,000 workers.

"Just a Second!"

"Believe me, dear, no one regrets the loss of your first husband more than I do."

DIVIDING LINE

The Mason-Dixon line, generally accepted as the division between North and South in the U.S., was defined 100 years before the Civil War.

French-Speaking Trustees Want More Tax Money From Industry for R.C. Schools

WINDSOR (CP) — French-speaking school trustees from across Ontario Thursday urged ways to get more tax money from industry for the separate school system.

Raymond Cote of North Bay, president of the Bilingual School Trustees Association of Ontario, said millions of dollars are lost to the separate schools each year because they have no way to make it difficult for industry to support separate schools.

"Industry must show what percentage of a firm's capital is invested in Catholic areas," he said. 300 delegates to the association's annual meeting.

"This can be difficult. Perhaps we should move to have the law changed so that a specific capital investment need not be shown."

He said school taxes against other separate school supporters are unfair because industry is not generally paying its share.

"In Ottawa public school supporters pay $54.70 per $1,000 of assessment, while separate school supporters pay $25.80 per $1,000."

Mr. Cote said the association lost a court case last year when it tried to have a law forced to support separate schools. He said a carefully planned test will go to appeal in the courts in the near future to attempt to have another law to support separate schools. The association would not give details.

Trustees from throughout the province should be getting cheques assessment roles this week to see if the Roman Catholics are supporting the parochial school system.

A spokesman said support is not demanded by law but added that Roman Catholics are the highest members to support the system.

The trustees are one of eight French-speaking education and church associations meeting in conjunction with the annual meeting of the French - Canadian Education Association of Ontario, representing 300,000 students.

Gerard Filion, managing editor of Montreal's French - language newspaper, told the trustees to copy the province of Quebec in order to satisfy their demands.

"The English-speaking groups in Quebec should be made to speak out for school grants on the basis of the French - Canadian population," he said.

"In French Quebec they are not afraid to work hard and press demands to keep the English language is taught."

Mr. Filion said Ontario must act with enthusiasm to preserve their culture.

"We must band in the thread that holds us together," he said. "If we've got to fight we have French instruction from kindergarten through to university."

Board Upheld In Dispute By Appeal Court

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal Thursday upheld a ruling of an arbitration board to award damages in an illegal strike.

The court was considering an appeal by Local 1624, Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers International Union (CLC) against a court order by Chief Justice J. C. Meitzer upholding the award by the arbitration board in what it defined as an illegal strike at the Polymer Corporation Limited Sarnia plant in February, 1958.

The arbitration board chairman Prof. Bora Laskin, University of Toronto labor law specialist, made the award but delivered a hearing to assess damages against outcomes of the union appeal.

In the Appeal Court judgment Mr. Justice J. A. Aylesworth said the Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act requires parties to bargain collectively in good faith and to make every reasonable effort to violation for settlement of differences arising out of existing or violation of the agreement.

He said the arbitrators would have erred if they did not assess said award compensation for the violation of collective agreement.

GIVES COMPANY VIEW

David Lewis, representing the union, said the case involves the company and the union might give the impression that it was whether there had been a misinterpretation or violation of collective agreement.

Neither party had agreed to refer the matter back to the board, he said, and if the company's claim were upheld the right of the board to award damages or to make any disposition of the case by the board would have to be set out in the collective agreement.

He said there was nothing in the agreement to give a board power to deal with the consequences of a violation or misinterpretation of the agreement.

J. J. Robinette, representing Polymer, said the agreement contemplated that all disputes by arbitration of any dispute regarding violation of the agreement. He said that the Appeal Court had found a month-long lear of the agreement.

Lower Personal, Corporation Income Taxes Requested By Canadian Chamber Brief

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Chamber of Commerce today urged lower personal and corporation income taxes.

The chamber said in a brief to Finance Minister Fleming and Revenue Minister Howden that it opposes deficit financing "in normal circumstances," but that such a policy now would be appropriate.

The suggestions were part of a recommendation for co-ordination of economic policy to achieve higher economic growth which, it said, must be designed to stimulate employment.

Nautical Rules for Boaters

Travel on waterways, just like highway traffic, has a set of rules to follow. These right-hand rules should also be adhered to, to make every boatman a good boatman.

1. Meeting. When two boats approach each other head on, each steers to starboard (bears right, real left) or "port to port side (left) to port side. In the Great Lakes and certain rivers where there are channels with strong currents, the vessel with only downstream, or down-current, has the right of way over the one which has the current against it. This is because it is easier to control a vessel going against the current than it is steering one being carried along the current.

2. Overtaking. When one boat is overtaking another, the one doing the overtaking must keep clear of the one being overtaken. However, if you are in a narrow channel and are being overtaken by a larger, deeper draft vessel, it will be easier for you in the small boat to keep to the side of the channel and let the big fellow have the deep water. This is one of the few occasions in which you do not always insist on your right of way.

3. Crossing. A motorboat which has another in its so-called "danger zone" on the starboard bow — roughly translated that means coming from your right) must give way to it by altering course to go under its stern, by slowing, or if necessary, stopping or reversing. By the same token, it is very much appreciated if your port side (coming from your left) you have the right of way.

4. Leaving slips, wharves and piers. Boats coming out of slips, side, upon water, or leaving berths, docks and wharves, have no rights until they actually clear. Therefore, they proceed with caution and at low speed.

5. Sailboats always have the right of way over power boats, except in the not very likely possibility of a boat under sail overtaking one under power. Courtesy also requires that sailboats while racing be given a wide berth as they have to pass close to a sailboat, do so slowly and on the leeward side (the side on which it is carrying its main boom) in order to avoid any unnecessary disturbance from your wake.

6. Fishing boats, whether anchored or under way with nets, lines or trawls have also the right of way. Take it easy when you are passing a fishing boat.

7. Tows. Although under certain circumstances power boats have the right of way over tugs with barges in tow, it is not only good manners, but sound seamanship, to yield the right of way, because a small motorboat is a good deal more manoeuvrable than a string of barges.

8. Accidents. In cases of collision, capsize, fire or other serious accidents, it is the duty of boatmen to stand by and render all possible assistance. It is also a tradition as old as the sea itself that mariners always go to the aid of those in distress. The good boatman is always ready and willing to offer a tow, or lend gasoline to a fellow water sportsman who has suffered an engine breakdown or run out of fuel.

Law-Abiding Boaters Use Common Sense

Safety is basically common sense!

To refresh the mind of the average inexperienced boatman and to help teach the novice some of the common sense safe boating principles, the Johnson Boating Clinic offers these suggestions:

When boarding your craft from a pier step as close amidships (center) as possible and keep your body low. Tighten the lines on the boat before getting aboard so that no one-man one hold the boat for you so it doesn't "slip away". Keep your arms and hands free. Don't board-loaded down with gear.

Before leaving the pier check to see that there is a life preserver - either jacket or cushion - for every boating member. Also make a complete check of the other safety devices - fire extinguishers, lights, emergency paddles and other gear necessary to make your boat a safe one. Make extra sure that your equipment is in operable condition.

If your craft is equipped with a conventional-type gas tank, always remove the tank from the boat before filling, and wipe it clean before putting it back. If you have a permanent-type tank make sure not to splash any gas over the sides of the container. Under no circumstances fill your tank near fire or a cigaret.

Don't Overload

When taking your passengers aboard don't overload. An overloaded boat is easily swamped. Follow the load capacity limits that the boat builder has established. Also, power your boat according to the manufacturer's maximum horsepower specification. An overpowered boat is hard to control and could be dangerous.

If you must stand in a small boat, either put the motor in neutral or stop it altogether. Never change seats while the craft is moving.

Never launch your boat in swift waters or near a dam or falls, and always start your outboard before leaving the pier. If a trailer is used in launching your boat, block the wheels of both car and trailer, especially when launching on a slope.

All skippers should learn to be considerate enough in their keep tabs on cloud formations for signs of approaching storms or squalls. If a rain or hail storm should hit while you're under way head for shore. If the waves are large, head into them; if they are small, "ride them in".

"Don't be a boating cowboy" Rodeo contests are held on land, not on the water. Boating cowboys are hazard to everyone on or in the water. Remember, your boat doesn't have brakes - use common sense.

Proper Gear Is Necessary For Small Boat

When you consider the problem of equipment needed to properly outfit your boat, you must consider its size, the use to be made of it and the locality in which it is to be used.

Sure, for the sake of example, let's take a 14- to 16-foot runabout and suggest what is necessary to outfit it properly for ordinary day cruising around a normal body of water.

First you need a government-approved life preserver for every person aboard. This requirement can be met, at least in part, by using approved all life-preserver seat cushions, but for the kids it's a good idea to keep them dressed in life jackets or vests at all times when on the water.

An anchor is essential, and it should have either ¾-inch nylon or ½-inch manila rope. The recommended length is 100 feet, which should be enough to handle a small boat in most circumstances.

A flashlight is a handy thing to have aboard at all times. You should have flares or smoke signals in case you get into trouble; a horn or whistle or a box of food if you plan on taking cruises of any length, and an approved fire extinguisher is a solid safety addition, and should be attached to a frame or bulkhead where it is easily reached.

You will n two or three boat fenders to protect rail and topsides when alongside a pier, boat or another boat. A pair of oars or a paddle should always be aboard.

It is always wise to keep aboard a tool sack in which you can keep pliers, screwdriver, patented wrench, extra spark plugs, cotter pins, spare propeller and nut, and it is also wise to include the owner's manual for your make of motor.

To make your equipment complete, carry a canvas or plastic bucket, a container of fresh water, a cleaning cloth or chamois and a reserve supply of fuel.

Shows Indicate Interest Remains Good in Aluminum Boats Again This Year

Although most Canadian lakes are still coated with ice, to the ardent boater — and would-be boater — this is the time of the year when next summer's plans are made; new boats are purchased, and manufacturers of boats, motors and trailers vie with each other for the boating dollar at the various boat shows across the country.

A barometer of the trends in boating each spring is the New York Boat Show, held early in January, and the Toronto and Vancouver shows in February. The year's shows were the largest ever from the standpoint of manufacturer and public participation. Once again, trends in boating were clearly apparent, and so observer would most likely come up with the following conclusions:

Most interest was shown in aluminum boats this year since manufacturers have made them more appealing in design and color.

Boats with high tail fins and "ride-ability" decks did not impress the boating public as much as previously. A keen awareness of the functional and safety features was prominent.

Because more people know more about boats now than they have in previous years, they are more conscious of the "ride-ability" of boats. There was more "hull thumping" indicating that riding qualities are more important, and due to this season's boat buyer, who wants a boat that will ride comfortably and safely, a family type boat, showed a noticeable rise in interest. Household conveniences were designed with interiors, and spectators, most of whom were looking for "do-it-yourself" ideas.

An tremendous number of pontoon motors will be traded in this season and this is true for the first time there will be sufficient trade-in value to family which wants to get into

With the high mortality rate of boat manufacturers and dealers last year, boating customers are returning to long-established firms on which they can rely. It would appear that the boat buyer is looking for price first, then for quality and simplicity.

To sum up, it looks like a good year for boat and motor manufacturers. Sales on complete units should go up over last year, with greater interest shown in the complete rig of boat, motor and trailer, so that people can avoid the high cost of summer mooring and explore and fish various lakes instead of being confined to one body of water.

To stimulate an interest in safety afloat, the All-Family Boat Shows, being held by Outboard Marine dealers across the country at this time, are offering special prizes to those who answer a specially prepared boating safety quiz. Children attending a show will receive free booklets designed to teach them the "rules of the road" in boating.

Stand in Respect for God

By ROY L. SMITH

A clever writer of a generation ago made popular the phrase, "Life begins at forty," but we are beginning to doubt the timetable. With prophylactic medicine and public health measures adding as much to the span of life, one cannot be sure of the exact time when he will reach maturity.

Actually, life is not a matter of the calendar, but of the character. Many a man—reverent, imaginative, and in love with facts—has lived longer by the time he is 30 than another man may have lived at the age of 80. Life does not consist of the number of years we have lived, but of the kind of years they have been.

ANCIENT WISE MEN

Among the ancient Hebrews there were three "learned professions"—the priests, the prophets, and "the wise men." The first two classes were what one might call the professionals, but the latter was usually a layman. Oddly enough, we know the names of no more than a very few, for they seldom attached their names to their wisdom. Instead, they were content to spend their time teaching little groups—sometimes individuals—who were interested in learning.

The Uniform Sunday School Lesson for April 9: "The Source of True Wisdom," Job 28:12-28; Proverbs 1:1-7; Ecclesiastes 12:13-14; James 1:1-8.

An interesting fact concerning them consisted of their interdependence upon one another. There was something about their wisdom that enabled them to cut across racial and national boundary lines and appropriate the true and the good wherever they might find it. For this reason the minds of the wise men among all peoples pollinized the minds of all other wise men everywhere. That explains why we find wise men among all nations of antiquity expressing many of the same ideas. The Ten Commandments, for example, are to be found in varying forms in the literature of numerous countries of the ancient East.

BEGINNING OF WISDOM

One of the ancient sages of the Hebrews asked the question very bluntly. "The fear of the Lord," he said, "is the beginning of knowledge." When translated into the vernacular of this generation his words mean, "The first steps toward wisdom are taken by the man who is capable of reverence."

And reverence is the opposite of sophistication which is the distinguishing characteristic of this generation. We are missing much because we are reveling so many great ideas, concepts, ideals, and hopes with contempt.

The cynic may be clever but he is heedless, too.

SCIENCE AND REVERENCE

There was a time not so long ago, when the scientists were generally speaking, a cocky lot. Had they not made great discoveries, opened the way for great advances, disproved many of the conceits of the fathers, and discovered a whole series of laws by which the "brave new world" was to be made to run?

But that time is past. There is no more humble company in all the land than those who are probing the mysteries of the atoms or the infinities. The sociologist or the psychologist, probing the mysteries of human behavior, can be excused for his pessimism, but the astronomers and the physical scientists are moved to reverence by their discoveries concerning the world of creation.

"Look at that engineering," the bone surgeon said to a preacher, as he held up a piece of broken femur bone. "You never saw a bridge or a skyscraper designed half so well as that. Only a God could have done it so beautifully. And He did it without ever getting His name on the front pages of the papers!"

The beginning of wisdom is the cultivation of the spirit of reverence. It is unfortunate that the word "fear" has been used so many times in our Old Testament, as though men should live in terror of God, when all man is expected to do is to stand in respect for God.

Science at Work

Yankee tide weak: Slow growing grass is called the clock, and submarine fishing boats.

LIFESPAN

From new measurements, scientists of the U.S. Bureau of Standards conclude that radioactive carbon-14 has a half-life of 5,760 years—not 5,568.

This is important because carbon-14 is one of the most valuable tracer atoms and time clocks on earth for estimating the age of archaeological specimens.

The radioactive carbon; created in the air by cosmic rays, gets into every living thing, plants, animals, and man. After death, no more is added through intake of food or air. So a measure of how much radioactive carbon a mummy or a pile of wood ashes contains can tell how old it is. The half-life is the time it takes for half of any given starting amount of the radioactive atoms to break down. With carbon-14, half of all the atoms in a specimen would decay or disappear in 5,760 years, so that half of the remainder in the next 5,760 years, and so on.

PEST STORY

Someday, the fishing trawler will be a submarine, spotting fish from storms, and using electricity to herd and guide fish into a collecting "pot" or open mouth on the sub. The prediction comes from Dr. R. L. McCally, U.S. Bureau of Commercial Fisheries.

The underwater trawler could fish continuously, with no fleet from storms, he told the American Chemical Society.

LAZY MOWERS

A special compound of hydrazine, a hot-shot rocket fuel, may soon be available in spray - sized packages to help slow the growth of grass for home seeding to put in more hammock time on weekends.

Chemical industry sources say the material already has been used successfully on golf courses and steep parkways, reducing the need to cut grass from once or twice a week to two or three times a season.

TREE EPIDEMIC

Dutch elm disease will continue to be a minor nuisance, but the tree disease has long been on the decline, at least in Britain, says a British expert. In Britain, the disease was allowed to run its course; while in Holland and the United States, diseased trees were cut down. The forestry expert thinks the let-them-be policy got fewer trees. Strains of elms resistant to the fungus disease now are being studied.

Wings Hand Hawks Scare In Third

Ontario Intelligencer SPORTS

Sport Slices...

RARE, MEDIUM, WELL-DONE

By Geo. H. Carver, Sports Editor

A tip to those Chicago Black Hawk fans, if any, who have bet the sugar-bowl money that Plious and Pals will sweep the cup series in four straight tilts.

Don't hold your breath until it happens!

The Detroit Red Wings proved beyond a shadow of doubt last night that a hockey game is not won in the first period and anything can happen until the pleasant shrills the cease-fire in the third heat.

According to Old Square-Face, our living room private eye, the Black Hawks picked up where they left off demolishing the Montreal Canadiens, and led by the brilliant play of Bobby Hull, Hay, Hall and company seemed headed for what had the earmarks of a first-game rout.

They were hitting, humping, shooting and scoring. They were flashing all over the ice while the desperate Wings struggled as a football in an effort to apply the brakes to the winged heels of the Windy City crew.

Three goals in less than four minutes with the Hawks in on Sawchuk so often and so close he thought they had adopted him, and to all intents and purposes the game appeared to be in the bag. Someone had the audacity to suggest that it was a matter of "how many!"

Bobby Hull, a star in the ascendant in the playoff series, picked up his brilliant trail where he left it against the Habs. Two goals flashed the light from his magic wand. Kenny Wharram got the other and and the Hawks appeared to be away and running.

It may have been according to the Plious plan but the very savageness of the Hawk attack, their relentless checking and hard-hitting bodychecks almost swept the Wings off their feet in a scintillating first period.

A three-goal lead in any hockey game seems to be well out and far away, but the second and third period resurgence of the Wings proved that in Stanley Cup games it is not beyond the reach of elimination.

Across the ice you could see Sid Abel exhorting his Wings. Apparently it paid off. The Detroiters met the challenge of the flaming Hawks in the second period, handed them shock for shock and with relief to Hank Ilesmen playing championship hockey in the nets roadblocked the Hawks while an octopus wiggled its tentacles in the third tier and some dozens of eyes readied themselves for orbit.

Then late in the second period Lunde triggered the goal that fired the fuse of the Wings. The Hawks appeared to be playing it cosy, content with checking the Wings while actually Howe and company had started to reverse proceedings. Their defence lightened. They had to play it open but they played it well.

And big Gordie Howe again demonstrated why he is rated the best National Hockey League player of all time. The big guy never quit. He rubbed his Wings and by his fine personality passed them to a third period effort that almost pulled a seemingly lost cause out of the fire.

The driving Wings were in for the kill as the clock ticked the seconds away than Father Time intervened and the troops called it a night.

The Red Wings had ripped back from what appeared certain defeat early in the game, to a dangerous threat to the Hawks' first victory.

The Red Wings are far from the week. And none know it better than the Hawks. They reached the heights when they ousted the mighty Canadiens in the semi-finals and they know now that nothing but a maintenance of the flaming pace and scoring ability that carried them to the finals will bring the nag to Chicago.

Hull Sparks 3-2 Victory

CHICAGO (CP) — From the way the players behaved afterwards it was hard to reconcile passersby to discern who won the opener of the Stanley Cup final Thursday night.

For the record, Chicago Black Hawks shaded Detroit Red Wings 3-2 before a crowd of 15,464.

But the atmosphere in the Detroit dressing room was cheerfully optimistic, almost jubilant, while the normally spunky Black Hawks were plunged in gloom.

The reason: The Hawks spurted for a three - goal onslaught in less than four minutes of the first period. The Wings grew progressively stronger after that and had Chicago hanging on the ropes at the end.

"We tried to play too carefully at times and they took the play away from us," declared coach Rudy Pilous of the Hawks. "This careful stuff makes us too defensive-minded and maybe that 3-0 lead lulled us into it. I hope the flesh we always counted on holds up."

WINGS CHEERFUL

In the other dressing room, general manager Jack Adams and coach Sid Abel of the Wings appeared to be in a more cheerful mood.

"This is a game hockey club" said Adams. "We had a chance to quit tonight, but we didn't. I'm well pleased, everything considered."

The Hawks were the alert opportunists in the first period, getting two goals from Bobby Hull and one from Ken Wharram. For a while it looked as if they might turn the game into a rout.

But the Red Wings fought back savagely the rest of the way. Len Lunde scoring in the second period and Al Johnson in the last minute of the third.

The teams meet again in the second game of a best-of-seven series at Detroit Saturday night. The third game is to be played at Chicago Monday.

SAWCHUK HURT

Goalie Terry Sawchuk of the Wings aggravated a damaged shoulder and a bruised hip suffered in the last game of the series against Montreal and retired at the end of the first period.

Sawchuk was injured when Chicago's Murray Balfour crashed into him prior to the Wings' third goal blitz.

Late in the period he was pulled again when Hull jammed into him during a scramble but continued to play without any rest.

Between periods it was decided that Hank Bassen would take over, and Bassen held the Hawks off the rest of the way.

Dr. Milton Kosely, Detroit team physician, said it is doubtful if Sawchuk and defencemen Marcel Pronovost will play when the series resumes Saturday.

HURT ANKLE

Pronovost suffered a bruised right ankle when he was hit by a shot in practice Monday. He played part time in the opener, but obviously was far from his best form.

Chicago's Ab McDonald suffered a 12-stitch cut over his right eyelid early in the second period when charged into the boards by Detroit defenceman Howie Young. He came back after the stitching and took his regular turn on the ice.

Both coaches agreed this is going to be a tough series after pondering over the outcome of the first game.

"This is a hungry series and the hungriest club is going to win," Pilous said.

"We made mistakes in the first period and that's how they got the jump on us," said Abel. "But we're a club that can come back."

HELD THEM OFF

Just as they did on two occasions against Montreal in the semi-finals, The Hawks came up with another sensational defensive stand when shorthanded two men.

For one minute and 32 seconds, while Chicago defencemen Jack Evans and Reg Fleming sat in the penalty box, defencemen Elmer (Moose) Vasko and Harry Pidhirny and forward Eric Nesterenko fought off the Red Wings, with superb backing by goalie Glenn Hall.

Hall went into the game, fresh from two successive 3-0 shutouts against Montreal. For a while it looked as if he might make it three in a row.

But Lunde broke the spell at 16:16 of the second period, ending Hall's flawless work that lasted 171 minutes and 49 seconds counting Stanley Cup hockey. It began after Montreal had scored with 1:11 left in the third period in the fourth game of the semi-final.

Gordie Howe a tireless worker as ever for the Wings, set up both Detroit goals.

The Hawks-Wings final is the first one in history between third and fourth place clubs in the final NHL standings since the NHL became six clubs in league in 1942. It is also the first all-United States final in 11 years.

Royals Will Be Dropped

Selke Offers Three-Point Plan

Pair Tied For M.V.P.

OTTAWA (CP) — Cliff Pennington, a 31-year-old rookie, and Skippy Burchell, a 35-year-old veteran, have tied for the Eastern Pro Amateur Hockey League's most-valuable - player award, it was announced Thursday.

The pair, chosen by sports-writers and sportscasters in the six EPHL cities, represent the league's top and last place clubs.

Pennington was a driving force in bringing the league title to Hull - Ottawa Canadiens. He also took the scoring title with 102 points on 33 goals and 69 assists.

Burchell has been with Montreal Royals since the 1952-53 season except for two seasons with the Western Hockey League and another in the American League.

The Montreal-born centre established the regular schedule in 61 games total on one first-place vote. He had 74 points on 13 goals and 61 assists.

The votes were on the basis of five points for a first choice, three for a second and one for a third.

Pennington received 18 points on three first-place and two second-place vote. Burchell got the same total on one first-place vote four second and one third.

Sam Bettio of Sudbury Wolves placed third with six points.

MEMORABLE DATE

The Royal North West Mounted Police merged with the Dominion Police in 1920 to become the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

KINGSTON (CP) — If Frank Selke Sr. has his way three major developments are in store for Montreal Canadiens next season:

1. Montreal Royals will be dropped from the Eastern Professional Hockey League and perhaps be replaced by a Montreal-sponsored EPHL team at North Bay;

2. The Canadiens will sponsor a team in the American League at Pittsburgh;

3. Hull - Ottawa Canadiens, EPHL champions, will lose some of their top players to the Pittsburgh club.

Selke, managing director of the National Hockey League Canadiens, told of the possible moves in an interview from his home in Montreal.

"It's a bit of conjecture," he said "because our company hasn't met to discuss it yet. But they usually take my recommendations."

CAN'T BE FILLED

Selke said the Pittsburg AHL franchise, which Montreal has been invited to sponsor, can't be filled by the weak Royals, who finished last in the EPHL.

As for Hull - Ottawa, which went away with the title, "I don't think they should be as strong as they are."

So it appeared obvious some of the Hull - Ottawa stalwarts will be heading south.

Selke had this comment on the Royals:

"If a local French - Canadian group wanted to take over the management of the team we might consider it, because most things which are not French do not succeed in Montreal. An example is the baseball Royals (which dropped out of the International League this year).

"We've lost $65,000 to $100,000 on Royals in the EPHL. We may have money in the organization but I can't see sending it down the drain. We had very poor week - day attendance at Royals' games. Maybe a French - Canadian group could make it work."

Selke said he understands the Royals would like to go to North Bay.

"I'd rather see us with only one team in the league, but if a sponsor can't be found and they want help from us, we'll give it to them."

Selke expressed high regard for the EPHL as a proving ground for young players and young hockey executives:

"I've stayed out of the picture except for supplying financial help. I feel the younger men should learn to operate a league like a business. Someone has to be ready to take over when we older bucks retire."

Picton Nips Warsaw 7-3 In Overtime

Picton Merchants scored three overtime goals on their home ice last night to down Warsaw 6-3 and even their OHA Junior "C" playdown series at one game apiece.

Warsaw won the first game of this two-of-three set Wednesday night by a 6-2 score in Peterborough. The third and deciding game will be played to a finish in Picton tonight at nine o'clock.

This is the second series between the two clubs, the first one ending with three wins and a tie for each team.

Winners of this series will meet Cobourg in the Ontario semi-finals.

New York Selections

'Bums', Orioles For World Series?

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP) — Los Angeles Dodgers and Baltimore Orioles, baseball clubs loaded with young talent, are the choices today to meet in the 1961 world series next October.

Walter Alston's Dodgers, who finished fourth last year, should repeat their 1959 National League triumph because they possess the prime pennant ingredients — strong pitching, stout defence and superb speed. They look power but they are blessed with sufficient strength to two-platoon without suffering any noticeable dip in quality.

Paul Richards' Orioles also have the speed, defence and pitching — especially pitching. Always a prime factor, pitching takes on added importance in the American League this season because of the additional two games which have caused an expansion of the schedule to 162 from 154 games.

Baltimore's first team, aside from pitching, doesn't stack up with New York's starting array but the Orioles have, for the first time, a strong bench and vastly superior second - line pitching than the Yankees.

REPLACEMENTS READY

While other contenders don't have a suitable replacement should one of their big guns falter or be sidelined by an injury, the Dodgers can replace a Gil Hodges with a Frank Howard, a Duke Snider with a Norm Larker, a Willie Davis with a Don Demeter, a Tommy Davis with a Gilbey Wilson or Maury Wills with a Charley Smith, without noticeably affecting their strength.

This appears to be the shape of things to come in each league:

National	American
1. Los Angeles	1. Baltimore
2. Pittsburgh	2. New York
3. Cincinnati	3. Chicago
4. Milwaukee	4. Cleveland
5. Frisco	5. Minnesota
6. Cincinnati	6. Detroit
7. Philadelphia	7. Boston
8. Chicago	8. Kansas City

Win Ladies Hoop Title

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hamilton Tigerettes defeated Richmond Merchants 82-49 Thursday night to capture the Canadian senior women's basketball championship.

The victory gave the powerful eastern champions the best-of-five, series 3-1, reversing the result of a year ago when Merchants went east and won their 10th title in 11 years by a 3-1 margin in the final series.

The Tigerettes, paced by guard Rose Barr with 18 points, took control of the game late in the second quarter and were never again threatened. They became the first eastern team to win the title since 1948.

Forward Marg Dess scored 11 points for Hamilton and centre Mary MacDonald added eight.

Mrs. Nora McDermott, a veteran of 10 Merchant teams, was tops with 18 points.

TURN ON POWER

Trailing 2-1 after two periods of play, the Terriers turned on the power that made them Ontario Hockey Association senior champions in a four - game romp over Windsor Bulldogs. The third - period goals were fired within a space of four minutes and eight seconds.

After taking a one - goal lead midway through the first period on Mackay's first score, the Terriers had to fight off constant attacks by the Alcosties, who had an edge in play throughout the game but could not break through Bost Hurley's strong goaltending.

Time and again Hurley frustrated the Alcosite - attackers with some spectacular stops on shots that the crowd of 3,200 fet sure were labelled. In the first period he stopped 14 drives including dangerous ones from Connally, Brian Anderson and Gene Labelle.

Connsy put Rouyn - Noranda on the score sheet late in the second period with a flip shot after working his way in from the blueline and Rukavina scored a little more than a minute later.

CALL ONLY SIX

In contrast to the first two boisterous games in Galt, only six penalties were called Thursday night, including majors to Rukavina and Pete Kowalchuk for squaring off early in the first period.

The Terriers now meet Amherst, N.S. Ramblers in the Eastern Canada Allan Cup final.

The Ramblers left by train Thursday for the round against the Ontario winners. The Ramblers, Maritime champions, defeated Granby Victorias in the Eastern Canadian semi - final series.

Master Tournament

Bob Rosburg Ties Palmer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Defending champion Arnold Palmer, who had failings mostly his own way after last year's opening round, today was crowded by two dangerous professionals and a fourth amateur going into the second round of the Masters golf tournament.

Palmer was tied for first at four-under-par 68 with Bob Rosburg, whose record 100-foot putt highlighted a torrid finish over rain - soaked Augusta National Golf Course Thursday.

A stroke behind Palmer and Rosburg, whose rallying round also included a holed 130-foot pitch shot, was the year's top money - winner, South African Gary Player. Two strokes back was amateur Jack Nicklaus. Nicklaus, runnerup to Palmer in the 1960 United States Open, matched Arnold's closing - nine 34, two under par.

Last year, when Palmer led every round to capture his second Masters title, he shot an opening 67, two strokes better than the field.

Four other players broke par for the 18-hole test. Defending champion Byron Nelson, 1957 champion Doug Ford, Paul Harney and Johnny Pott. They had 71s.

LEONARD TIES

Seven men were deadlocked at par-Stan Leonard of Vancouver, Charley Coe, Ken Venturi, Jay Hebert, Gene Littler, Tommy Jacobs and Billy Casper. Leonard had rounds of 37 and 33.

Al Balding of Toronto had 37-37—74 and Bill Kerr of Montreal 36-38—75.

Twenty - three players were tied at 76, including three-time champion Sammy Snead and two-time winner Ben Hogan.

After today's second round—expected to be played in cloudy, cool and possibly rainy weather owned by Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Hutton—the original 86-player starting field will be trimmed to the low 40 scores and ties.

Lethbridge Wins Over Tillsonburg

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Lethbridge Broders' domination of the beckboards proved the margin of victory Thursday night as they defeated Tillsonburg Livingston 96-86 in the opening game of the Canadian senior men's basketball championship.

Second game of the best-of-five series is set for tonight and the third Saturday night.

Lethbridge hauled in 67 rebounds while the defending champion Livingstons could pick up only 43.

A near-capacity crowd of 700 watched brilliant shooting displays by Lloyd Harris of Broders and Alex Farrow and Ted Gardiser of the Ontario team.

Harris scored 26 points, 24 in the first half as Lethbridge took a 53-46 lead.

Farrow was the top shooter for the night with 33 points, while Gardiser had 18. John McKibbon had 20 for the losers but his one-hand push - shots were not nearly as spectacular as the jumping, twisting efforts of Farrow, Gardiser and Harris.

HURTS KNEE

Bob Bradley, suffering a knee injury and seeing only limited action, scored 15 points for Lethbridge, as did Jack Ilja.

Livingston coach Elmer Ripley said the western officiating was strange to his club and could have made a difference to the final outcome.

"It was impartial for both sides," he said, "but you could hardly look at another fella out there without picking up a foul."

George Seibern of Alberni, B.C., and Ira Bourne of Lethbridge called 33 fouls in the game, 27 on Lethbridge.

Nelson Ties Western Cup Series

WINNIPEG (CP) — Flying-coach Mickey Maglio scored early in sudden-death overtime Thursday night to give Nelson Maple Leafs a 3-2 victory over Winnipeg Maroons and deadlock their Western Canada Allan Cup final series at two wins apiece.

Fifth game of the best - of-seven set will be played here Saturday.

Ernie Gare and Ted Lebeda got the other Nelson goals. Lou Joyal and John Rendall scored for Winnipeg.

The series winner goes against either Galt Terriers or Amherst Ramblers for the Allan Cup and Canadian senior crown.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20) — Morning is best time to study contents of that new venture. Later is the best time to start on that little trip and be with persons of a different social sphere to your own. Fall right in with any changes that are to your benefit.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21) — There is every chance this a.m. to pay your obligations and get all property matters, taxes, etc., nicely organized. Be sure you do not neglect all such. P.M., this can be a most memorable evening for you and your loved one. Be kind.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 23rd— Take time to know what your true position is with those individuals you are unable to contact during the work week, but who are important to your affairs and happiness. Get right down to business instead of beating around the bush, as it were.

Leo (July 22 to Aug. 21) — Get an early start on all these duties that are impossible to perform during work week. See that you get a new and more modern hair-do, perk up your wardrobe, etc. Be sure in p.m. that you entertain one who is feeling rosebuddish.

Virgo (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22)— Fine time to perfect those hobbies. Later, get together with congenials who can help you with them or dash out to some sports arena, amusement centre where everyone can be mutually happy and contented. Impress others with your prowess.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23) — Is your abode in just the right order you wish it to be? Now is the time to get busy and make it so. Get repairing, cleaning, adorning done early and then entertain leisurely there.

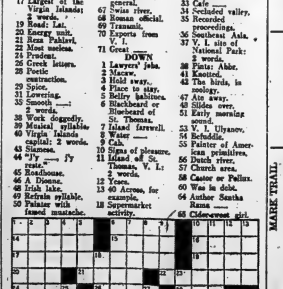
Don't forget the hors d'oeuvres.

Scorpio (Oct. 24 to Nov. 22)— Be sure you plan any trips early so as to get your necessary shopping, buying, selling, etc., so that you have time later to visit with good comrades and have a fine time. Impress them with your fine hidden talents.

Sagittarius (Nov. 23 to Dec. 21) — The ideal day to make necessary repairs to real estate or add new pieces of furniture, works of art, etc. Later, sit down and read your paper and get fine ideas for adding appreciably to your present income.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Now you have the right day to go about doing personal tasks and handling private matters most successfully. Evening is then ideal for joining with good friends socially and making big headway with those who can be helpful.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) — You can indulge in your favorite philanthropies later in the day if you quickly get necessary duties out of he way early. However, assist only those who are truly needy and don't let others impose upon you. P.M. have fun.



Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20) — Impress good friends with your ability to understand their problems and finest intentions, and then be of real assistance to them. You will be shown wonderful gratitude that will please very much. P.M. fine for recreation.

If your child is born today— he, or she, will be one of those individuals who will early want fame and fortune but be somewhat lax in working hard to attain these things, unless you early impress upon your talented youngster that it is imperative to follow the advice of experts and be persevering. Once this habit is formed, no matter what the forte is in this chart, will be developed into a flawless science. Understand and help your progeny.

Crown Attorney Lays Down Law To Council

GRIMSBY (CP) — Lloyd H. Parker, Lincoln County crown attorney, said Wednesday night council has no jurisdictional justice if the town council tried to interfere with the administration of justice.

Mr. Goodwin was speaking to a special meeting of council considering complaints from two residents over the manner in which search warrants were issued and executed.

He said the council was only concerned with internal operations of the police department and if it was not satisfied with the way this municipality is being policed it have full authority to call in the OPP and the municipality will pay."

Mr. Goodwin, a reporter, said he agreed with Mr. Goodwin, but the "fundamental point is that Grimsby has an inefficient police force and the council and citizens of the town have lost faith in them."

The meeting followed a Tuesday night council budget session when insurance agent Malcolm Bell, a former police department member, and Donald Nelson protested the search of their homes by two town constables and two provincial police constables.

Low Fickerel Haul From Winter Fishing

Now that winter fishing for pickerel has drawn to a close a summary can be made of anglers' returns from local district waters.

Lands and Forests conservation officers making periodic checks on anglers throughout the winter have gathered a considerable backlog of data concerning the winter pickerel fishery.

This information shows that pickerel catches were best during late December through January. The general decrease in catches occurs during February and early March.

The ratio between male and female fish caught showed considerable inconsistency with some catches almost consistently males in the early part of the winter. Other catches contained both males and females.

The Tweed Forest District has 142 lakes and rivers that contain pickerel, populations in varying degrees of intensity, depending upon the productivity of the waters concerned.

Because of the large number of lakes containing pickerel it is not possible for conservation officers to secure information on the fish of every lake, creating an all of them.

Creel records on more than 25 of the more productive pickerel fishing waters show that the recovery rate of pickerel by winter anglers was low; even though most lakes could stand a heavier catch in the winter, due to the lack of deep snow, and exceptionally good conditions.

Creel records show 636 anglers contacted during the past winter caught 123 pickerel in 2,344 hours angling.

The above figures are only a representative sample of the total angling hours as fish caught by winter anglers would increase if does indicate the average trend of the rate of recovery.

Perch, pike and ling made up a considerable part of the daily catch by anglers who were actually fishing for pickerel, although a few anglers preferred to fish for pike only.

Winter angling for pickerel is considered a conservative source of outdoor recreation at the time when most other sources are frozen up.

The low rate of recovery of pickerel from local waters during the winter months does not mean that there is a short. Pickerel are plentiful in lakes. Biological surveys conducted annually on many of the lakes have proved that pickerel collected during the past winter had shown consistently high populations of this species existence.

There is little or no connection between the number of pickerel caught in any body of water and the number that anglers are capable of catching. Often there are high large populations of pickerel that are not caught by anglers experience the greatest difficulty in catching them.

Rebel Leader Agrees To Peace Talks On Congo

Parley Start Delayed While Safe Site Sought

LEOPOLDVILLE (AP)—Proposed peace talks by Leopoldville officials with pro-Lumumba leader Antoine Gizenga which were postponed today because of inability to agree on a safe place to meet.

Rebel Leader Antoine Gizenga and his Stanleyville regime's military leader had accepted the central government's bid for peace talks Sunday, raising hopes the main friction in the Congo might be eased.

This last - minute snag appeared just as the leaders were preparing to fly to the jungle village of Bandaki for long-awaited reconciliation negotiations.

Vice-Premier Jean Bolikango issued a communique saying Leopoldville authorities would not fly to Bandaki as scheduled, but hoped to reach agreement on a new site for the talks by Monday. Until this agreement is reached, he said, the talks are postponed.

Economic Minister Jean Foncheka-Foncheka of the Kasavubu central government said Leopoldville wants an agreement which will preserve the right to enter my own Parliament Buildings with a friend of the same age as I."

In his reply, Mr. Diefenbaker cited a long - standing regulation that anyone under 16 must be accompanied by an adult to make the tour. The prime minister added:

"As you have been interested enough to learn where and how the government of your country operates I feel that every opportunity should be given to you, and if you and your friend will call at my office a member of my staff will accompany you on a visit to the Parliament Buildings and will be ready to answer any questions."

Boy of Thirteen Being Offered Conducted Tour

OTTAWA (CP) — A 13-year - old Ottawa boy who claimed that as a taxpayer he has the right to visit the Parliament Buildings is being offered a conducted tour on the personal invitation of Prime Minister Diefenbaker.

Young Art Hoolin, who along with a dozen of the same age had been turned back at Parliament's door last weekend because he wasn't accompanied by an adult, protested by letter to Mr. Diefenbaker.

The prime minister replied by letter Friday, offering to place one of his secretaries at the disposal of the boys for a tour of the buildings.

"... We pay a certain amount of taxes on clothing. Even if I am only 13 and I am still a Canadian citizen and think I deserve the right to enter my own Parliament Buildings with a friend of the same age as I."

In his reply, Mr. Diefenbaker cited a long - standing regulation that anyone under 16 must be accompanied by an adult to make the tour. The prime minister added:

"As you have been interested enough to learn where and how the government of your country operates I feel that every opportunity should be given to you, and if you and your friend will call at my office a member of my staff will accompany you on a visit to the Parliament Buildings and will be ready to answer any questions."

FOUR THEATRES OPEN SUNDAY, START NEW ERA

Timmins, Cochrane First With Shows

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sunday, at 1:30 p.m., as four movie houses open their doors in seven Northern Ontario municipalities, a new era begins in the province's Sunday entertainment.

Three theatres at Timmins and one at Cochrane, some 40 miles to the north, will be the first to open Sunday since the Ontario Legislature passed an amendment to the Lord's Day (Ontario) Act during its last session.

The amendment allows municipalities to vote on a local option basis their own bylaws permitting movies, concerts and plays Sundays after 1:30 p.m.

Timmins and Cochrane were two of 15 municipalities that voted for Sunday entertainment in referendums last December and January.

Four municipalities — New-mantet, Dryden, Kenora and Brantford — voted against.

Municipalities which approved were: Toronto, Windsor, Niagara Falls, Cornwall, Stamford Township, Leamington, Port Oskville, Kapuskasing, Cochrane, Timmins, Sturgeon Falls, St. Catharines and Alexandria.

Since the Legislature gave these permissive powers, the provinces favoring the legislation have started to pre - digest Sunday entertainment's bylaws for their legal machinery.

In largest city, Ottawa, Toronto, is working on a draft of its bylaw which will be presented to city council as soon as possible. No date has yet been set.

Hamilton, now drafting its bylaw, expects to have Sunday movies before the end of April.

Cornwall, which approved Sunday movies by a 3-2 majority, expects to start operation "too long."

Windsor city council has not yet set a date for its bylaw and Alexandria, near Ottawa, has sent its bylaw to Queen's Park for approval, but hasn't had a reply yet.

There has been no indication of other cities holding referendums, but municipalities which have already held them, did so in conjunction with municipal elections.

Fresh Invasion Jitters Follow Castro's Boast

HAVANA (AP) — Fresh invasion jitters seized Cuba today after Fidel Castro's boast that his forces can easily smash again their enemies and will smash any attempt to overthrow his regime.

Castro told a workers' rally Friday that the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency is directing a plot to invade Cuba and is supplying terrorists and counter-revolutionary bands.

Molly McGee of 79 Wistful Vista, Fibber's Wife, Dies From Cancer

ENCINO, Calif. (CP)—Marian Jordan, the sharp-tongued but soft-hearted wife of the famed Fibber McGee and Molly radio show, died of cancer Friday—a week before her 63rd birthday.

She and Jim Jordan, husband and co-star, amused millions of the pre-TV era with their gentle satire on the comfy couple who lived in the methical town of Wistful Vista.

Molly's tart, quavery rebuke "ain't funny, McGee!" became a household joke.

The little house at 79 Wistful Vista was the backdrop against which the McGees entertained Mayor La Trivia, Horatio K. Boomer, the blustering neighbor Gildersleeve, and the little girl who never developed a new comedy radio show, Smackout featuring a grocery store "smack out" of just about everything.

Their folksy humor developed into the McGee format—a bragging suburbanite householder and his long-suffering, skeptical wife. The series started in 1935 and ran nearly 20 years.

Woman Given $20,000 Award

TORONTO (CP)—A woman whose husband was killed Sept. 3, 1956, in a boat accident during a regatta on the St. Lawrence River near Cornwall, was awarded damages totalling $20,000 Friday.

Ruth Norma Tekenos, who since remarried, sued Lieut.-Commodore Boating and Racing Association and Hubert Denis, operator of a hydroplane which crashed into her husband's boat.

Mr. Justice J. M. A. King found the racing club two-thirds negligent and Mr. Denis one-third.

Molly McGee of 79 Wistful Vista, Fibber's Wife, Dies From Cancer

Although among radio's top comedy characters, Jordans never made it on TV. The show was attempted on TV with another actress—but failed.

The Jordans started as a vaudeville team before the First World War. Molly (the daughter of her as Marian) was a piano teacher in Peoria, Ill., and Jordan, a wholesale meat salesman earning $8 a week. They said it was love at first sight—and they married in 1916.

Between vaudeville dates in the Midwest, they picked up radio appearance for an occasional radio show.

In 1931, they met Don Quinn, a struggling radio writer, and together they developed a new comedy radio show, Smackout featuring a grocery store "smack out" of just about everything.

Closed forever now is the McGees' fantastically cluttered closet. Whenever McGee opened it—at least, once a show—hundreds of articles spilled thunderously on to the floor.

Seek New NATO Partnership In Nuclear Weapons Defence

WASHINGTON (AP)—Prime Minister Macmillan of Britain predicted, Kennedy wind up their Allied policy talks today with an evident determination to seek the co-operation of other NATO powers in forming a deep "partnership" in nuclear weapons defence.

The two leaders were scheduled to issue a joint statement after the results of their three days of conferences at the White House. It was expected to stress a need for greater unity in allied ranks.

Macmillan stressed the unity theme heavily in a speech at Cambridge, Mass., Friday night. For the first time, he gave some official indication of the nature of his talks with Kennedy, although British and American diplomats have been providing regular, informal reports on the talks which began last Tuesday.

The prime minister called for a partnership in the nuclear age with conventional weapons) field," and U.S. officials said that Kennedy and he had talked about this idea and Kennedy supported it.

The British and U.S. leaders were reported to have expressed privately in their talks concern about the French policy under President de Gaulle of building up a separate nuclear striking force for France. They evidently fear this would eventually lead to similar action by other European allies and produce a demand in West Germany for an independent nuclear force.

Officials said Macmillan told Kennedy hope that the "partnership" idea, when fully developed, will result in a change in French policy.

This issue, which Macmillan described as vital to the future of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, seemed certain to come up at a NATO foreign ministers meeting in Oslo, Norway, early next month and to figure also in Kennedy's talks with de Gaulle at Paris around June 1.

The problem may also enter into Kennedy's meeting here

Nine Unions Band to Fight Foreign-Registered Shipping

MONTREAL (CP) — Nine vessels. The ships are mostly owned by Canadians or Americans but registered abroad, the spokesman said, so that their owners do not have to pay wages and taxes at North American levels.

Hal C. Banks, head of the Canadian district of the Seafarers' International Union (Ind.) was named chairman of the committee.

He said it has resolved to forcefully put an end to policy of centralizing the efforts of the many maritime trade unions throughout the Great Lakes.

Fifty delegates from unions in the Maritime Trades Department (AFL-CIO) came to the meeting, held just as the inland navigation season is about to open. They represent men who

General Assembly Completes Debate on Tortured Republic

UNITED NATIONS (CP)— A glimmer of hope on the Congo riddle was seen today after the 15th United Nations General Assembly completed its debate on the tortured African republic.

Assembly President Frederick Boland of Ireland announced Friday night that the 99-member world forum will vote on three resolutions next week.

This coincided with reports that meetings looking toward reconciliation will be held during the weekend on neutral ground. Barring some new blowup, there would be talks between representatives of the rival regimes of President Joseph Kasavubu, generally supported by the West, and Antoine Gizenga, backed by the Soviet Union and some other Asian republics.

In other business, a resolution condemning South Africa for imposing a reign of tyranny and racial terror over South West Africa, a trust territory, was adopted without a dissenting vote by the assembly.

Then the assembly's 29-member special political committee indulged in a 2½-hour 'chorus of condemnation on South Africa's apartheid (racial separation) but postponed voting on the subject until Monday.

So many delegations spoke in "explanation of vote" that the

CONSTITUTION OF NEW PARTY IS ANNOUNCED

Will Be Submitted To Founding Parley

OTTAWA (CP) — The draft constitution for the New Party, setting out proposed membership structure and financial and operating arrangements, was made public today.

It will be submitted to the founding convention here July 30-Aug. 4 of the political party being organized by the CCF and the Canadian Labor Congress.

The national committee for the New Party, headed by Stanley Knowles, CCF national president, said the draft is being published now to provide time for study by delegates of proposed amendments. Deadline for the latter is June 15.

The draft constitution provides that members of unions affiliated with the New Party who do not want to contribute to party funds will be able to contract out by instructing the union to count them out.

SETS BASIC CLASSES

The constitution sets up two basic classes of membership—individuals paying $2.00 a year, and affiliated members paying 50 cents a year by five-cent monthly deductions through union dues or other bodies affiliated with the New Party.

The "contracting out" provision reads:

"Any member of an affiliated organization may at any time officially notify his organization that he does not wish to participate payment to be made to the party on his behalf, and the organization shall forthwith cease to do so."

Affiliated membership will be open to trade unions, farm groups, cooperatives and other groups and organizations which by official act subscribe to the constitution and principles of the New Party.

The provisional national council, which would govern the party between national conventions, would deal with affiliation applications from an organization with more than one million

Slander Suit Against Reeve Is Dismissed

TORONTO (CP)—A libel and slander suit against Reeve Irvine Curtis of suburban Long Branch was dismissed Friday by Mr. Justice Andrew Hudredin in the Supreme Court of Ontario.

He took the case away from the jury for lack of evidence and ordered costs to Mrs. Curtis.

William Robert Chambers, a real estate broker who lost the ownership campaign to Mrs. Curtis in 1958, had launched the case on remarks made by Mrs. Curtis after the election.

Mr. Justice Landreville said: "While the law does not recognize open season on libel and slander, one who ventures into 530 aboard includes the 130 crew members or not."

530 Are Rescued Number Missing Is Not Known

Is Possible Collision Caused Fire Outbreak

BAHREIN — Rescue ships were reported to have saved 530 persons today from a blazing British cargo liner in the Persian Gulf.

But an unknown number of passengers were missing amid conflicting reports on the total number of persons aboard the 5,000-ton Dara.

The ship's agents here said a total of 530 survivors—many of them pilgrims on their way to Mecca—had been picked up by seven rescue ships. Earlier, 49 persons were reported dead and 130 missing.

No lifeboats got clear of the Dara but four rescue vessels streamed in close to pick up survivors.

One of the rescue ships headed for this small island sheikdom with 150 survivors. Another two were reported to have started to the coastal port of Dubai south of Bahrein.

A number of Americans and Britons were aboard the Dara but most of its passengers were Moslem deck passengers. Shipping officers headed the Asian crew.

Early reports said the Dara carried a total of 997 passengers and crew, but the ship's owners in London said it had 440 passengers and 110 crew.

CAPTAIN BOARDS SHIP

Capt. Ian Macmillan, Capt. E. Elson, was reported to have reboarded the Dara as the fire subsided. Two other vessels were still at the scene along with a British search plane.

One report said the Dara was in collision with the Panamanian freighter Zeta Friday night at Dubai after picking up between 400 and 1,000 pilgrims. The vessel was said to have put to sea in bad weather, intending to return to Dubai by daylight, caught in a violent electrical storm.

The agents' spokesman here said the Dara appeared to have been in a collision in rough weather with another ship dragging its anchor in Dubai, main commercial port of Trucial Oman at the southern end of the Persian Gulf.

The Dara put to sea and what happened after that was obscure, the spokesman said.

RAN INTO STORM

The ship is owned by the British Indian Steam Navigation Company and ran into the storm while plying between Bombay in India, and Basra, Iraq. It was afloat at 8 a.m., 3 a.m. EST today by Mr. Landreville's decision in the Supreme Court of Ontario.

He took the case away from the jury for lack of evidence and ordered costs to Mrs. Curtis.

Cubicle Where Eichmann Will Sit During Trial Closely Guarded

JERUSALEM (AP)—An Israeli police expert and a carpenter lay in the slaughter of 6,000,000 Jews during the war probably would die long before Adolf Eichmann sets foot in the courtroom, it was learned today.

The police specialist was called to describe the emotions aroused merely by the sight of the Nazi. Nearly every family of Jews from Europe living in Israel lost one or more relatives in the Nazi genocide.

Consequently the Beth Ha'am (community center) which has been converted into a huge courtroom resembles a supercret military installation. Soldiers stationed on the roof look down on strong steel fences, watching the streets and everyone who visits and leaves.

At the left of the main entrance are 12 cubicles—where a soldier does a thorough job of frisking anyone entering.

Global Fighter Accidentally Shot Down

GRANTS, N.M., (AP)—A supersonic jet fighter, making a simulated attack during a training mission, accidentally fired a deadly Sidewinder air - to - air missile Friday which downed a search plane.

The eight - jet, 8,000,000 bomber plunged to destruction in rugged mountain terrain in west central New Mexico. Three of the eight crew members were known to have parachuted to safety. Rescue workers reached the wreckage hours later and reported there were some bodies at the scene.

The air forces began an investigation to determine why the Sidewinder made its unexpected sortie from the White Sands Missile Range in New Mexico Air National Guard fighter piloted by Capt. James von Scyoc of Albuquerque.

Von Scyoc had been making practice attack passes on the heavy bomber at about 35,000 feet when, on the sixth pass a Sidewinder missile was actually fired. The deadly missile was directed across the path of the bomber's engines and scored a direct hit.

SAVED BY PARACHUTE

Three of the eight crew were able to parachute to safety before the plane crashed. Donald Hockett, 36, of Kansas City, Kan., pilot of the plane was the commander; Capt. George Jackson, 27, of Richwood, W.Va.; and Capt. Sid Hall, 27, of Hurricane, W.Va., of Havre de Grace, Md., all from the South Dakota Air National Guard in Albuquerque for temporary assignment of various injuries.

Trucial coast, south of Sharjah.

Three hundred survivors will be landed at Dibai today, the spokesman said, and another 150 are reported aboard the tanker British Energy en route to Bahrein.

The storm the Dara encountered was the worst in the Abu Musa Persian Gulf in years, Glan Williams smashed windows in some ships.

Admiralty officials said at least three Royal Navy frigates were conducting manoeuvres in the area near the Dara and had been ordered to help in the rescue work.

Earlier reports reaching Bahrein said the Dara had been unable to get its lifeboats away and this was confirmed.

Bahrein is a small British protectorate in the Persian Gulf. Trucial coast gets its name from the treaties various Arab tribes of Sharjah signed with the British since 1830.

Premier Frost Patron of "Y" Building Drive

Judge J. C. Anderson, who is honorary chairman of the YMCA new building campaign, announces today that Premier Leslie M. Frost has agreed to be a patron of the effort. Mr. Frost writes: "I should be most happy to become a patron for this most worthwhile effort and I send my greetings and best wishes for every success."

Premier Frost has had a long personal contact with the YMCA.

As a boy he first became a YMCA member. In his late teens he was a counsellor at the YMCA's Geneva Park on Lake Couchiching. Throughout his adult career he has maintained his conviction in the importance of the role the YMCA's place in the life of their communities, and he has always been ready to assist the associations wherever possible.

The Belleville YMCA campaign for a new building is now being organized. The present building on Campbell St. has been in use since 1911—an even half century. In the years Belleville's population has increased many times, and multiplied four times, and a YMCA membership has quadrupled at a still greater rate. The old building is outgrown, outworn, and should soon be replaced by a modern, functional edifice, as Victoria and Herchimer Aves. when there will be adequate space for parking and outdoor programs as well as for the building itself. The cost is estimated at $550,000.

The verdict was accidental death.

Community Concert Group Plans for Its 28th Season

By EUGENE LANG

...Without music life would be a mistake". So wrote the renowned nineteenth century German philosopher Friedrich Wilhelm Nietzsche. And when you stop to comprehend that short sentence to the fullest, one becomes aware that every person of it is true. Everybody regardless of race, religion or color likes music. In fact, just about everybody likes it just as a guest of the Association. surrounds our everyday existence like none of the other arts could possibly do. There is music today piped into factories and offices, many stores play music all day to their staffs and customers, restaurants all have music playing, be it through the coin-operated juke box or simply by having loud speakers play soft music as a background. Every television program has music, again much of it being as a background fill-in. The motion pictures are all interspersed with music, the radio features music galore, and the record industry is one of the largest media of all for producing music. The phonograph only a natural corollary that music is part of everyone's life. We just can't seem to exist without it.

Through the efforts of the Belleville Community Concert Association we can hear more and more of the world's great music, the immortal strains of the master compositors of the past and present. And here we have music in the flesh. We hear the voices of the artists right on stage before our very eyes. We hear the instruments as that performer communicates his or her musical conception with his artistry to our receptive senses. We can experience that thrill of hearing music in its difficult passage is smoothly executed by the instrumental performer or if high 'C' vocally capped by a coloratura soprano. We know that our musical appetites are whetted and satisfied at each of the concerts presented every year. Because great music is brought to our ears by the association by renowned musicians.

CAMPAIGN PLANNED

Beginning in 1949 the Belleville Community Concert Association will hold its annual campaign week to visit both old members and new. Members are solicited to the membership list will fill the society of the Belleville Collegiate Auditorium where the concerts are held, meaning a round figure of about 1,000 thousand. There have been hundreds join every year, but there are always a few memberships open for new members. And, speaking of new members, if you did join this year for the first time, or are rejoining after maybe an absence of a year or so, you are entitled to attend the last concert of this season on May 12th

An next season! The local Association has placed hold, on two famous personalities in the musical world, namely the world famous Canadian soprano Lois Marshall (who was here about six or seven years ago and thrilled everyone with her stunning voice) and the fast-rising young piano virtuoso, Ronal Turini,the only pupil of the master pianist Vladimir Horowitz. These two artists of outstanding renown will be only two of four who will be brought to Belleville next season. When the campaign is terminated on April 22, the Artistic Selection Committee will choose the other two astwoctions.

The Committee headquarters this year will be in the downstairs auditorium of the Public Library and will be open from Monday, April 17, to Saturday, April 22, from 10 a.m. till 5.30 p.m. and on Thursday, April 20, from 7.30 till 9.30 in the evening hours. If you cannot come down to headquarters you may phone WO 2-3688 for complete information on how to enlist as a member for the forthcoming season.

It is hoped that this year's membership will be the largest and that every seat in the auditorium will be sold out for the 1961-62 season. Good music is necessary to the cultural uplifting of any community and through the efforts of Community Concerts the finest musical compositions have been brought to Belleville audiences over the past 27 years. May this 28th season be the best ever. It should be.

Rail Problems To Be Examined In Broadcast

Canadian railways, faced with mounting costs, shrinking revenue and a government-imposed freeze on freight rates, are in a state of near crisis.

This crisis and what is being done to solve it will be examined in a one hour radio documentary called Whither the Railways on CBC Trans-Canada radio network (CBL) April 16 at 3 p.m.

Produced and narrated by Robert Bruzil in Montreal, the program will contain interviews with railroad executives and with representatives of the airlines and trucking industries, the railways' chief competitors.

Besides the government's competitors, the rail operators have only to look into their own roundhouses, repair shops, terminals and ticket offices for other pressing problems of those of wage demands and fear of layoffs through mechanization.

For months the railways have been negotiating with unions representing more than 130,000 non-operating workers (clerks, machinists, repairmen and porters). Their demands of 20 cents per hour increases would cost $65 million, an amount railway operators claim they can't afford without freight rate increases.

During the past 10 years freight rates have doubled until in December 1960 the government imposed a freeze on rates pending the recommendations of a Royal Commission.

On April 5 it was reported that the Maritime Freight Commission on Transportation had recommended that the government give the railways greater leeway in making decisions to abandon uneconomic services, and that the two major railways be subsidized in the amount of about $6 million annually to help cover the losses in hauling export grain.

CPR and CNR claim they lost $70 million in 1958 because they were forced to haul the grain at rate, set in 1897.

The fall report is expected to be made public before May 15, proposed date of a rail strike postponed from last December.

The recommendations still leave the railways free to apply to the Board of Transport Commissioners for an increase in freight rates.

both sides indicated they wanted neutral sites where negotiators could meet without fear of local interference.

The man who appears to have cleared the way for the new negotiations, Cleophas Kamitatu, will attend the political conference in Kamitatu, provincial capital of Leopoldville province, flew to Stanleyville Tuesday for a reconciliation mission with the central government's blessing.

Premier Cyrille Adoula said at that time The Congo must be united, but Kamitatu is a "central government based at Stanleyville."

The Stanleyville regime is recognized and supported by the Soviet Union and some African nations. The Western powers have backed Leopoldville.

BLOCKADE LIFTED

To facilitate negotiations, the central government announced it is lifting an economic blockade imposed on Stanleyville Kivu provinces four months ago in an attempt to force Gizenga to submit to Leopoldville authority.

Thursday said two Congo River barges will leave Leopoldville Tuesday for Stanleyville. The first boats to resume Kasaga province continued to maintain a partial economic blockade of its own—but against United Nations troops stationed in Elisabethville.

Thombe had ordered the boycott part of a "general sabotage" campaign against UN forces and then, according to UN officials, gave some assurances the order would be rescinded.

However, no official announcement to this effect has been made and UN troops, planes and cafes still refuse to serve UN troops.

Maple Syrup Season Best In Many Years

Depending on the location of the sugar bush, the 1961 maple syrup season is almost over for another year with farmers reporting one of the most successful syrup making seasons on record.

In Prince Edward county in the West Lake area, sap buckets have been put away for another year, while north of Belleville the sap is expected to run for still another week.

"It was the best syrup season I remember," stated Mrs. Kleinsteuber of West Lake, "although this year the traditional Easter sap run failed to materialize."

The Kleinsteubers feel that in their case "the early bird gets the worm" with early tapping providing more successful in their particular area.

This year the Kleinsteubers tapped on February 22nd and their buckets were washed and put away yesterday.

But north of Belleville the syrup season is expected to last for another week. Garnet Denyes of Plainfield says he expects to leave his buckets out that long.

Again, however, this year's syrup season has been a successful one for Mr. Denyes with the sap run the best in several years.

Half a Dozen Farmers Offer Maple Syrup

Maple syrup at $6.00 per gallon was the feature of the Saturday morning market today.

Approximately half a dozen farmer, offered the spring delicacy. Several farmers offered maple sugar at 15c to 25c a cake.

Fresh eggs old at 40c for Grade A, 37c for mediums and 45c per dozen for extras. Boiling fowl bought 40c per pound and roasting fowl 50c.

Fancy grade spy apples sold at $1 per basket and $4.00 per hamper. Fancy Delicious were 90c a basket. Talmas were 85c and Winter Bananas 75c.

Potatoes were 50c a basket.

First World War Veterans Thanked at Vimy Dinner

Mayor Ian Beresford of Gananoque, regional vice-president of the Canadian Legion's Ontario command, last night urged veterans to take advantage of the services provided by the Department of Veterans' Affairs.

He addressed the Vimy-VE Day banquet of Branch 99 of the Canadian Legion, Belleville. About 18 veterans of the battle of Vimy Ridge, April 9, 1917, attended the banquet, along with upwards of 100 of their comrades from both World Wars.

"When the Department of Veterans' Affairs men fall down on their jobs of interpreting the regulations as they affect veterans, I think it should be up to the Legion to do a watch-dog job, bring attention to the oversight," said Mayor Beresford, a veteran, of the Second World War and the Kingston district administrative officer of the Canadian Pensions Commission.

He credited the efforts and influence of a number of veterans' organizations which sprung up in the mid-1920's for playing an important role in the establishment of the Department of Veterans' Affairs.

GOT RAW DEAL

The returning veterans of the First World War "got a raw deal from the government" and so many organizations sprung up.

"Many of these groups tried honestly to improve conditions for the veteran", he said.

But the veterans of the Second World War returned home to a much different situation, because long before the outbreak of hostilities in 1939 it was realized that war veterans should be given better treatment. When veterans returned to Canada following the cessation of hostilities in 1945, they were able to take advantage of the Veterans Land Act, university grants, disability pensions, and other benefits.

"It's now DVA's job to see that all veterans receive all that they have coming to them", he said.

"All this came about through the efforts of veterans of the First World War. I don't think that if we could live to be 500 we Second World War veterans could thank them enough".

Now veterans "have all the things that I think they can reasonably ask of a government".

OWE GREAT DEBT

Mayor Beresford said veterans of both world wars "owe a great debt" to Canada and one way they can help pay it is to safeguard against the "hitherto organized treachery called communism."

"I feel the Legion must assume its share of the great responsibilities which lie in the challenging years ahead," he said.

At the outbreak of the Second World War, Canada found itself in the uncomfortable position of being unprepared. Its ports were not prepared because we hadn't been equipping ourselves to fight against an enemy who had been arming itself for years," he said. "We don't want to experience this again. So before we join too strongly in the suppression of the H-bomb and the A-bomb, we want to make certain that disarmament will not leave us vulnerable and in the same position we were in at the outbreak of the Second World War."

"The Legion's business is peace," he said, and "therefore Canada must maintain its defence."

The ideals the Legion serves are found in the words, "For God, for Queen, for country." Those words "should be on the heart of every freedom-loving person in the country."

Acting service bureau officer W. O. Bailey was chairman of the banquet. Branch Chaplain Bram Humphreys said grace. Len Taylor, public relations officer of Ontario command, introduced Mayor Beresford and Zone Commander D. C. McVicker thanked him.

A toast to those who fell at Vimy was proposed by Lloyd Monteith.

Roy Madden thanked the Ladies' Auxiliary for preparing and serving dinner.

Head table guests introduced by Mr. Bailey were: Elmer Sandercock, MPP for Hastings West; Dr. D. C. McVicker; Lee Grills, MP for Hastings South; District Commander Frank (Dude) Hills, Port Hope; Leslie Digby, branch president; Reg. Bailey; Mayor Beresford; Major Joe Black of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment; Mr. Taylor and Mr. Humphreys.

JOHNSON RETURNS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy welcomed Vice-President Lyndon Johnson home Friday from a 12,000-mile trip to Africa and Europe which Kennedy said brought "great distinction" to the United States.

Among the guests at last night's Vimy-VE Day banquet held by Branch 99 of the Canadian Legion, Belleville, were (left to right): Elmer Sandercock, MPP Hastings West; Mayor Ian Beresford of Gananoque, regional vice-president of the Legion's Ontario Command; Dr. D. C. McVicker, Zone Commander; Len Taylor, provincial public relations officer; Lee Grills, MP for Hastings South, and Leslie Digby, branch president.

Two Fires Account for Half Total Loss of $200,000 in Past Year, Chief Reports

Fire losses in Belleville last year amounted to just over $200,000, with two of the five accounting for over half the total, it is noted in the annual report of Fire Chief Gerald Vance released this week.

Loss for the year totalled $201,362 with a total of 328 alarms answered by the department.

During the year 74 alarms are found in the words, "No God, for Queen, for country." Those words "should be on the heart of every freedom-loving person in the country."

Acting service bureau officer W. O. Bailey was chairman of the banquet. Branch Chaplain Bram Humphreys said grace. Len Taylor, public relations officer of Ontario command, introduced Mayor Beresford and Zone Commander D. C. McVicker thanked him.

LOSS AT CITY HALL

The loss at city hall when fire caught from the furnace and damaged two downstairs offices, was given as $4,865.

Household blazes were the most frequent cause for the fire toll in 1960. During the year a total of 240 house calls were received. Chimney fires were more frequent than night alarms at about a three to two ratio, December was the most fire prone month with a total of 26 calls being received by firemen.

The emergency truck was called out on 23 occasions with emergency treatment being given to 32 persons. Sixteen of these persons were revived and five others were taken to hospital.

RECOMMENDATIONS

Six recommendations were made by the fire chief concerning equipment, personnel and repairs.

One of these was for a fund to be set up each year for the depreciation of fire trucks and equipment in order that money would be available when required for equipment purchases.

The chief also recommended the purchase of a new fire truck in 1963 to replace a 1935 model for which parts and tires are no longer available. Tires on the old truck are 16 years old and this vehicle was said not safe to use in answering fire alarms.

Also recommended was the purchase of two sets of walkie-talkie equipment which were considered a real necessity, a portable 2,500-watt electric generator to light walls and buildings where there has been cut off was also recommended.

OTHER ACTIVITIES

Fire fighting is not the only activity of the Belleville Fire Department. The annual Santa Claus parade is organized by firemen. Also firemen each year participate in a police-firemen hockey match for the benefit of crippled children; they operate one of the recreational committee's children's playgrounds and operate a weekly bingo with proceeds going to buy toys and clothes for underprivileged children at Christmas time.

Stirling Nurse Dies of Injuries In Hospital

Critically injured in a two-car crash north of Belleville early last Sunday morning, Miss Rosanne Vandervoort, 20, staff nurse at Belleville General Hospital, died late Friday night.

Miss Vandervoort was one of several persons injured in the crash when a car came onto No. 14 highway from the county road at Latchford's corners and collided with the vehicle in which she was riding.

She was silver medallist at last year's graduation for the Belleville General Hospital School of Nursing.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Vandervoort, she was born at Stirling and had lived all her life in the area. She was a member of St. Paul's United Church at Stirling, and was a member of the church choir.

Besides her parents she is survived by two sisters, Elaine and Carol, and a brother, Robert, all at home, and a still un-named three-day old brother at Belleville Hospital.

Parks Fees Raised

Even when it comes to fresh air and sunshine, you cannot get something for nothing — so it would almost seem from the latest news regarding the operation of Ontario provincial parks.

The annual vehicle fee, to permit a car to enter one of these parks, is being increased from $2 to $3.

We think it desirable that, as far as is feasible, fees charged for the use of these parks should meet the cost of their operation. An annual $3 fee is not exorbitant, when one remembers that it permits a full carload of funfarers to enter a park and enjoy its facilities, not just once but as often as they choose. Nevertheless, there is a trend being established here which will bear careful watching. If fees are continually increased, we shall reach a point where the charges may defeat the objective of the parks — to give urban residents an opportunity to enjoy the outdoors. The correct approach, we suggest, is not to urge that general taxes be used to keep these fees down, but to question whether all the facilities being provided in these parks are absolutely necessary. The answer to that question will depend largely on the number of people using any particular park — what would be adequate sanitary facilities for a park used only by a few score obviously will not meet proper standards for a park used by thousands.

In parks, as in so many other activities, we may be in danger of becoming over-organized. This is available, the unavoidable price of an increasing population. Some of it, though, may be merely the product of an over-zealous approach. Which forbid leaving a park unattended in a provincial park appear open to question. Particularly is this true if the regulation applies to private owners, as well as to outfitters or those who rent boats. (The Canadian Press report, while referring to a "favorite labor-saving tactic of angling outfitters," nowhere indicated that this rule will not apply to privately-owned boats.) The regulations will not apply to Algonquin Park this year, but will go into operation next year. The objective of the delay is to permit commercial operators to adjust their rates and hire more guides. But are guides always essential, or even desirable, in provincial parks? What harm would be done by permitting boats to remain unattended, until somebody, possessing a key to the padlock, arrived to use them? The Department of Lands and Forests must have some good argument for its action, but off-hand we fail to appreciate the necessity for the new regulation.

New Trend in India

To every action there is a reaction.

Even, it appears, in politics in India.

By force of circumstances, as well as by reason of conviction, Premier Jawaharlal Nehru's ruling Congress Party in India has espoused moderate socialism. No other policy appeared realistic in the face of India's teeming population and multiple needs. There has been, and still is, a race between the ability to produce the necessities of life and the ever-increasing numbers of people for whom these necessities must be supplied. In a country of great extremes, of abject poverty and immense wealth, it is difficult to see how any high-principled political party could have permitted the use of limited capital to be determined solely by the prospect of profit.

Now, though, a right wing party, Jan Sangh, has captured the New Delhi parliamentary seat in a by-election. Previously the greatest political threat to the Congress Party appeared to come from the extreme left, from the Communists. Now, though, there appears a challenge from the right, the Jan Sangh party not only being pledged to free enterprise but also opposing preferential treatment for the Hindu majority in India. While it is not thought this by-election victory will mean much in next year's general election, it is an interesting straw which reveals an unexpected wind blowing. This is all the more surprising when we remember that New Delhi, as the capital, probably has amongst its voters a very large number of civil servants, who would hardly, in the normal course of events, be expected to deplore social st c measures.

America, under a new and youthful president, is flexing its muscles again and looking at new frontiers — while this tired, discredited, caste-ridden government, boasting of nothing but a certain amount of Edwardian elegance, leaves Britain to lag behind — Harold Wilson, British Labor Party spokesman.

Must Make Big Demands

Saturday Review, New York

The spirited reaction to the president's (Roosevelt) press conference is not confined to the young. The nation as a whole needs stimulation here for the moral imagination.

And, specifically, a basic lesson about the fundamental nature of a human response to be released. It is basic to the function of leadership in an age of crisis to make implicit big demands on people.

It has been the fashion for some years to assume that the American people were not ready for big ideas and that leaders, politicians, those who got too far out in front would lose their jobs. The has led to all sorts of polls and canvassing operations designed to indicate how the government might move in important directions.

Everyone was waiting for someone else to get things in motion. In other times, when good, energies that should have been going into the emancipation of people went into self-congratulations.

The result was that great expectations were suffocated by great hesitations.

It becomes important now and timely to assert that people to demonstrate their greatness.

Leadership cannot manufacture greatness. It doesn't have to. Its job is to summon greatness.

Leadership must do something else; it must have confidence in the reality of the response, and make sure it never underestimate the capacity of people — so long as they are asked to meet a challenge that has been honestly and plainly defined.

No supposed maxims in history has been more frequently quoted — to the detriment of more people — than the old one about politics being the art of the possible. The truth of the matter is that opposition is least so many politicians are so blamed inevitable.

It takes a certain artistry to deal with the world with mystery, a series of human responses. Similarly, it requires invoke moral imagination to invoke moral imagination.

• • •

Winston Churchill didn't keep history and the British people waiting. He put upon out homilies about things that couldn't be done. Others might speculate about the possibilities; Churchill's important business was with human destiny.

Pericles and Lincoln didn't merely theorize about the living something to live for.

What we have been discussing applies not to government alone but to all enterprises where progress is juxtaposed with difficulties.

The business executive who has achieved a leadership position is one who has come to terms with the laws of human challenge and response, dealing with the law of supply and demand.

The best teacher is not necessarily the one who possesses the most knowledge but the one who most effectively enables his students to believe in their ability to learn.

The author who penetrates the deepest into the human soul is the one who has the strongest respect for the awakening power of conscience and the redeeming power of commitment.

• • •

The American people today have two jobs before them. One is to keep the human race from pulverizing itself in these monstrous exchanges. The other is to safeguard the freedom that belongs to the nations that are overwhelmed.

Fascinated by this difficulty, the people may well forget that people cannot be made to understand such problem, such less overcome them.

The real leader will not wait until he understanding to come into being. He will proceed at once to the main point, sharing what he knows and feels. He seeks no advance guarantees that his summons will be accepted, but he thanks his lucky stars for the privilege of putting it to the test.

The real leader, in short, regards himself as the prime agent of a nation's ideals. He will see in that idealism the generative and regenerative power for shaping the human future.

Paperbacks Big Business

Charleston Science Monitor

When Aldus Manutius first considered (about 1500) publishing books which would be inexpensive enough for people who liked reading better than owning, he set off a revolution. The paperbacks that sold in the United States in 1939 would have floated a small empire or two. As a matter or record, it is now fashionable to emphasize the great mass-minded "democracy" of salesmanship by which the aristocratic kingdoms of hardcover book publishing seem fast developing into a colonies of satellites.

As Samuel Goldwyn might have phrased it, from the pinnacle of an industry that also knew how to make its money by reprinting anything from classic to mere best-seller, "This is supercolossal." In fact, it's big.

But as in the most earnestly democratic societies, so in the community of paperbacks class distinctions appear in new forms and shapes. There is the highbrow-becks for the connoisseur who, like the French peers habitually do, may decide to have his bound. Then there are the kinds that prove that the greatest distance between two points is the line from ten-cent store rack to rubbish pile.

Paperback novelists are in still another class and classroom, reducing the money costs of education, have had a telling strain on the student's pocket which soon sags with the weight of a hard-covered volume.

The sags here suggested would take a long campaign to rectify adequate telling. It explains why the book editor looks hard at a book while you are submitting your great novel. He less likely is trying to decide whether you might have written something worthy of gold tooling on a posterity issue than to see whether your stuff will attract calls from one of the paperback boys.

U.S. Sending Chef to Paris

Brantford Expositor

This may or may not be something like shipping coals to Newcastle, but it's a fact that the United States is going a send a New York chef to Paris to show the chefs there how to use such American specialties as minute rice, frozen turkey, canned cranberry sauce and instant mixes.

With tact, the U.S. authorities have selected a French-born expert, Mr. Andre Deviller, executive chef of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, to go to the French capital, where with him should $35,000 worth of U.S. "convenience" foods. The French capital, where with him should $35,000 worth of U.S. "convenience" foods. The trip to Paris is scheduled for May 15. Ladmystie, here he comes!

The orthodox may be shocked by this development. Those who cling to the belief that the French cooking is the best in the world will howl in horror. (Excellent French cooking it is just that, but poor French cooking is about the worst in the universe.)

We on this side of the Atlantic have been able to learn a lot about the kitchen art from our French friends; they, in turn, could learn a good deal from our qualified chefs. Mind, we carefully qualify with that adjective "qualified". Otherwise we shall merely offend. But we hope we have contributed to intestinestomach.

DR. EARL I. DOUGLASS

NOW BE CAREFUL

"I won't!"

How often we hear the child say that. How often we say it ourselves, generally not audibly but to our own conscience. "I won't regret this and I won't forget. The way he kept me from advancement is something I shall always remember. The things she said about me were simply awful that I never even want to see her again. God's commands are too severe. Nobody could live up to them and I don't intend to try even."

I think that little six-year-old like who stamps her foot and declares, "I will! I won't! I won't!" is just an example of what original sin is and how it operates! As a matter of fact, that youngster is you, and I speaking out and saying what we often really think, purpose

The fall of man came about as the result of disobedience. We often pretend that we really do not know what the pathway of duty is. This is largely pretense. We know it much more plainly indicated before our feet than we are willing to admit. The voice cries out, yet we are not willing to obey that command.

Sin is spiritual disease, and the solution to problem of that disease is disobedience. "I won't. I won't. I won't"

CLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BYGONE YEARS.

April 8th, 1941

Two pupils from the Ontario School for the Deaf were reported to have been missing from the institution late Monday night; the information was given by Mr. W. J. Morrison, Superintendent at the O.S.D. It is believed the boys left school to return home for a possible Easter holiday, as no such notions of truancy have been practiced by them previously.

In an effort to relieve the dusty conditions that have prevailed along Front Street since the downtown area of Belleville since the advent of Spring, city firemen were employed to flush the sand, dirt and debris off the street early Tuesday morning. However the flushing process had repercussions when considerable seepage was noticed to open their places of business. Much of the main street debris had been removed, but store clerks and merchants were anything but pleased with the task of having to clean their store fronts following the city flushing.

For the second time in seven months, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Thompson, Bridge Street, have had their home destroyed by fire when it burned to the ground early last evening. Believed to have started from a gas fire used to heat the room, conflagration had completely enveloped the north side of the two-storey dwelling before Mrs. Thompson noticed the blaze.

Mrs. E. A. Stuart and children spent Easter in Campbellford.

Miss Violet Wheeler was home from Oshawa to spend Easter.

Mr. John Wallbridge is home from Toronto where he has been for vacation with his father, Mr. Arthur Wallbridge on Bridge street.

Mr. Bill Sherry has left for Toronto where he will take a position with the Cities Service Oil Company.

Mr. Thompson Adams of Bridge Street East is spending the Easter vacation in Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Coleman of Toronto, spent Easter here with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hardwick.

The members of the Bridge Street Church Women's Auxiliary to the Missionary Society met in the Sunday School rooms to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the foundation of the local branch of the society. The President, Miss Nellie Deacon, presided, and addresses were delivered by Mrs. William Johnson, who is a life member, and Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn, Mrs. J. H. P. Young and Mrs. Rollin, all of whom are past presidents of the society. Mrs. (Dr.) Clewer and Mrs. (Dr.) Rollin, a charter member, occupied places of honor at the table. Miss Mae Sawyer, also a charter member, cut the three-storey birthday cake. Tea was served by the young ladies of the Mission Circle, in very respect it was a happy event.

Mr. Peter Vanmeer, who for many years was a member of the Belleville police force, and who resigned some time ago, has again joined the force and will take the place of Police Officer Walker, who has resigned.

April 8th, 1891

Plans are under way for the re-arrangement of the city offices; the space available for use being the repeal of the removal of police headquarters from the city hall to the old meat market building on the square.

Messrs. S. S. Moore, J. A. McCrodan and G. A. Bennett have been appointed to represent the School Board at the convention of the Provincial School Teachers' Association which will meet in Toronto shortly.

The attendance at the local public schools during March, according to the report of School Inspector Mr. H. J. Clarke, was as follows: Queen Victoria Public School — 585; Ward 2 School — 266; Ward 3 School — 157; Canniffon Road School — 113; Station St. School — 135. Total — 1196. The number of pupils registered in the schools is 1236.

Letter To The Editor

'Desertion' Comment Unconfirmed Opinion

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer,

I am pleased with several your editorial entitled "Desertion", published in your issue of April 1, in Wednesday's paper. One has heard quite frequently the quotation "An Informed Public is a Democracy's Greatest Safeguard." I believe, Mr. Editor, that this editorial reflects uninformed opinion rather than factual information.

You refer to the "reports in Toronto newspapers" stating that fathers have deserted their families, so that they might qualify for welfare; this probably sells newspapers but it is certainly not the truth, for in the Provinces of Ontario a man does not need to desert his family, in order that they may obtain public assistance.

The only option open to settling his family, forces them to apply for public funds is certainly to go through a criminal as the plan who commits an offence under the Highway Traffic Act.

The greatest problems faced by municipalities at the moment in dealing with desertion cases is the lack of evidence in the courts. This, however, will eventually be remedied as legislation such as recently being enacted to meet the ever changing demands of public welfare.

I should like to remind you, Mr. Editor, that Mr. Bracken's suggestions do not just reflect the "Welfare Department's" interests alone, but yours and mine as well, for we are paying the cost — a cost that is only to be figured in dollars, but a frightful cost in shattered and broken homes and broken lives.

Desertion is a social disease and until its causes have been studied and corrected, it will continue to be one of the most costly and most important of the problems facing society today.

G. A. Whiteman,
Welfare Administrator.

Editor's Note: Offences under the Highways Traffic Act are not legally crimes.

Polyps Are Growths On Mucous Membranes

By Joseph D. Molner, M.D.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What are polyps? Can they cause cancer? Must surgery be performed? Can treatment be had? — Mrs. M. D."

Polyps are growths that occur on a mucous membrane or the moist lining of nose, throat, stomach, bladder, bowel, etc.

It is common for polyps to be shaped, approximately, like a mushroom, to the extent that they rise on, a narrow stem with a bump or globe at the top.

Since polyps appear on a mucous membrane, they can occur on the larynx, or in the nasal passages (sometimes contributing to sinus trouble.

It so happens that the location seems to have a distinct bearing on whether polyps can become malignant and that is, become cancerous. Without ignoring an elsewhere list, I can't think of one in which one likes to be cancerous and which are not, but for a generality. I would say that bowel or rectal polyps (with certain qualifications) would be removed promptly to be safe; I would be distrustful of polyps in the stomach; I would be alarmed over polyps in the nose from that standpoint, but would consider it the right thing to do remove them if they are causing trouble in hearing and proper sinus drainage — in short, polyps are an abnormal growth and eventually they will create trouble of one sort or another.

In many cases, they may live with polyps for an extended time and be not aware of it, removed because they are troublesome. In other cases, depending on location perhaps the result of other tests, polyps perhaps should be removed, not because they are a nuisance but because there are signs that their location may in time lead to serious problems.

For a few examples, in the nose polyps may in time cause congestion, discharge or bleeding; in the bladder, bleeding infection and sometimes cancer; in the bowel, bleeding and, in a significant percentage of cases, cancerous changes.

I admit that just hearing the various factors which I have mentioned can become complicated and complex. But that's why we have doctors — to balance the factors in favor of risk or harmlessness, and decide when to "wait and see" and when to remove polyps before they have time to concoct any really dangerous conditions.

You know (as I've written before in this column) that for example moles aren't dangerous because they are moles. But if they tend to change size or color, or are subject to constant irritation, they ought to be removed. In other cases, don't worry, because moles are so common. It's just about the same, except for percentages, with many polyps.

"Dear Dr. Molner: Would you discuss the after-effects of a hysterectomy? Is it to be expected not to feel well? — R.N."

The operation itself is not followed by any particular aftereffects. It would be the result of menopause (or removal of ovaries) in some instances. Some do not and then we relieved by appropriate hormone treatments.

"Dear Dr. Molner: About six weeks ago my hair started to come out quite badly. What can be done about it? — Mrs. — Mrs. M. P."

Such hair loss is not unusual in such women. Most likely it is related to some glandular disturbance. There are also nutritional deficiencies which can be easily corrected. Or it may be some emotional upset can be the cause.

Bed-wetting is a distressing problem. If your child has the habit write to Dr. Molner in care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, 211 West 158, Dundee, Ill., for a copy of my helpful booklet, "Parent's Guide to Stop Bed-Wetting." Please enclose a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 25 cents in coin to cover handling and postage.

THE PACKSACK

BY GREGORY CLARE

Thirty years ago, when Hitler was just rising to power and causing uneasiness in the minds of all sensitive men, a small walk was blocks through the crowded downtown streets of Toronto during the noon hour. Five, certainly not fan men whom I had known as fellows of a higher if one may say so, were amidst.

There were of course, lounges and loafers around the downtown thirty years ago but they had nobody. They were not conscience bums; there was no boldness in their gaze. They looked as if they had come out of a lane, and were shortly going back into it. Furthermore, you could see by appearances that the crowded streets and see not a single example of the type of physically challenging youth, barely out of teens, that now swaggers gaily in our midst with the air of being not the rising but the risen generation.

When I was a boy Peter Crowy was walking in the downtown rush-hour and the same thought occurred to both of us as we threaded our way among the well-fed crowds that filled the main corners.

"Where's golly," Pete agreed, "the of recruits for a demagogue!"

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

BEFORE ONE KNOWS

There is one thing that never stops — even Hitler will die of a second — and that is time. On and on it goes.

Before one knows, hours, days — years have gone by.

But there must be no reason for regret or worry. The thought that this minute, this hour, day or year shall never come to us again should spur us to renewed effort to master the task at hand — to make it count for something in its relation to the months, days and years yet to come.

No one is dead earnest time is only a medium of co-operation into which we try to be master's. Success is not always the result of effort.

But before one knows, even the most important tasks have given way to time, and left us with so much undone — unattempted!

A Lift For Living

Religion Gives a Fuller Life

By RALPH W. SOCKMAN

Some time ago I met my friend, Robert Goodrich, minister of the First Methodist Church of Dallas. He handed me a card with his name on it. I thought it was his calling card. But underneath his name was this question, "What does a man miss by being a Christian?" And below that line was the word "over." I turned the card over. There was just one word on the other side—"Hell." I thought that was a pretty good Texan way of telling the basic truth!

Actually all that a Christian misses if he follows Christ are the hellish things of life. To be sure, the good things in life have to be paid for in advance. That sometimes seems hard. But the bad things are paid for afterward — and usually in dismal installments of remorse.

Christ said, "I am come that they might have life and have it abundantly." He helps us to get more out of our bodies but not by following our first impulses. Easy self-indulgence soon exhausts our thrills. If we take what we want when we want it, the time comes when we no longer want what we take. Christ would have us discipline our bodies like an athlete. He makes us more fit and able to live a more vital life.

LIFE IN GENERAL

He also alerts our mind to so much that we are missing. We live today in a society of increasing specialization. We immerse ourselves in our own occupations in order to get ahead. Thus we come to know our own fields but we often become too busy to lift our eyes to the general patterns of living. The result of such specialization is, as Alfred Noyes has said, that we are misled by small clever minds. We know our own subjects but not life in general.

One of religion's important functions is to stand where the specialties meet and lift people's thinking from their lines of work "to see life steadily and see it whole."

Some people think that to be religious means to harrow one's life. Actually it is a means to broaden it.

If there be any reader who thinks of religion as narrow, may I just tear a leaf from a minister's diary to illustrate his typical day? In the morning he met with a board of directors deciding on some gifts of money to colleges, churches and students. Next came an interview with a committee which is founding a religious organization. Then a conference.

Following that was an hour of letter writing to correspondents who had asked advice on all sorts of life situations. Then came a visit from an anguished father requesting aid for a boy caught in the net of the law and now confined. After that came some problems confronting our city churches. Next a representative of the World Council of Churches reported on the work being asked for stricken areas among refugees. The last interview was to arrange a wedding.

TOUCHES MANY AREAS

I have indulged in this personal account in order to point out how, in one brief day, the Christian faith touches almost every area of human interest.

Moreover, Christ gives us the right attitude toward the things we are missing. We try to explain what we are missing by putting more things into ourselves. We eat too much in order to get new thrills of taste. We run too much in order to cram more excitement into our days. We spoil the enjoyment of our thirties and forties trying to get the rewards that our fathers found in their fifties and sixties.

We do not find the full rich life by trying to stuff things into ourselves. (I found that out when, in a day I once ate too many peanuts.) When will we learn the gospel truth: we can find what we are missing by putting ourselves into projects of much larger scope than ourselves?

A middle-aged physician once said to the late Dean Sperry of Harvard that it had taken him half his life to learn the secret of living. Throughout his early professional labors he had been trying to make something of himself. At last he had discovered that the joy of living comes from forgetting oneself in one's work and service.

Truly he that loseth sight of himself in God's service finds himself — and also what he has been missing.

The Miracle of Praise

By ALMA MASON

A dear old lady, who had been active in club and church work all her life, was asked how she had met and defeated personal criticism. With a grin she said, "If ever I thought anyone uttered words which could indicate a sting to hurt me, I always stopped speaking, looked at and searchingly at that person and asked right out just what she meant. If there was any mischief afoot, it scattered there and then; if not, I could rest sure a hurt that did not exist."

Henry Ward Beecher said — "Life would be unendurable, a hunt if a man were obliged to turn down all the meanderings, falsehoods and insinuations which are uttered against him."

How easy it is to praise our friends and associates. How rewarding it is. How sadly the world is in need of the balm and healing benefits — its rewards of stimulated endeavor and loving gratitude.

When we, pat a disgruntled competitor on the back; when we stop to commend a friend who has suddenly lost his grip on his faith in his belief in his fellows we forge the links of a magic, golden chain. In these we hearten in turn will hearten others.

Praise does not spring from sitting in judgment on others. Thoreau said: "Each man can interpret well only that experience only by sitting in judgment on his own." When we have searched our own hearts and straightened out our own lives, we will deserve and receive the praise we need to merit out to others.

Praise, like love, is a magic potion. It is the cool, sparkling cup of the lives of others and flow back abundantly to us and scatter our own sorrows and frustrations.

Praise is a magic wand which may be used to scatter and disintegrate carcasm enmity, jealousy and bitterness. After it has been lavishly used in the spirit of brotherly love it can be tucked close to the heart of the giver and there will warm and cheer personal faith in God and man.

I sent a stinging word your way
Tied with the cord of hate;
I sent it wrapped in jealousy
To rest within your gate.

I thought it would complete its work
And slowly sink from sight
But it linked with bad companions
And spread all through the night.

It spread and left a path of shame
To grieve me evermore
And stole back at the break of day
To haunt my cottage door.

I turned it into loving praise
And sent it on its way;
Then, lo! a golden sun came out
And shone all shining rays.

Hope, faith and love and happiness
Trooped from your door to mine
And brought a sample of your smile
That I had caused to shine.

I found the smile so beautiful
I threw it far and wide;
When summer came a million
smiles
Bloomed o'er the countryside.

WEDDING

MORTON — RAY

A pretty wedding was solemnized in Salem United Church, Milford, on Saturday, April 1st, at 1.30 p.m., when the Rev. H. Ellwood Sherk of Ivanhoe, assisted by the Rev. J. Morton of Marmora, united in marriage Margaret Rose Ray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Ray of R.R. 1 Harold, to William Elmer Morton, son of Mrs. Morton of Camp Belford, and the late Mrs. Morton. Easter lilies adorned the chancel rail.

During the ceremony the wedding music was played by the church organist, Mrs. Sylvanus Hagerman.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Mr. Arnold Ray, was lovely in a ballerina-length gown of Chantilly lace in three tiers, over satin, designed with a princess fitted bodice and her veil was in matching material enhanced with a finely scalloped headdress, set with baby seed pearls. She carried a white Bible crested with red roses.

The maid of honour, Miss Lois Ray of Belleville, niece of the bride, was dressed in blue organza over taffeta in ballerina-length and carried a bouquet of pink carnations.

Mr. Earnie Ray of R.R. 1 Harold, brother of the bride, attended the bridegroom, and the ushers were Mr. Allan Parger of Stirling and Mr. Edward Sleeman of Campbellford, brothers-in-law of the bridegroom.

The reception was held in the church dining hall which was decorated with pink and white streamers and Easter lilies. The bride's table was appointed in damask, centred with a three-tiered wedding cake and flanked with silver candelabra with pink and white streamers and the bridal bouquets.

The bride's mother, who received, chose a dress of navy blue lace with contrasting accessories. Her corsage was of pink carnations.

For the honeymoon to Niagara Falls, Detroit and points west, the bride chose a lilac colored embossed suit with white accessories and corsage of yellow baby 'mums.

Guests were present from Madoc, Arden, Oshawa, Campbellford, Stirling, Ivanhoe and Rochester, N.Y.

Prior to her marriage the bride was, the recipient of numerous useful gifts at a miscellaneous shower held by Mrs. Ed Golden and Mrs. Roy Finch and a kitchen shower by Mrs. Ross Ray and Mrs. Carl Ray.

The bride and bridegroom will reside at Springbrook.

Lady D. Macmillan's Visit Will Be Homecoming

By E. MOTHERWELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA(CP) — It will be a homecoming for Lady Dorothy Macmillan when she crosses the threshold of Government House here Sunday.

The British prime minister's wife, her four sisters and three brothers brought gaiety — and romance — to the stately mansion, official residence of Canada's governors-general.

They lived there while their late father, the Duke of Devonshire, was Governor - General from 1916 to 1921.

Skating parties, picnics and sleigh rides are remembered by the Duke of Devonshire's family held by long-time Ottawa residents.

Lady Dorothy, just turned 16 when she arrived, is recalled as a raven - haired beauty with flashing dark eyes.

"You would describe her as a person with spirit," said Mrs. Allan Keefer of Ottawa, whose husband is the grandchildren, Hon. Thomas MacKay, both Governors-General from 1935. He named his home Rideau Hall after helping in construction of the Rideau Canal.

Gamma Mu Will Observe Founder's Day

On March 31st a meeting of Gamma Mu Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi was held at the home of Mrs. G. She, Catherine St., with vice-president Mrs. E. James taking charge. Records and secretary Mrs. Howard Nettleton read the minutes of the last meeting stating that no further nominations were approved and that the slate of officers for the coming year had been accepted as read. Mrs. John Pringle had reported ten members willing to start a new Exemplar Chapter in Belleville and that a meeting would be held in the near future to form an executive. Mrs. James announced the proposed plan for a Founder's Day banquet to be held at Hotel Quinte on May 1 with all members and their families attending. Members indicated their willingness to support this social event.

It was also announced that plans were being completed for the Scholarship Fund which would be a help to worthy girls in Belleville chapters, to be awarded annually to a high school student; and to Loyalist House, the Y.M.C.A. had requested assistance for its proposed telephone answering service. The slate circulated to be signed by members, will be given their time.

Tickets for the Black and Gold Ball were made available through Mrs. Riley Kelly and many members indicated that they would be attending this event.

CULTURAL PROGRAMS

Two cultural programs were presented at the conclusion of the business meeting. Mrs. Alan Hall's topic was entitled "Tools for the Art of Life . . . Speech" in which she traced the origin and history of words; made first attempts at picture writing and his later efforts at developing symbols. Mrs. Hall also pointed out the enduring beauty of words as illustrated in poetry and prose, quoting from works by Walter de la Mare, Shelley and several modern American poets.

The second program of the afternoon was given by Mrs. John O'Flynn, entitled "The Workings of the United Nations" to illustrate her topic "Tools for the Art of Life . . . Action". Mrs. O'Flynn presented a breakdown of the structure of the United Nations, giving names of all illustrated chart. She pointed out many of the functions of member organizations and stressed the importance of their participation in such fields as agriculture, health and education.

INTERESTING UN SIDELIGHTS

Many interesting sidelights of the UN were presented to stress the importance of maintaining this body as an effective means of action in today's world.

A social hour followed with refreshments being served by the hostess Mrs. Sine, assisted by Mrs. Heasman and Mrs. L. Woodland.

Last Tuesday evening members of Gamma Mu Chapter were joined by several former members for a social evening in the form of an auction sale. This event was well attended and thoroughly enjoyed as members and guests bid freely for the many miscellaneous articles.

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the sale.

Women's Activities

The W.A. ladies of Centre St. Church will hold their regular monthly meeting in the church room on Wednesday afternoon, with a good attendance of members and two visitors.

Mrs. Ross Longhurst opened the meeting with this thought for the day: "Trouble, like the fire that straightens out when you advance".

Mrs. P. Schamerhorn read the Scripture from Rev. 21-1-5.

The topic taken by Mrs. Ida Hudgins was "All Things New", saying in part: these are the days of long sun shine and budding leaves; time of all living things around new, where so late, all nature seemed lying hopeless in the grip of winter. The end of winter death has never tried the earth but it has failed. In Alexander's poet Robert Frost, tells 'Death always fails'. The promise of God stands forever.

"So we must lift our hearts in songs of gladness to match the springtime. We live in such a springtime of the soul that the exile, John on Patmos, heard the quiet voice from heaven saying 'The tabernacle of God is with men', and in the light of such a glorious vision that Jesus gave his beatitudes that would be His followers, the Church Universal.

"There is a note of urgency in the Masters words as He views them, 'these also I must bring', he declares as He looks forward to the glorious day when there shall be one fold and one shepherd'. Perhaps we can catch some glimpse of His vision, during the month of His eagerness to gather suffering humanity into the fold of God's love and the brotherhood of man.

"We cannot but be sadly aware of how much suffering there is in the world today. But we must remember The Church holds the magic of spring in her heart, that can sweep away winter and let the world meet the sunshine of God's love.

"Joyce Cary, the English novelist declares: 'In the sight of deeds of love and kindness between man and man, makes belief in a loving God inevitable for anyone who thinks, or feels at all. Inevitable like our church is a mighty army circling the globe.

"We can go forward into this month's work with renewed faith, in God's love."

Under business, Mrs. Wood treasurer read the financial report. The ladies are holding a spring tea this month, Mrs. W. Schamerhorn gave the Sunshine report.

This - - - and That

By HARRIET STEVENS

We are not sure whether this will turn out to be a preparation for Library Week or to put forward the belief that we take our newspapers too much for granted. How many people, we wonder, actually glance through a daily paper or two for a few special items and only leave a note at the best of our contemporary writing and thought unnoticed?

In an article on reading by the well-known pollster, Dr. George Gallup, he says that the regular reading of newspapers and magazines is equally as important as the reading of books. It is interesting to note, that he does not stress "good" books; the important thing is to read at the moment reader may but surely cultivates a taste for the "good" books.

His advice to parents is to encourage their children to read. Persons who read more will write better, speak better, think better. And it goes without saying that they know more. As a result of a knowledge put to use they can think better about the present and future".

PLEASURE READING

Dr. Gallup also points out that parents who think their schools are deficient can remedy the situation for their children by a carefully planned reading program. He also goes on to say that anybody who wishes to keep himself well informed and to improve his lot should spend at least two hours each day in reading.

A good part of this should be newspaper reading, especially editorials and articles. Everyday some millions of copies of daily newspapers bring news and information to the world's peoples. In this part of the world we take our newspapers too much for granted. Since these facilities are unequally shared by continents and countries.

Those countries which have the least economic resources also have the poorest in communication facilities. Europeans buy 38% of the world's daily papers, North Americans 25%, while African's, Asians and South Americans together, buy only 24% even though these three together contain nearly 1900 million people, or 66% of the world's population.

From a survey of communications comes this statement: "The communications media are the direct successors of the signal fire on the hill, the drum in the forest, the pigeon in the air, the dispatch sent by ship or coach or train of all the ages. Indeed, by which people have sought always to inform and communicate with one another." Another part says: "Today, media are the chief source of purpose of keeping people informed of what they do and how they live; but they also have a second function, which has permeated the whole communications industry — namely that of educating. It is now easy to decide where mass media are a staggering 64 nationalities from every corner of the globe.

The harbor dominates the character of the city. The Caribbean pokes its finger through it like a Dutch canal before penetrating the mainland of Santa Anna.

Here both sides the pastel houses stand sentinel on immaculate Dutch streets. The channel is spanned by a swing bridge; pontoon bridge called "Queen Emma" which swings aside periodically for ships. Though it lifts up traffic to beat the band, no one seems to see it replaced. After all, there's always the ferry boat which is the most satisfying sightseeing tours and certainly the cheapest.

How the ferry came to be free is a story too. They used to charge a penny cent if you had shoes on, but every canny Dutch man who did took them off.

At the entrance to the harbor, built on the ramparts of an old fort where rusting cannon still looks out to sea, is the hotel in the centre that accommodates ship collision insurance. Sitting on the patio overlooking Caracasbaai and watching the ships go by so close you can almost touch them is easily the island's chief spectator sport. It's a dazzling sight, particularly when a warship goes by, its crew in dress whites and standing at attention in salute.

DEAL WITH HOUSEWIVES

Each day sailboats from Venezuela come into the harbor laden with produce and fish. Usually canvas awnings made from flour bags, they tie up and do a haggling business with the housewives on a tightly packed strip on concrete wharf between the water and the running street traffic.

What with the rampaging shoppers off the cruise boats and the shoppers at the bum boats, Willemstad constantly seethes in a hubbub of boiling bargaining.

Though the island is an autonomous part of the United Kingdom of the Netherlands, a so many foreign strains have been woven into it over the centuries that it has a character all its own. The language is Papiamentu, a jargon of Spanish, Dutch, Portuguese spoken nowhere else but on the nearby islands of Aruba and Bonaire.

One of the most vigorous elements are the Portuguese Jewish families who for three centuries have held great sway over the business and social life of the island. The Jewish Mikve Israel Synagogue, with its great chandeliers and its sand floor symbolic of the wanderings in the desert, is the oldest in the Western Hemisphere. Its congregation itself is 300 years old.

One of these enterprising families is the house of Senior, which converted the island's most lucrative crop into the world-famed Curacao orange liqueur.

Orange flavored and orange tinted, this domain of Senior's is open to all who is understandably one of the world's most colorful islands.

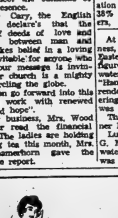
Easter Story Given at WMS Meeting

The Woman's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church, held its Easter thank offering service on Wednesday afternoon, president Mrs. Bertrand, welcomed the members and also the many visitors.



Mrs. Hubbs presided at the piano, Mrs. Spafford at the organ, and had charge of devotional.

Scripture was taken from New Testament translation of John 28.

Mrs. Spafford spoke on "Jesus Means to Us", Adding in part: "To some it means new clothes, or friends to come to call; but the real meaning of Easter is the Cross, the symbol for a social degredation for one to be put to death, but it was turned into the gift of love, hope and sacrifice for a lost world. Even the tomb could not stand when the Lord, so Easter stands for salvation. He must be the first on our lives." Hymn "Rejoice the Lord is King," was sung.

Mrs. C. Holmes thanked the speaker, Mrs. Morley Davidson sang, "Were You There?" The meeting closed with, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross," and the benediction.

The president invited all to stay for a cup of tea, and a social half hour.

Oddities and Contradictions Grace This West Indian Port

By Shirley and Bob Sloane

Curacao, Netherlands Antilles — The story goes that there was a colonial governor here who suffered from headaches, and the surest way for him to get one was to open his window, look and look at the white buildings across the street glaring in the sun.

So he outlawed white buildings and to this day there isn't one in Willemstad.

Thus the visitor's first sight of Curacao's capital by day is apt to be a little startling. In the bright tropic air, pink and lavender and orange white buildings stand around the harbor etched against the bright sky their 18th century gables and dormers looking like illustrations from Hans Brinker.

But this is only one of the unusual precautions to use the senses in this whimsical colonial confection. There are extraordinary laws and contradictions that setting them down is a task of towering difficulty.

It is about the most un-tropical paradise in the Caribbean. The communications are as much as New Mexico in both distance and difficulty. Rain and mesas covered with cactus and scrub brush poke up through pink and sand dunes. Oil tanks and refineries further mar the landscape, and developers delight in discovering sites that are untypical.

DELIGHTFUL CLIMATE

But the climate, dry and breeze-swept, is delightful. The ugly oil refineries lit up at night and viewed from the heights of Fort Nassau resemble a fairy city floating in the skyline.

There is no oil on the island, because of its proximity to Venezuela it is one of the major oil refining and transshipping centres of the hemisphere. Willemstad's harbor is one of the finest in the world and is usually the fourth largest volume of tonnage. Among the 100,000 souls are a staggering 64 nationalities from every corner of the globe.

The harbor dominates the character of the city. The Caribbean pokes its finger through it like a Dutch canal before penetrating the mainland of Santa Anna.

Stories of Famous Hymns

By Horace B. Powell

CHRIST AROSE

Low in the grave He lay—
Jesus my Savior!
Waiting the coming day—
Jesus my Lord.

Vainly they watch His bed—
Jesus my Savior!
Vainly they seal the dead—
Jesus my Lord!

Death cannot keep his prey—
Jesus my Savior!
He tore the bars away—
Jesus my Lord.

Up from the grave He arose,
With a mighty triumph o'er His foes;
He arose a Victor from the dark domain,
And lives forever with His saints to reign.
He arose! He arose! Hallelujah! Christ arose!

Nearly every religious denomination has pronounced its share of the world's great preachers and hymn writers, and in the Baptist list there is no greater name than that of the pastor, Robert Lowry.

Seventy-five years ago he was serving one of his first pastorates in Brooklyn, New York, and it was while engaged in this ministry that he wrote his popular Easter hymn, "Christ Arose." After turning out the words of the song he set his own stanzas to music.

Dr. Lowry was still pastor of the Brooklyn church when he wrote words and music for another famous hymn, "Shall we Gather At the River?" He also composed tunes for many hymns besides those which he himself penned. One of his Brooklyn parishioners Mrs. Annie Hawks, whose talent for writing he praised and encouraged during his ministry there was the author, years later, of the popular hymn, "I Need Thee Every Hour."

Long after he left Brooklyn, Dr. Lowry continued to correspond with Mrs. Hawks about her writing. One day she sent him a letter containing some verses which she asked that he set to music. Those stanzas found today in every hymnal, were:

"I need Thee every hour,
Most gracious Lord;
No tender voice like Thine
Can peace afford.

I need Thee, O I need Thee;
Every hour I need Thee;
O bless me now, my Savior,
I come to Thee!"

VIEW-FINDERS

"To those . . . who fire our imagination and hunger of the view."—Sidney and Allyn Bloome.

Our series ends today, with two view-finders.

One (whose home is in another Ontario city), is indirectly connected with us, since she is a Belleville lady's niece, in her mide-30's, at present doing post-graduate work at the University of London in England. In visiting her every day and success in her work, we offer special thanks to her aunt, for this revealing excerpt, (from a letter to her) of how young students seek their lives, regardless of race, color or creed with international, "wonderful friendships I have made here."

"I have two or three friends whom I hope to keep for life," she continues. "And I hope I will always keep in touch with some of the others. It has been wonderful meeting people from other countries with whom I feel so very much in common. Robin is my English friend. She is 19 and adorable. She has been very, very good to me. Anne, Marie, are my friend from Vienna; very lively and and loves music. We have a lot of fun together and she has a fiance at home, so we have lots to talk about.

"Malahat is a Russian computer student actually she is from Tagikistan, Stalinabad, and has left her husband and two small children with them in order to study English here, for a year. She is very cute (a Canadian word, but the only one which will describe her).

"Sylvia is a Negro girl, from the Cameroons, very humble and very attractive. She has been very good to me as well and I feel a great affinity for her. Heidi is from Israel and a real Arab beauty. She flashes her eyes and moves in a sensuous fashion. She is utterly gorgeous. Nina is the secretary at Nutford House. She is a Russian background, but her parents left Russia and went to Cairo after the revolution. And Vivlette is a Jewish girl, also from Cairo, but with an American boy friend. So, you see, we have a very international group. It's wonderful."

Our last view-finding concerns Pte. L.A. and Mrs. Bonnie McNaughton, stationed for some time now in Belgium (where their baby was born) whom Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hinchey, 233 Bridge Street, have visited several times recently and with good reason. Mrs. McNaughton is their daughter; Frances Jean, who is widely known here. We are indebted to Mr. and Mrs. Finkle for the following, from their own personal collection of Belgium, presented by Mrs. Finkle, with the written:

"Frances lives in a village in Belgium just over the French border. It is called Mezx - Devant - Virton. In France and in this part of Belgium, the farmers live in villages and go out to their farms during the day. This is the sort of village Mezx is. The country is beautiful, rolling country with wide open spaces, dotted with these villages. The houses are built of brick narrow and roadways lined with trees. This section of Europe is the oldest part which makes it historically very interesting.

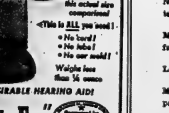
"Frances lives in a house built by a Belgian doctor for their hosses, it is made of sand-colored stone. Her house was built since the war and is quite modern. She has electricity and running water. Native women take their laundry to a central wash-house that has running water and great flat cement so-called tubs. Not much like the modern wash laundries in Belleville. Most of Frances' table supplies are bought at the base, because here she can get packaged and tinned goods the same as in Canada. The natives have none of these things.

"There is garbage collection; a little one-horse cart. No one has much garbage to collect. Everyone has his own garden

Fashion's Flare

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

The flair this season is for the flare, and this line is evident more in every phase of fashion.



It certainly is endorsed by the designer of this coat of cotton ottoman, nice for wear with any of the new dresses. It has belled half-sleeves, low-placed pockets and it takes a smartly flared line from the narrow shoulders.

and they all have chickens and rabbits. When you shop in a native shop, you must never be in a hurry. Everyone in the shop expects you to shake hands, both coming and going.

"The Belgians are very friendly and very interested in Canadians and especially how Canadian baby is cared for. They always have time to play with a baby. The rush and confusion of life in America has not caught up with them yet. At night you rarely see a light in the houses. If they have a light on, it is behind large wooden shutters that are pulled down each night; perhaps for protection, perhaps for warmth. They have lived in the midst of two wars, and I think they feel a need for protection. During the war the German army marched through this village. Frances has met some of the men who were there and the quiet of this country village.

In closing it would seem that the growing scenes presented in this series reveal evidences that young Belleville view-finders will ever remain alert and active to the wonderful experiences that are theirs abroad. We wish them one and all — good view-finding!

THE FAMILY COUNCIL

EDITOR'S NOTE: The Family Council consists of a judge, a psychiatrist, three clergymen, three editors and a women's editor. Each article is a summary of a problem, discussed presented to the Council. The Council deals with problems, major and minor, encountered by guidance counsellors and social workers.

Mrs. B. D. — The doctor wants him to get psychiatric help in a hospital.

Hugh — I am afraid if I go in, I'll never get out.

Mrs. B. D. — Hugh is my cousin and, since he has no one else in the east here, I'm his next-of-kin. He's only 36, but he looks and acts as though his best years are behind him. In the past year he's been going downhill physically and emotionally.

Six years ago his one big love affair went south. He buried himself in his job and withdrew from social contacts. Although he visited my husband and me frequently, I could never get him to parties or to dances. He lives alone in a residence room.

Lately he's been treated by our doctor for a combination of symptoms: acute insomnia, high blood pressure and indigestion. Two weeks ago he was referred to a psychiatrist who says he's acutely depressed and should be treated in a hospital for a couple of weeks. After that he can be helped by psychoanalysis.

But Hugh hit the ceiling at the word "hospital". He says he'll take a cruise instead and be okay.

Hugh N. — I'm ready to agree that my physical aches and pains may very well be the heavy stuff. I ought to can't seem to shake off. But it'd rather try another psychiatrist who won't insist that I enter a hospital. Or, maybe, I can take this with an ocean voyage, or a month in Florida. But my cousin wan's me to check into the hospital and have it over with.

Well, that's exactly what I'm afraid of — that it'll be over with forever, so far as my chances of living are concerned! Once they get you into those places they forget about you and you rot. I ought to be able to be helped on the outside, like others.

The psychiatrist said I need some preliminary conditioning before I can work with him and that this can only be obtained in a hospital. He mentioned tranquillizers and electric shock treatments.

But I'm not that sick! I don't need the men in the white coats. I'm not a psycho, just a sad sack!

The Council—Hugh is laboring under some old-fashioned bugaboos about psychiatric treatment in hospitals. Gone for the most part are the "snake-pits" and locked wards. In fact more and more of our general hospitals have secret psychiatric patients on the same basis as they do surgical and medical cases.

The old and enormous mental hospital may soon be an anachronism in this area, as new ones are being built. Nowadays, a man like Hugh should be able to sign in at a general hospital in his vicinity. Of 120 large general institutions (over 500 beds), 90 per cent now admit patients for psychiatric treatment.

To hearten Hugh further, the emphasis is now on short-term therapy. The doctors are as eager to get him out, and on to outpatient care, as they to get out himself. The usual procedure includes a quick, intensive attack on the disabling phase of the illness, and then discharge and transfer to the case-load of a clinic or private psychiatrist. The average stay is three or four weeks.

It's too bad that the general public, Hugh and Mrs. D. included, don't know of the drastic shifts in hospital treatment of mental and emotional disabilities. In addition to the rexazines mentioned above there are "day passes" for keeping a patient on his job, and "night passes" to permit him time at home with his family during the treatment period.

The good word for Hugh is that he can go in and out of the hospital and be treated as a matter-of-factly for mental illness as he would be for physical illness is one of the most curable ailments.

Women's Activities

TRINITY UNITED W.M.S.

MADOC — The Easter thank offering meeting of Trinity United W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. Lorne Bonter on Wednesday afternoon with a splendid attendance of W.M.S. members.

Miss Holmes, president, was in charge and extended greetings to all.

Several items of business and clever sketch. Special mention were announced. The Mrs. Jean Scott (Irene Scott-Luminis) to Toward WMS was announced and a rally at Marmora on April 25th. Plans were made for several of the members to go.

Mrs. Empey explained the circular sent out by the United Church Women, in connection of women's church groups.

Mrs. Bessey offered prayer remembering the missionary, Miss Bessie Franks.

MEMORIAL SERVICE

Mrs. Ken Gordon was in charge of the worship service including an Easter program used by all W. M. Societies. The Bible story was from Matthew 28:1-10.

Mrs. Gordon read a prepared paper for the late Mrs. (Rev.) Coulter, mother of Mrs. R. Jackson, "An Easter Thought" that the late Mrs. Coulter gave some years ago when with the WMS. Following this, Mrs. Gordon gave a commentary on the Easter story with readings by three of the members. Easter hymns were used throughout the service.

Mrs. Milley was in charge of the worship and read the story "The Highway of Life," interspersed with the singing of a most familiar hymn, "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross." Concluding a worthwhile program and meeting Mrs. Miller gave the "Flower Quiz" and a pleasant social hour followed.

Members also had a bake sale at the close.

Readers' Saturday Column

As conducted by Mary Moore

QUESTION:

I am a girl, eleven years of age. I read your column every night and have tried almost all your recipes. Probably like other girls I like baking cookies and cakes. When I was over at my friend's house my grandmother gave me a cookie (home made). It was dark brown, soft and partly. I thought these cookies were delicious. I have been unable to find this recipe so I decided to write to you. The cookies was like a chocolate chip one, and I think it tasted spicy.—Shirley M.

ANSWER:

For an eleven-year-old girl Sandy, your handwriting and spelling and letter are exceptionally good. I am delighted to give you the following and hope to hear from you again often as you progress with your cooking.

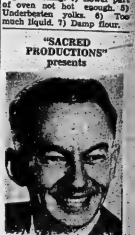
LAZY DAISY CAKE:

(Courtesy Dinty).

Two eggs, 1 cup sugar, 1 teaspoon vanilla, 1 cup sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup milk, 1 tablespoon butter, 3 tablespoons butter, 3 tablespoons cream, 2 tablespoons brown sugar, 2 tablespoons cream (I use evaporated milk), 1-3 cup coconut. Heat oven to 350 deg

Grease and flour an 8 x 8 x 2" pan. Beat eggs well, beat in sugar and vanilla, sift flour, baking powder and salt together or and stir in. Heat milk and 1 tablespoon butter together just to boiling point. Pour into batter and blend well. Pour into greased pan and bake about 35 minutes or until top springs back when touched lightly in the centre. Blend 3 tablespoons butter, brown sugar and cream in small saucepan. Put over moderate heat and let bubble together. Stir in cocoanut and spread on top of baked cake. Put low under broiler for 3 or 3 minutes to brown. (Hooray — No Icing).



Could you tell me why my pound cake has a heavy strip in it about the middle when everything is measured and mixed carefully and baked in a good oven . . . Dinty.

ANSWER:

Thank you Dinty for reminding us of and giving us this old speedy favorite.

When a cake has a soggy layer the cause may be: 1—Indiscriminating of ingredients. 3) Shortening too soft. 3) Not enough leavening. 4) Lower part of oven not hot enough. 5) Underbeaten yolks. 6) Too much liquid. 7) Damp flour.

MODERN MANNERS

Carolyn Hagner Shaw

I have recently attended several club and association banquets or dinners. All of these were held in supposedly high-class hotels. Why I have a question for a change!

Why is it necessary for the waiters who serve at these functions to act as if they were bulls in a china shop? Is it necessary to be general procedure to slamming the dishes around when changing courses. At the last one I went to, the noise was so loud that it precluded attempts to make conversation with your neighbor. Plates were crashed down on trays (the china must be made of iron) with a complete disregard for the members of the club and their guests.

Some of the waiters also dumped left-over food from the plates onto the trays before banging the dishes on top of the mixture. This accomplished two things. One, an unsightly pile of garbage that took away any appetite you may have had left. Two, small splashing of gravy, or what have you, invariably landed on those unfortunate enough to be sitting close by.

This kind of performance is unpardonable and certainly unnecessary. These actions keep up even when a club president is trying to make an announcement, or the special speaker is trying to make himself heard.

Another inexcusable habit these waiters have: When they come around to collect the fee(s) et stub that each diner is supposed to have, they usually are not only rude, but downright belligerent, when they ask you for it. Perhaps you've mislaid the stub in your purse. While you hunt around for it, a waiter's attitude too often is one of "no ticket, no lunch!" This can prove extremely embarrassing, particularly to a club member who may have several guests, some of them quite prominent.

It is beyond my comprehension why the management of these hotels allow such rudeness and complete disregard for the comfort of those attending these functions to continue. After all, the hotel makes money and the waiters receive generous tips. I think something should be done about this deplorable situation.

Why can't a reliable head waiter be put in charge to see that something is done to avoid and control this unpleasantness.

Successful Living

By Doris Clark

(A Canadian Social Worker Helps with Human Problems)

Girl Upset Over Loss of Father

DEAR DORIS:—Last year my husband died of cancer. There was money to carry us for a while but now I must find a job—I can type and do office work.

My youngest daughter, who is eight, is taking this all very hard. She and her daddy were great pals and she misses him so much I often find her crying. The idea of me going out to work upsets her all over again.

Sometimes she crawls into bed with me in the night and sobs herself to sleep. I hate to think of her coming home from school with no one here for an hour, even if the neighbor has said she will keep an eye on her. But what am I to do?—WIT'S END.

DORIS CLARK

DEAR WIT'S END:—You must feel lost without your husband and wanting to cry yourself sometimes, even as you comfort your little girl.

You are right to be concerned about the prospect of going out to work. Your daughter is too young (as well as too upset) to come home to an empty house. Even the law of Ontario says so when it specifies that no child under ten may be left alone in a house.

Until she is a little older you would be better off to apply for Mother's Allowance. This is a government allowance which has been set up for just such cases as yours. Your husband and you have been paying for it in your taxes over the years and it can tide you over now. (You could still earn a little, if the work you found could be done at home or during the time when you little girl was at school). Ask your local welfare department how to apply for this help.

DEAR DORIS:—I loved my wife when I married her, ten years ago. Now the whole thing looks different. I have met a girl who is in every way her opposite: tall and blonde, whereas my wife is short and dark; loves to read whereas my wife always wants to be going; understands family politics whereas my wife is not interested; enjoys family gatherings whereas my wife prefers to be buried in a cook book.

In short I am head over-heels in love with her. This is awful. I am a married man, a father of two. I hate the idea of divorce and don't think I have any right to one anyway. What do you think I should do.—DILEMMA.

DEAR DILEMMA:—You are in love with the novelty of this new personality. By nature we enjoy change. A woman feels the same way about a new hat, maple in a strange place, a boy joins the gym—and they are each refreshed with the change.

It's a little more serious and often less effective when it comes to changing wives. Marriages succeeds when two people have what it takes to live together and work together; and if you don't have it with one wife there is a high probability (according to statistics) that you won't have it with another.

Be glad your wife can read a cook book. Get her the change you and she needs. How long since you laughed together at a show or on a holiday? Or since you bought her a new hat? She may surprise you if you give her a new look—and I'll promise it won't give you a nightmare.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED WILSON

DUCK COURTSHIP

Spring is the season for lovers, be they human beings, beasts, or birds. Of all animals, some water birds put on the best show when courting. A colony of cormorants can be located by croakings and odor (esp. breeding season), and the western grebe has the most interesting courtship performance of any bird. But ducks are particularly given to spectacular courtships.

The wood duck is one of a number that capture our drakes in the southern, holiday resort and literally leads him to the territory that is set her heart on. Most ducks show their love by much head talking. At this period even scaups and ruddy ducks, at other times quite silent, are heard to give a duck.

COURTSHIP DISPLAY

The majority of ducks go in for the extremely delightful type of courtship display. Rivals outward males carry on an interesting ritual in flights before females. As some white males display winter visitors to Great Lakes, in springtime we may observe the more colorful males manoeuvres during courtship.

Here, too, Oddqueus may be seen — and heard — for these are noisy birds at courting time. The male, one of few dressed up for this occasion, has a bubbling gurgle and a fairly mob one particular female. They chase one another in circles at high speed, and often land on the water in a dispersed formation, view for a few seconds, reappearing some distance away to repeat the chase. The flight may take them out of sight. Then back they come to the water.

SPECTACULAR ANTICS

Other ducks display on the water rather than in the air. Many Goldeneyes winter near Belleville and their courtship antics are able to witness their spectacular spring courtship activities. These begin as early as February. The drake makes many advances, lifting up his feathers, he throws his head forward, up, and back to rest on the back that it actually touches his tail. Then jerking his head to a normal position he launches himself forward, showing off his bright white breast.

The striking courtship display of the male ruddy duck is somewhat similar. He circles about his loved one on the water, bobbing and bowing. Meaning, to look very important, he puffs out his breast and tilts it somewhat forward to meet his tilted back head. His bill also efforts are appreciated by his beloved, but we think him quite plump after making a mistake, because now he looks more tubby than ever.

Will Stage UIC Census Next Month

By STEWART MacLEOD
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON (CP)—Thousands of census-takers will swoop down on British homes in May with massive questionnaires that should, for the first time, provide a detailed picture of Britain's population.

It will be the most ambitious census ever undertaken. Apart from mere population statistics, it will give a picture of emigration, the standards of education, the type of jobs that are difficult to find, the number of hospital beds needed in the future, and the increase in the divorce rate.

The last census, confined mainly to population figures, marital statistics and the number of people employed in various industries, was taken in 1951. At that time, Britain, including Northern Ireland, had 50,383,326 people within his borders. Today the population is creeping up to the 52 million expects to find about that figure.

STUDY EDUCATION

The questionnaires, strictly confidential documents, will ask all the usual questions about age, sex, marriage and employment. And then they will turn on to educational qualifications, whether that education is being fully utilized and if not, why not.

They will ask the birthplace of parents so that migration trends can be studied. They will also ask a series of employment questions to find out whether can be learned about the future labor prospects for the country.

A spokesman at the registrar-general's office says the census will provide the most complete guide for town planners, medical research workers, public utilities and manufacturers. It might also give social workers a clearer picture of the nation.

SHOWS DIVORCE RATE

The 1951 census, for instance, showed that 46 per cent of British women between 20 and 24 were married, compared with about 25 per cent in 1931. It also showed that 62 in every 10,000 persons had been divorced, compared with 11 in every 10,000 in 1931.

Everyone is required by law to answer the questions and if he refuses to answer discretion information to anyone outside the registrar-general's office he can be fined £100 or sent to two years in jail. Once the names, addresses and statistics of individuals reach the office they are fed into an electronic computer and identities obliterated.

A preliminary report with population figures in England will be published about two months after census day. Other sections of the report will be published over the next four years.

An Electrical Check-up Can Nip Trouble

By EUGENE B. MELMOE

Even the car owner who feels there is one big complicated mystery under the hood can spot some conditions which forecast trouble. This applies, for example, to the electrical system, and in particular to the wiring of the battery cables, connections at the battery, distributor cap, coil and spark plugs.

First examine the insulation. Look for signs of cuts, cracks, crevices, soil or dead spots. Check cables for corrosion formation and looseness at the battery terminals. This is a very common trouble, yet so dangerous. Second, loose connections at the coil and spark plugs often are at fault, too.

The spark plug cable ends at the distributor cap must be fully inserted in the socket, or otherwise, corrosion, burned contacts and poor engine performance result.

• • •

W. J. asks: "I brought a new battery and while installing it the other day, I accidented the number, 100, stamped on it. What does this mean?"

(A) Battery capacity in ampere hour capacity . . . that is, the battery could deliver one ampere of current per hour for a total of 100 hours.

• • •

N. M. writes: "My car is a '56 Meteor with standard transmission. My brother disclaims it needs adjustment because it runs all right. My park position unless the hand brake is on, too. Is he right or wrong?"

(A) Right. The car should hold with the transmission in Park, even with brakes off.

Mrs. D. R. asks: "I paid $42 for a brake job, yet a man in my office says it only cost him $8. I've been dealing with this garage for 12 years and never had reason to doubt their work or their prices."

(A) Obviously your fellow-employee had his brakes relined only at the price. A complete brake job includes inspection (and replacement, where necessary) of wheel cylinders, master cylinder, brake fluid, brake drums, etc., and naturally costs more.

Chihawks "Slight" Favorites Tonight

Wings Hit By Injuries

By W. R. WHEATLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

DETROIT (CP)—This hit-and-run Stanley Cup final—you no more than hit one town when you run for the other—comes up for its second showing tonight, marked by an injury pattern that has brushed Chicago Black Hawks only lightly in the National Hockey League's post-season playoffs.

The opposition has been the heavy sufferer and key men the victims.

Detroit Red Wings, losers 3-2 to the Hawks Thursday in the first game of the final in Chicago, are already sorely hit. They have lost goaltender Terry Sawchuk and defenceman Marcel Pronovost for the second game.

In the Hawks' recent semi-final against Montreal Canadiens, the breaks likewise didn't go against Chicago when Montreal's top scorer, Bernie Geoffrion, suffered an injured knee.

SHOW THEIR STUFF

This doesn't take anything away from the Hawks, who have shown a wholesome ability to outskate and outcheck the opposition under pressure in 60.

On that basis, alone, they'll be slight favorites tonight to take a 2-0 lead in the best-of-seven final.

"We have an honest bunch of guys who are willing to do their best all the time," Hawks coach Rudy Pilous said Friday night.

"We had a rugged series against Montreal and I guess there won't be any let-down. We had it when we took up a 3-0 lead at home Thursday and then all but let the Red Wings catch us. But we still had enough to win and I think we can pull out a win again tonight."

Both clubs arrived here Friday by plane—the Hawks several hours after the Red Wings.

Coach Sid Abel of the Wings pulled his squad out to Toledo, Ohio, 60 miles away, to their usual hideway hotel when engaged in the playoffs. Pilous marched his troupe into a downtown Detroit hotel.

HURT IN OPENER

Both Sawchuk and Pronovost were injured in the series opener — Sawchuk suffering a painful shoulder injury and Pronovost more damage to an already-injured ankle.

Hank Bassen, who shared the Detroit netminding job with Sawchuk all season, took over after the first period and held the Hawks scoreless. He will be in the nets again tonight.

To help out the defence corps in Pronovost's absence, the Wings have called up Lou Marcon from Edmonton Flyers of the Western Hockey League. Marcon played with Detroit part of the 1956-60 and 1959-60 seasons.

Pilous was a bit skeptical when told the Hawks had announced that Sawchuk and Pronovost definitely would be out for tonight's game.

WOULD HURT THEM

"I'll admit, though, that if Pronovost is out his loss will hurt the Red Wings. You just can't drop an all-star defenceman. And we were hurt, and don't think anybody can push up the slack with Pronovost gone.

"Anyway, I'm not going to be fooled either about any Detroit weakness so long as the Red Wings have Gordie Howe. That guy alone can ruin you."

Along with the injury problem, Abel was worried about the failure of Norm Ullman to score. Ullman was high scorer for the Wings during the regular season with 28 goals but did not score in five games of the cup semi-final and one of the final.

Defeat Hull 3-2

Beavers Square Series

KITCHENER (CP) — An overtime goal by relegated centre Dave Balon gave the Kitchener-Waterloo Beavers a 3-2 victory over Hull - Ottawa Canadiens Friday night and squared their best - of - seven Eastern Professional Hockey League semi-final at 3-3.

Balon pokechecked the puck away from Hull's Cliff Pennington at the Hull blue line and walked in to pick a corner for the winner at 2:47 of overtime. Balon suffered from a pulled hip muscle.

The Beavers came from within 44 seconds of elimination to tie the game when they scored the count at 19:16 of the third period. Ed Hockey flipped in a backhander with the Canadiens shorthanded after almost killing off a late penalty to John Gaubien.

All the goals in regulation time were scored with the opposition fighting off penalties.

Leo Rosnon gave the Beavers a lead in the second frame, after a scoreless opener, when he battled in a loose puck from a faceoff in Hull end at 16:03. Chuck Hamilton was serving a kneeing sentence at the time.

MAKES RECORD CONFER

In the third period Terry Gray and Bob Elliott counted for the visitors. Gray lifted in a rebound over Jack McCartan at 3:41 after Ronson had drawn a slashing penalty.

Canadiens went a head at 12:30 when Elliott caged a rebound at the goal crease with Leon Rochefort sidelined with a double-minor penalty. He drew charging minor and talked himself into a misconduct.

Referee Bert Squarek of 14 penalties. Majors were handed out to John Annable of Hull and Wayne Hall of Beavers after a brief fisticuffing session in the early minutes of the third period.

The game was halted by egg-throwing fans, one of whom was caught and ejected. Attendance was 3,472.

"Play Ball!"

Expect 300,000 To View Openers

By JOE REICHLER

NEW YORK (AP)—Some 300,000 baseball fans are expected to attend the nine openers when the major leagues open their 1961 season next week.

Washington, of the American League, gets the traditional lumps on the other clubs with a special inaugural at the United States capital Monday. The opposition will be Chicago's White Sox and a sellout crowd of 27,419 is expected to watch President Kennedy throw out the first ball before pitcher Dick Donovan of the new Senators opposes Early Wynn, the White Sox veteran.

All other teams, including the new Los Angeles Angels of the American League, get under way Tuesday. The largest crowd probably will be in Los Angeles where the National League's Dodgers will play Philadelphia Phillies under the lights before approximately 50,000.

The schedule, attendance and probable pitchers for Tuesday's games follow:

National League: St. Louis at Milwaukee, 45,000, Broglio vs. Spahn; Chicago at Cincinnati, 32,000, Hobbie vs. Purkey; Pittsburgh at San Francisco, 42,000, Friend vs. Jones; Philadelphia at Los Angeles, 50,000, Roberts vs. Drysdale.

American League: Minnesota at New York, 20,000, Ramos vs. Ford; Los Angeles at Baltimore, 45,000, Grba vs. Pappas; Kansas City at Boston, 20,000, Herbert vs. Monbouquette; Cleveland at Detroit, 40,000, Perry vs. Bunning.

TWO CLUBS ADDED

For the first time in history, the American League will deviate from its eight-team setup. The addition of two clubs—Los Angeles and Washington, with the original Senators switching to Minnesota, has resulted in an increase in the playing schedule to 162 from 154 games. The National League will expand to 20 teams in 1962.

Seven teams open with new managers, including Chicago Cubs' Vedie Himsl who have four coaches in lieu of a field leader. Ralph Houk makes his debut as New York Yankees pilot. Other new pilots include Alvin Dark at San Francisco, Bob Scheffing at Detroit, Joe Gordon at Kansas City, Mickey Vernon at Washington and Bill Rigney with the Dodgers at Los Angeles.

Absent from the baseball scene for the first time in 32 years, exclusive of the war years, will be Ted Williams, the great Boston Red Sox slugger. Returning, however, will be another Red Sox favorite, Jackie Jensen, after a year's layoff.

Shade Irish 2-1

Royals Grab 2-0 Lead

GUELPH (CP)—Guelph Royals took a 2-0 lead in the OHA Jr. A finals Friday night with a 3-1 win over St. Michael's College Majors before a sell out crowd of 4,215.

Goaltenders Denny Jordan of Guelph and St. Mikes' Jerry Demers each received many good scoring chances. Mike McMahon and Jean Ratelle scored for Guelph while Terry O'Malley counted for the Irish.

The teams battled through a scoreless first period. Guelph got the only goal of the second period at 2:44 left in the first third before St. Mikes tallied.

Billy Taylor and Paul Jackson became embroiled in a second period fight. Taylor was tossed from the game and Jackson got 20 minutes in penalties.

In the first period Guelph's Borden Smith was handed a major penalty for operating a cut on Barry McKendrick's head with a high stick. The Irish managed only five weak shots on the net during their advantage.

The Royals suffered what could be a severe blow when defenceman Al Lebrun, the team captain, crashed into the boards at high speed after tripping on some debris. He was taken to hospital with serious but undetermined injuries to the upper thigh.

PLAYERS CLASH

Taylor and Jackson clashed briefly in the second but were separated with Taylor making repeated attempts to get the St. Mikes player. His efforts drew him a 10 minute misconduct. On his way to the box he wrestled Jackson to the ice with the players from both teams joined in the fray. After several tries, Jackson and Taylor had a good swinging battle. Each received a double major and 10 minute misconducts with Taylor drawing a game misconduct.

A penalty to Andre Champagne for high-sticking gave McMahon a chance to open the scoring. Ratelle made it 2-0 in the third period.

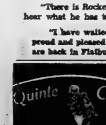
O'Malley on the Majors' only goal with his own team a man short at 9:46. He rushed the length of the ice, cut into centre and found a low corner with a wicked shot.

St. Mikes had a great chance when Guelph was two men short for over a minute but couldn't muster a consistent attack against the stalwart Guelph defence. St. Mikes pulled Cheevers with a minute to go but failed to score.

May Play Cup Final In Amherst

SIMCOE (CP) — The Allan Cup hockey final will be played in Nova Scotia, probably in Halifax, if Amherst Ramblers win the eastern Canada title, president Jack Roxburgh of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association said Friday.

Roxburgh said the final decision has not been made. Availability of a rink will be a factor.



Amherst still has to get past Galt Terriers for the right to represent the East in the battle for the cup, emblematic of the Canadian senior hockey championship.

The best-of-seven Eastern final will be played at Galt starting Monday, April 10. Succeeding games are April 11, 13, 15 and, if necessary, April 17, 19 and 20.

If the Terriers win, the all-Canada final will be played at Galt if ice is available, otherwise at Kitchener or Guelph.

Tied for Masters Lead

Player, Palmer Stage2-Man Show

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)—Arnold Palmer and Gary Player, two of golf's most brilliant performers, headed into the third round of the Masters tournament today as a virtual two-man show.

They were deadlocked for the lead and held a four-strokes margin over an apparently frustrated array of 36 other pros and three amateurs.

Palmer, defending champion, and Player, a South African who leads the list of money-winners on the United States touring trail this year, reached the halfway mark of the 72-hold tournament Friday with seven-under-par 137s.

The 180-pound player, dedicated to "give it a full go," was the only shooter on Augusta National's sunny, scenic acres who refused to concede that Palmer is regarded a notch to win an unprecedented second straight Masters and his third in four years.

HAS FIVE BIRDIES

Player salted the par - 72 layout with five birdies for a 68 round. Palmer had a 69.

Bobby Nichols, who Thursday matched Palmer's 68, wavered Friday to a 73. He was in third place at 144.

A stroke behind him was Don January, who rallied for a 69 from an opening 74 and moved into fourth spot with 145.

Fuzzy Zoeller had 146 and 149—cutoff point for the final 36 holes—were the players, among them three-time Masters champion Sam Snead and two-time winner Jack Burke, Jr. Snead and Hogan each had 147.

STRONGER WIND

Vancouver's Stan Leonard, who had 72 Thursday, shot a 74 in the second round. His 146 left him in a six-way tie for 15th place in the tournament.

Toronto's Al Balding got his second 74. His 148 left him in a three-way tie for 22nd spot.

Three other Canadian golfers failed to survive the cutoff. Amateur Keith Alexander, Calgary, had 152, Montreal pro Bill Kerr, with 151, and PGA Brownlee, Toronto amateur, 158.

Kingston Rink Win Over Orillia 11-9

TORONTO (CP) — Orillia's challengers for the Ontario Curling Association's Junior Tankard ran into trouble Friday as Kingston scored seven shots on the last two ends to win 11-9.

The Soo club, with the same skips, played last winter in the provincial schoolboys' final and Bert Cullum's rink from Kingston won the match 8-5.

For much of Friday's final at Toronto's Tam O'Shanter club, it appeared that Orillia and skip Dave Reynolds would even the trophy tally.

Dave Jenkin, Don Tisalgton, John Dick and Reynolds held a 5-1 lead. Later in the same game they were up 7-3 and 8-4.

But Cullum, whose rink included Gary Dover, Bert Vince and John Slater, made his final rock count for three on the eighth end, and, bit Reynolds with a four in the ninth.

The Training Camps

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The big mound guns of the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates are getting bombed these days, just when they should be getting a sharp edge for the National League baseball season opener.

No one gets overly concerned with exhibition games, but the Pirates have been having their troubles. And the 1961 campaign opens Tuesday.

Only Bob Friend has been consistently in command.

Philadelphia Phillies took up the attack Friday, scoring six runs off southpaw Harvey Haddix in the sixth inning and blasting the Bucs their third straight defeat, 7-4, at Wichita, Kan.

Camilo Pascual gave up only five hits for eight shutout innings as Minnesota Twins beat Detroit 1-0 at Lakeland, Fla. Gerry Staley was touched for a pair of home runs, but made it easily through seven innings as Cleveland Indians slugged Los Angeles Dodgers 8-3 at Las Vegas. Ike Delock of Boston let Red Sox allowed five hits and one run in seven innings for a 4-1 decision over Chicago Cubs at Houston, Tex.

Cincinnati Redlegs made it three wins in a row over Milwaukee Braves, 3-2 in 13 innings at Charlotte, N.C., and St. Louis Cardinals defeated New York Yankees 8-6 at St. Louis.

A two - run homer by Bob Malkmus was the big blow for the Phils against Haddix.

Pascual, bothered much of last season by a sore shoulder, bounced back several Tiger threats, three times relieving slugger Rocky Colavito with a runner on third base. The Twins scored in the eighth against rookie Jim Donohue when Gerry Versalles beat out a bunt, went to third on Lennie Green's double and came in on Harmon Killebrew's fly ball. Rookie Bill Fisla retired Detroit on three pitches in the ninth.

The Cards, trailing 6-3, scored five runs in the sixth against loser Danny McDevitt and Jim Coates on singles by Hal Smith, Alex Grammas and Julian Javier, a hit batter, two walks, an interference call and a wild pitch.

Ramos, tabbed as the Twins' starter in the American League opener on New York Tuesday, told manager Cookie Lavagetto he has volunteered his services to the forces opposed to Premier Fidel Castro and feels obligated to serve if called upon.

EXPECTS A BATTLE

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Featherweight champion Davey Moore is not underestimating relatively unknown Danny Valdez defending his world title tonight. Valdez, a current favorite with his hometown Mexican admirers, ranks in the top 10 of the world's featherweights. Stanley Cup or Corpse?

Picton Nips Warsaw 6-5 In Overtime

Picton Merchants blew an early 5-0 lead and had to go into the second overtime period on their home ice last night before edging Warsaw 6-5 in the deciding game of their OHA Junior "B" playdown series.

The Merchants took the series two games to one, after the clubs had deadlocked in an earlier best-of-seven set. Picton now meets Gananoque in the Ontario semi-finals with the first game in Gananoque Tuesday and the second game back in Picton next Thursday. Both games will start at 8.15 p.m. The series is a two-of-seven.

Sid Faulkner was the hero for the Picton boys, scoring the deciding marker at 2:19 of the sudden-death overtime period.

Picton had taken a commanding 5-0 lead in the first period but the scrappy Warsaw outfit battled back in the second beat and three times in the third to make it 5-5. They had Picton goalie Jim Gibbons to thank for a 16-year stay. He returned to the Hawks in the 1956-57 season and didn't play in 1957, at his Montreal home after a lengthy illness.

In 1934, the Hawks sipped champagne from the Cup after beating Detroit in the final. Their coach, Tommy Gorman, is still with the club. Canada's the old Maroons before the 1935 season got under way. Ironically enough, the Maroons beat that year.

Then, in 1938, Bill Stewart, an American in his first year as manager-coach of an NHL club, piloted the Hawks to a startling upset over Toronto. The NHL boss, a cigar-chewing character, Chicago was a sad third with a season's record of only 14 victories and nine ties to its credit, but allowed the Leafs only one win in the series. Stewart was fired mid-way through the next season.

In 1942, the Hawks entered the final in the manner of a team going to the gallows. That season were well-founded for Canadiens beat them four straight with Bert Gardiner doing the his nails behind the Hawk bench.

Thompson was around for the start of the 1956-39 season but soon gave way to Johnny Gottselig, now director of public relations for the team. Last, Gottselig has managed to stick around as a paid employee.

Pilous took over the Chicago job on Jan. 1, 1958. The perennial last-place Hawks, bolstered by a steady stream of big-league talent, under the able manager Tommy Ivan, have been on the upgrade since.

CALLS STELECTIONS

FREDERICTON (CP) — Premier Robichaud announced in the legislature Friday night that byelections will be held in Carleton and Northumberland counties June 19. Nomination day is June 5.

D. Moore Favored in Title Bout

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Davey Valdez, who a few months ago was a little known outside his neighborhood in the shabby side of East Los Angeles, takes aim at a golden boxing target tonight.

Valdez, 21 and with only 22 professional fights to his record, takes on titleholder Davey Moore for the world featherweight championship.

The 3-to-1 odds and most experts say Valdez won't hit the jackpot, that 27-year-old Moore, from Springfield, Ohio, is too experienced to lose the scheduled 15 - round battle for the 126-pound crown.

The match will not be televised or broadcast. The promoters hope for a crowd of 7,000 and a $40,000 gate.

Retired Army General Takes Slap at Harkness, Foulkes

WINNIPEG (CP) — A retired Canadian Army general took a slap Friday night at Defence Minister Harkness and Gen. Charles Foulkes, former chairman of the chiefs of staff committee.

Maj.-Gen. W. H. S. Mackin, former adjutant-general, said Mr. Harkness has accused anyone who does criticize defence policy as being "anti-American, or neutralist, or pacifist, or even maybe blood-red Communist."

He said in a speech to the Winnipeg Press Club that "misguided ministers" would "do better if they could defend their policy with sensible, logical arguments, instead of trashing the motives of those who disagree."

Gen. Mackin accused Gen. Foulkes, also retired, of making a "fallacious and pernicious" argument in favor of nuclear weapons for Canada's armed forces.

"It is a complete misrepresentation to call a nuclear bomb a mere enlargement of the old type," Gen. Macklin said.

The general, a persistent critic of both Liberal and Progressive Conservative defence policies the last few years, said Gen. Foulkes "must bear a large share of responsibility" for Canadian participation in North American Air Defence Command.

"NORAD has been a hopeless attempt to project the methods of the Battle of Britain into the age of rockets and megaton bombs," Gen. Mackin said.

"Not one American or Canadian sleeps safer in bed because of NORAD, which is without doubt a useless military instrument, benefiting only the vested interests in the air forces and the huge industry that feeds greedily upon it.

"It will be of no military value to put nuclear warheads on Bomarc missiles because NORAD as a whole is militarily impotent and Bomarc won't change that."

CONSTITUTION

one province. Applications from groups with membership confined to one province would be made to the provincial party.

The constitution, in stating that the individual membership fee shall not be less than $2.50 a year, also provides that provincial party may establish a lower family membership plan. Under the plan the second and each additional member of a family may be less than $2.50 but not less than $1 a year.

The provincial party would pay to the national party $1 out of each $2.50 individual membership fee. Where a joint family membership plan is in effect, it would pass along 50 cents of the fee for the second and each additional family member.

Balance of the membership fee would be distributed between the provincial party and the constituency association.

The distribution of the five cents-a-month fees from affiliated members would be three cents to the national party and two to the provincial party.

The organizing committee said provincial parties will have a broad range of autonomy. Room has been left for the organization of a youth section.

The national leader elected by the national convention would in turn be the leader of the party in the Commons.

The constitution leaves the name of the New Party blank. The committee said it may make a recommendation from among many that have been submitted, or it could be proposed from the convention floor.

The constitution requires that a national convention be held every two years. It would be "the supreme governing body of the party, and shall have final authority in all matters of provincial and federal programs."

The constitution, result of study of suggestions from many individuals and groups, was drafted by a committee composed of Donald MacDonald, secretary-treasurer of the CLC; Allan Hamilton, the CCF's national secretary; Roger Provost, president of the Quebec Federation of Labor, and Ken Bryden, CCF member of the Ontario legislature for Toronto Woodbine.

1ST TROOP CENTENARY

Centenary Boy Scouts 1st Troop held their competition shoot at the Bellville Armouries on Saturday morning, April 1st. The senior team used small targets and .22 rifles and consisted of six boys, Grant Hancock, Rod Bennett, Merle Christopher, Vernon Christy, Wayne Maskalyk and Frank Cummins. The winner of this event was Merle Christopher. Congratulations, Merle, from all of us.

The junior team, using a larger target and .22 rifles, consisted of three boys, Brook Windsor, James Haighway and Wesley May.

The winner of this event was Brook Windsor who is to be congratulated on a fine performance. To all the boys on these teams we would like to say we are very pleased that the shooting by each one of you is showing remarkable improvement, and your committee feels sure each will be wearing his marksmanship badge in a short time.

UNDELIVERABLE DAMAGE

After the first day or so the Keys were pretty much forgotten but the unbelievable destruction in these islands was not a thing to be mentioned casually and dismissed. Actually, it was frightful. Fortunately, only one death was recorded — that of Mrs. Burk Greene (more of that in a later story) this low mortality rate, no doubt is the ample and timely warnings which were broadcast and newspapers. Let me give you some of the highlights.

The home of my old friend and guide, Capt. Rollie Hollenbeck, was lifted from its foundation, rolled, tumbled, and settled clear across Upper Matecumbe Key, to lodge in the mangroves to the west of the island. His cruiser, temporarily on its trailer in the rear of the house, suffered a like fate.

His boathouse was obliterated in the mangroves up around Cowpens; his wife, daughter, dog, rods, and clothing (which they could load into their car, were Rollie's sole possessions after the hurricane had passed.

My other guide and buddy, Capt. Bill Mann, saved his car, his two boats (also secured in the mangroves) and some clothing. His mobile home, a 45-foot job, became quickly immobilized under a pile of three other trailers, completely ruined.

On Windleys Key, the Atlantic side of Islamorada, Craig Key, Greyhound Key, the Tahiti Key; Conch, on down to Marathon, houses were decapitated, gutted, or completely demolished. Ted Williams' house suffered much damage, casting the loss of his prized trophies.

In Tavernier my friend, Charley Dean, returned to find a seagoing tanker turned landgoing in his front yard. The Theatre of the Sea lost all of its tarpon pools, as practically all its trained porpoises, its seal, quite tame, turned up in Manitou Springs and squalling for food. Well-meaning residents fed it sardines but it refused hours to return to its home grounds and a full meal of mullet.

In Tavernier the owner of a beauty shop and her husband took a pig, a 300-pound porker. So far as we know it is the only pig on the Keys. Before the blow, the pig was stalled into a large crate for safe keeping. When the first rush of wind rushed over lower Key Largo the pig and its crate went with it. Naturally it was given up for lost—Four days later the pig was home again, demanding food and evidently unhurt. How it escaped from its crate and survived remains a mystery.

Over in Everglades, Capt. Bob Thompson and his girl friend, Miss Clara, sat out the hurricane in his cruiser, Snooky, back in the mangroves. Bob told me that when he tied the boat in one of the back-country rivers he had a lot of protection from high black and red mangroves. When the blow was over, every high tree had vanished. He could stand on the deck and look at unobstructed view out to the horizon of the Gulf.

FEMININE INCONSISTENCY

One of Donna's peculiarities was her typical feminine inconsistency. She was very fussy about the things that could be demolished completely; the one sent to it would agitate over minor damage. Actually, here and there throughout the storm proper would be smaller storms, tornadoes. Wheels within wheels. These smaller twisters simply took out anything that was luckless enough to be in the way.

Of course, all of the junk on Upper Matecumbe Key — and there were countless tons of it — was carted to the town dump. That is really something to see. Piles upon piles of smashed trailers, boats, outboard motors, refrigerators, stoves, beds, mattresses lie there in silent testimony of what had happened.

Today, unless you knew the Keys and knew them well, you'd not a thing to be mentioned casually and dismissed. Actually, it was frightful. Fortunately, only one death was recorded — that of Mrs. Burk Greene (more of that in a later story) this low mortality rate, no doubt is the ample and timely warnings which were broadcast and newspapers. Let me give you some of the highlights.

The fishing docks have been rebuilt and the skippers are booking parties as usual. Rollie Hollenbeck has built a new house, a site east of the state road. Bill Mann has a new trailer, a luxurious one. Business is picking up about as usual.

We have been coming here every winter since 1948. We know a great many of these people and we have talked to most of them. The way they have gone about undoing Donna's damage, taking things philosophically, and putting in countless weary hours of hard,

The Fly Rod Makes a Comeback

Last August 30 reports reached the Miami Weather Bureau concerning a minor weather disturbance in Cape Verde Islands, about three hundred miles from Dakar, Africa.

The Miami Bureau has learned to regard any weather disturbance with high suspicion. This one was no exception. Gradually the disturbance grew and as it did so it was christened Donna.

By Monday, Sept. 5th, after considerable destruction it seemed obvious that Donna was aimed squarely at the Florida Keys. Ample warnings were broadcast; people boarded up windows, tied down and reinforced their boats to the partial security of the deep mangroves.

Number One Highway was jammed with northbound traffic as many residents sought the safety of the mainland.

On September 9th, at around 10:00 p.m., Donna struck the Keys with all of her accumulated fury. The center or "eye" of the hurricane passed through somewhere between Islamorada and Key Largo, probably around Craig Key. Hurricanes in the northern hemisphere revolve counter clockwise. On Key Largo the winds, known to have exceeded 160 m.p.h., and estimated to have topped the 200 m.p.h. mark, came from the East. In Marathon the other edge of the severe storm brought wind from the West, the houses on the Gulf side suffering the most severe damage.

Of course, a great deal of newspaper space was devoted to Donna as she veered to a northeasterly direction and headed her havoc deals along the entire length of the Atlantic Seaboard.

Is Robert Horton Being Eased Out of Wagon Train?

By BOB THOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Is Wagon Train getting a new scout?

Probably not now. Eventually, yes. That's the way the situation looks this week out on the trail to Universal City.

A trade paper printed that Robert Horton was being dropped from the high - ranking TV hour. Both he and his Revue bosses said they knew nothing about the report.

"I have one more season to go with Wagon Train, and I have every intention of carrying out my contract," said Horton. "That's behind me negotiations are still going on. If it does pull out, we can't develop a new scout in two or three weeks. We are introducing a new character — just as the grass doesn't grow under our feet."

The new boy is called Scott Miller. As Denny Miller he starred in basketball and Tarzan the Ape Man. Charlie Flint, the switching Miller from the jungle to the prairie, "in case Bob Horton abandons ship."

Said the producer: "Miller will be with Wagon Train all year to learn all phases of the Wagon Train."

Horton views the situation realistically: "Naturally if you're going to leave, they're going to ease you out of the series. I've known they were creating a new guy; it was rumored Ward Bond died. But my relations with them are pretty strained. In fact, they have been very good lately."

AT THE PARK — Clint Perreau and Lou Costello sing a duet in the laugh riot "Comedy With No Name," which is showing tonight and Monday at the Park Theatre. Also on the same program in Technicolor "Alias Jesse James", starring Bob Hope and Rhonda Fleming. A Three Stooges comedy is also shown.

SARDONYX "GIRL OF THE MAN

Sparkling with flip and saucy dialogue and a story line that moves in and out of the boudoir as it picks up a trail of hot clues, "Come Dance With Me!" starring Brigitte Bardot, is based on the Kelley Roos novel, "The Blonde Died Dancing".

Due Monday at the Park Theatre in Eastmancolor, the new film impishly mixes suspense, comedy and sex. A Kingsley International Release, it also co-stars Dawn Addams and Walter Slezak in a cast of outstanding players.

Directed by Michel Boisrond who directed Brigitte Bardot in "La Parisienne", "Come Dance With Me!" is in Francis Coene production.

In the film, Brigitte is an amateur sleuth who puts on the gum shoes to unearth clues which would indicate that the man she loves did not commit a murder. To get the goods on the real killer Brigitte joins a dance studio as an instructress, which is a break for the students and the audience.

The added attraction "Three Blondes In His Life" starring Jack Mahoney and Greta Tryssenet, is a murder mystery full of thrill and excitement.

By CARROLL RIGHTER
Sunday, April 9, 1961

General Tendencies: This early Sunday morning finds you tied down to gaining some constructive plan under which to operate in the days to come. Be basic in your plans. Then the rest of the week-end might finds a big test for you to see if you are on the right trend and if so, you advance very swiftly but if not, big obstacles loom to give you chance to retrench.

Aries (March 21 to April 19)—Make it a point to be of greater service to loved ones in A.M.—ones who deserve it. Follow your better judgment during the remainder of the day when dealing with others, not your intuition, which is apt to be faulty.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20)—Be sure you go to services of your choice in a.m. or read uplifting literature. Later in the day, an upset associate may give you trouble, and a hunch up will come to your rescue — be grateful for assistance. P.M. write early.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21)—You get into the so-called silly for awhile this morning. You will get fine hunches that will be helpful to you in your associations with others. Later, you may be confused where your work is concerned, but key people assist you muchly.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 23) — Pay particular attention to the ideas of your mate who has proven loyal. Later, carry through with expert's ideas and don't be wasting time on worthless pleasures. And you keep that purse zippered if you want to get ahead in the future!

Leo (July 24 to Aug. 23)—Attend to all duties in the very early morning. Later, be sure you get to church, services. Steer clear of that family tie who is upset about something and gets on your nerves. Join with persons of talent and watch Expand.

Virgo (Aug. 24 to Sept. 22)—Good cheer in a.m. so that your own kith family ties who are upset. Later, also live in such a way that you become an inspiration to others, but be most careful while out driving if there can be a serious accident.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—Listen to the fine ideas of a fellow member of the clan in a.m. Later, get out with confidentials for a carefree Sunday. Be generous and full of fun and this can be a most memorable day.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—Watch a slightly over level of confidentiousness this morning so that you live your life on a more successful and happy plane. Evening is then fine for reaching greater rapport with family and avoiding that greedy associate. Be joyful.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21)—Cooperate within those standards which you have found to be most successful if you want to solve current problems wisely. Evening will then be free for leisure or taking a little trip, seeing friends, etc., or for study.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20)—Get up a bit earlier than usual and be sure you go to services of your choice in a.m. or read uplifting literature. Later in the day, an upset associate may give you trouble, and a hunch up will come to your rescue — be grateful for assistance. P.M. write early.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)—Determine to live the Golden Rule in the future so that you can become far more successful. However, don't waste time expounding your new ideas to others who are not interested. Get about socially and relax while having fun.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20)—Since a good comrade will give fine ideas later how to advance in your career, be sure you know exactly what it is you want to accomplish. Raise your level of consciousness and be practical in your plans. Don't be frivolous.

If your child is born today — there will be a sound mind and a healthy body here so that practical duties can be learned and applied very quickly. However, you must teach your progeny to have respect for others and be helpful to them, otherwise the fine potential in this chart will not be realized, since co-operation and altruism thoughtfully practiced are the first tools of success. Give the benefit of a fine education.

Monday, April 10

General Tendencies: Dramatic changes are now possible if you will accept an opportunity now presenting new avenues in a more imaginative and expansive light instead of holding on to the same old dreary outlets in the same way. It is essential that you do now take the best from the past and combine with the New Age inventions, ideas.

Aries (March 21 to April 19)—You can certainly put over your ideas throughout this day and evening, provided that you stick to matters of policy. Think big, then get the help from all associates. Evening is fine for relaxation and fun as you see fit.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20)—The ideal day to get in touch with that powerful individual and express your constructive ideas and plans. Important as you confide in and get approval of family ties, too. P.M. Step out on the town and have a fine time. Be gay.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21)—You can become far more successful now if you ally yourself with those whose experience and ideas are more developed and trust them your envy. If you are broad-minded and kind, you will find that you can make really big strides forward.

Moon Children (June 22 to July 23) — Now is the time to look for that advisor who can best assist you to handle that problem of long standing but that is of vital importance. Try novel methods suggested. Take it easy in P.M. and ride your favorite hobbies. Be happy.

Leo (July 24 to Aug. 23)—The right day to know what your true relative position is with all those whose current or constructive plans become the persons who can be of assistance to you. Get the co-operation of new friends who are willing to help now.

Virgo (Aug. 24 to Sept. 22)—Delve into all work awaiting you with enthusiasm and the most efficient best, then you get excellent results. Take time tonight to entertain your fellow-workers who have been so loyal and get greater co-operation in the future.

Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22)—This can be a most happy and enjoyable day for you. First be sure you plan your activities wisely, then keep appointments methodically and be successful in all that you start out to do.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21)—You can quickly handle any problems at home wisely if you think of the needs and wants of your family. Later, try better systems of operating so that you can achieve a far greater abundance than has been possible in the past.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) — If you study your paper or other periodicals wisely, you can acquire all that information you want at this time. Later, get together with associates and make concrete plans for the future that are more practical. Be alert.

Capricorn (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) — Have you taken inventory of your possessions and assets and know exactly what your liabilities are? If not, do so now. Get all wrapped in a more practical fashion than has been possible in the past. Learn to economize.

Aquarius (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19)—If you really know what you want and it will be to your benefit, this is the right day to go after it and be successful in your efforts. Associates fine time to merge with partners toward a more prosperous future. Be canny.

Pisces (Feb. 20 to March 20)—Since you prefer to plan ahead, no matter how small the venture, be sure you are more modern in mode of operation, however. Then you can achieve a really big success and everything will work like lightning and clockwork.

If your child is born today ... be, or she, will be the type of fascinating youngster who in mature life will get ahead very quickly because of the love of people in this chart. Others will quickly co-operate with your progeny and extend a helping hand when needed. Teach your youngster early to look at things in an objective way for best results. Wonderful chart for any profession where the need of the human touch is apparent. A real pioneer here.
